Third Effort At Rescuing Fliers Fails As Line Parts

Glider Is Raised 50 Feet With All 10 or 11 Men Aboard Before Accident

The Air Force reported last night that a third attempt to rescue stranded fliers in Greenland failed when a towline broke after the rescue glider with the stranded men aboard had been lifted 50 feet into the air.

None of the 10 or 11 fliers was injured in the near-successful rescue attempt, an Air Force spokesman said. He said another try will be made today.

The Air Force spokesman said the wooden glider, dropped to the stranded fliers Friday, was successfully snatched from the icecap in yesterday's attempt. The safety link in the towline broke, however, and the glider was forced to land again on the ice.

All the marooned fliers were aboard when the line broke, the spokesman said.

He said temperature on the icecap yesterday was reported to be "40 below" by the stranded fliers.

The Air Force said that, in yesterday's rescue attempt, the stranded men removed the wheels from the glider so that its belly could be used as a sled. In two unsuccessful rescue tries Friday, the wheels made the glider "nose up" when a transport plane tried to snatch it off the icecap.

Authorities said that, when it is successfully launched, the glider will be towed to Bluie West One in Greenland, home base of the transport.

The Air Force said the 10 or 11 men stranded atop the 7700-foot icecap in wintry Greenland were last reported in good spirits and excellent health.

Food, clothing, heaters and fuel have been dropped to them by parachute. Seven of the fliers have been marooned since December 9, when their C-47 crash-landed.

Two others joined them four days later when their B-17 cracked up in a rescue effort. At least one man—a glider pilot—was added to the group Friday when rescue efforts failed.

It was believed probable a second man was aboard the rescue glider. The Air Force said a glider "snatch" usually takes two trained men to pull off.

At St. Johns, Newfoundland, meanwhile, the Air Force made public the names of seven of the stranded fliers. Five of the original seven who crash-landed December 9 were listed as:

Lieut. James D. Prevost, Narsarssuak, Greenland, the pilot; Lieut. Robert MacDonald, Bridgeport, W. Va., copilot; Sergt. Francis Summers, West Manadunk, Pa.; F. J. Duffy, Windsor, Conn., engineer, and Capt. Walter F. Speakman Narsarssuak, Greenland, a passenger.

Names of two others in the original party were not disclosed because of illness in their families.

The two men who joined the stranded group four days later in the crash of their rescue plane were identified as Lieut. Charles Ferguson, Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and Lieut. Louis A. Lane, Narsarssuak.

Contract Dispute Closes Port of Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Dec. 18 (AP) — The Port of Philadelphia was closed down today as the result of a new contract dispute between the Philadelphia Marine Trade Association and members of the International Longshoremen's Union.

Employers called the stoppage the result of a wildcat strike against a selected group of stevedoring companies. Union spokesmen said it was a lockout which, so far as they knew, had no justification.

Walter S. Oberholtzer, trade association president, said the contract dispute involves a clause which guarantees union members a minimum of four hours work in the morning and two hours in the afternoon.

13 Die, 40 Hurt As Two Buses Crash, Burn

Straight, Icy Stretch Of Highway Is Scene Of Wreck in Utah

Delle, Utah, Dec. 18 (AP).—Two Burlington Trailways buses crashed and burned on a bleak, western Utah highway today, killing 13 persons.

State highway patrol authorities said an estimated 40 to 50 passengers were injured.

Officers said late tonight these victims have been identified:

Daniel W. Eggers, Salt Lake City, driver of the eastbound bus.

Sherry Ann Cook, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cook, Gold Hill, Utah.

Mrs. Catherine Hendricks, 63, Akron, Colo.

Mrs. Inez Magionos, about 60, Elko, Nev.

Officers said three of the dead were women, two quite young. The other nine were men.

The accident occurred about 12:20 p. m. (MST) on a straight stretch of windswept highway 6 miles west of Delle and 63 miles west of Salt Lake City.

State highway patrolmen said 12 bodies were taken from the wreckage. Mrs. Catherine Hendricks, 63, of Akron, Ohio, died several hours later in a Salt Lake City hospital.

The charred wreckage was so tangled officers said they had not determined what caused the accident. They said they believed one of the buses may have skidded on the icy pavement.

The 12 shrouded bodies alongside the highway had been burned, some to a black crisp. Sheriff C. A. Hymas said identification would be difficult.

He added that identification tags were found on some of the bodies, apparently those of military personnel.

The driver of the eastbound bus, D. W. Eggers of Salt Lake City, was killed, bus company officials said. Driver of the westbound bus, Charles Harris, also of Salt Lake City, escaped serious hurts but was cut and burned.

"Our bus seemed to just burst open, throwing me part of the way out," said Pfc. Joe Wilson, 23, of Wichita, Kans., an occupant of the eastbound bus.

"Everyone was too stunned at first to move. By the time I got to the other bus it was too hot to help get people out.

Hopes Dwindle For D. C. Float On Suffrage

Barron, Who Opposes 'Controversial' Types, May Have Final Say

Hopes of local Democratic leaders that the city's inaugural float would point up Washington's voteless state appeared doomed yesterday.

Melvin D. Hildreth, the 1949 Inaugural Committee chairman, indicated final say on the type of float the District will have in next month's parade lies with Carter Barron, chairman of the inaugural parade committee.

And Barron has made it clear he doesn't want any "controversial" floats in the parade. Any play on the District's voteless status would be too "political," he said.

Barron pointed out that some of the States might—if partisan floats were okayed—come up with some political hot potatoes. South Carolina, for example, might send in a States' rights entry.

The District Democratic Central Committee had hoped to be represented by a float stressing the suffrage issue. About 10 days ago, the committee met and voted to underwrite a float costing about $1000. Members also agreed that the float should play up the suffrage question.

Several days later, Gerhard Van Arkel, local attorney who was named to head the Central Committee's float committee, had in his possession rough plans for a float featuring a locked ballot box and the legend, "Freedom to

25 Natal Natives Die in Rifle, Spear Clash of 1000

Weenen, Natal, South Africa, Dec. 18 (UP).—Twenty-five natives were killed today in a wild spear and rifle fight involving 1000 Natal tribesmen.

The clash occurred at Ogwenya, near Weenen, between members of the M'cunu and M'tembu Tribes, who have been fighting intermittently for two months since a dispute during a marriage feast.

At the same time, reports from Swaziland, on the southeast coast, said that a party of tourists, including Quentin Keynes of New York City, was manhandled by belligerent natives.

Condition 'Up a Peg'

64 More Square Inches of Skin Grafted to Rector Boy's Body

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Surgeons grafted 64 square inches of temporary skin to 3-year-old Michael Rector's burn-tortured body yesterday at Casualty Hospital in a "definitely successful" operation.

Becraft

The youngster didn't stand the delicate surgery quite as well as the previous skin graftings, but now most of the burned area—which covers 70 per cent of his body—has been sealed with the "lifesaving" skin. And his condition has moved up a peg from critical to serious.

For the rest of their lives, the two men who have donated skin to the boy will bear scars where it was peeled off. In two previous operations, the lad's father, Everett Rector, furnished 160 square inches of skin. Yesterday it was a 31-year-old beer salesman, George Becraft, who made the sacrifice for the boy because doctors refused to remove more skin from the father.

The hospital began preparing for the operation before 7 a. m. yesterday, according to the surgeon. Then they wheeled Becraft in, gave him a general anesthetic, and stripped two rectangular pieces of skin from his body, one from the inside of each thigh. It took 40 minutes.

Then, the surgeon said, they removed Becraft and brought young Michael in, and put him under anesthetic. The two pieces, each 4 by 8 inches, and .015 inch thick,

D. C. Pay Rise To Get Action In Congress

Senators McGrath And Taft Promise Consideration Early in Session

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The drive to win a $330 pay raise for District employes won a promise of early consideration from the new Congress last night from a top Democratic and a top Republican Senate leader.

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the Democratic National Committee and an active member of the Senate District Committee, said he would urge that legislation to "do justice" to the city government workers be taken up "just as promptly as we can."

"It is a great discrimination," McGrath added. "We should take care of these people who missed the boat last June when all classified Federal workers and postal employes got their pay raises."

On the Republican side of Capitol Hill, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), present chairman of the GOP Steering Committee, had this word for the city's 17,000 workers:

"District employes are certainly entitled to the same raise that the others received and a way must be worked out to see that they get it."

Taft said that revenue to finance the pay boost "should be found in the next session rather than on the last day."

It was recalled that District pay raises failed on adjournment day when Senator Olin Johnston (D., S. C.) filibustered to death a proposed District sales tax after Senator Harry Cain (R., Wash.) tied the pay raise to the tax.

The legislation which finally passed the Eightieth Congress granted a $330 raise to classified Federal workers and $460 to postal employes.

Agitation for the D. C. pay boost recently has been picking up support from many other quarters.

Representatives of Government unions who testified last week before a Senate Civil Service subcommittee on legislation to raise salaries of top Federal officials almost unanimously stumped for inclusion of a District workers' raise in the bill.

Paper Says Soviet Evicts French In Berlin Village

Berlin, (Sunday) Dec. 13 (AP).—The British-licensed newspaper Telegraf said today the Russians had requested the French to evacuate the village of Stolpe, in the French sector of Berlin, and that the French had complied.

The report could not be confirmed officially immediately.

Russian troops were reported to have reoccupied the village, which has a population of about 1000.

The French were said to have taken horses and cattle with them, leaving what had been there when they took over in 1945. Telegraf said lootings had been reported after the evacuation.

Stolpe was originally part of the Russian occupation zone but was incorporated in the French sector by agreement in 1945.

The reported Russian request was regarded here, if true, as retaliatory action for demolition by French engineers Thursday of Soviet-controlled Berlin radio towers in the French sector.

Three Suspects Seized

Plot to Flood Charles Town With Bogus Bills Is Thwarted

Three men believed connected with a big counterfeit ring were arrested at the Charles Town, W. Va., race track yesterday in an alleged plot to flood the track with bogus $10 bills on the closing day of the racing meet.

Counterfeit $10 bills were reported to have been found on two of the men. The third was said to be a track habitue who had sent a telegram earlier in the 18-day meeting, advising that the last day of the races would be "good pickings" for bogus bill "pushers."

The arrests were described as the result of a trap set by track officials in cooperation with West Virginia State police, Charles Town city police and an FBI agent on duty in that area. The trap was reportedly laid after track officials allegedly received a tip from an undisclosed source that a counterfeit ring would try to make a killing on the closing day.

Details of the case were kept a closely guarded secret until the arrival there of a Secret Service agent dispatched from the Treasury Department here late yesterday.

It was reported, nevertheless, that the three arrests were made by the race track police after only one counterfeit $10 bill had been passed. The bill was tendered at a $2 bet window just before the first race. The man presenting it got his $8 in change and departed. But his every move from then on is said to have been watched by track policemen or West Virginia State policemen in civilian clothes, and cashiers at every window were alerted.

Just before the second race, two men are said to have presented the same kind of a bogus $10 note at two separate windows. They were ushered quietly to the track police office and searched. One of them reportedly had 15 of the cleverly counterfeited bills in his pockets. The other, it was said, had no money except the one bogus bill he allegedly tried to pass.

Neither of the men, it was reported, had a single genuine piece of currency on him. The two were questioned throughout the second, third and fourth races while window cashiers waited to see if any more fake notes would show up. None did, so the net was thrown around the third suspect. The three suspects then were taken to the city jail to await arrival of a Secret Service agent.

One observer said the attempt to pass the counterfeit money would have been less amateurish if they had bought $10 tickets on each horse in each race, thus insuring real cash returns on an investment of nothing, instead of going to a $2 window and asking for change.

The Secret Service recently disclosed that they were tracking down two rings which were flooding cities in the East with bogus $10 and $20 bills.

Dutch Bomb Java Capital, Land on Coast in Invasion; Chinese Nationals Fall Back

Nanking, Dec. 18 (AP).—A general government retreat was reported in progress today from the broken Hwai River line to positions little more than 30 miles north of this Chinese capital.

Pengpu, anchor of the line, 108 miles northwest of Nanking, had been outflanked on both sides by Communists who crossed the river.

Gen. Liu Tze, government commander on that front, already had drawn his headquarters back from Pengpu to Chuhsien, 30 miles north of the Yangtze, which now is Nanking's last natural defense barrier.

Dispatches from Peiping said gunfire broke out heavily Saturday night less than 3 miles from the southwestern corner of the walls after 24 hours of foreboding calm.

Gen. Fu Tso-yi's Peiping headquarters acknowledged that the Fengtai railway yards, 3½ miles from the walls, are in Red hands.

Seymour Topping, Associated Press correspondent in Pengpu, reported tonight that train movements south of Pengpu already had become scanty after heavy traffic for 48 hours.

He said this indicated that the fallback from the Hwai already had been virtually completed. In addition, he noted the sudden absence of southbound wounded indicated that the Nationalists had lost contact with the Communists.

Reds Reported Crossing River

Latest word from the few sources remaining in Pengpu was that Communist columns had crossed to the south side of the Hwai in strength west of Pengpu.

There were no figures, but the Communist designation of "column" usually means about 15,000 men, so it plural usage would indicate 30,000 or more had made the crossing.

Two Communist columns previously had crossed the Hwai about 40 miles east of Pengpu.

Topping reported that Pengpu might remain nominally in government hands for some time, but the old Communist bypassing tactics evidently had worked again. Suggestive of the government attitude, Topping reported a company of light tanks on flatcars from the north rolled right on through Pengpu, hurrying south without stopping.

Fully a third of Pengpu's 300,000 population had fled with the retreating army.

The railway south of Pengpu was cut by Communist saboteurs at four places during the night, but was repaired again. This has become almost a nightly occurrence.

Topping predicted the break would become permanent whenever the Communists chose to move against the route.

Traffic northward from Pukow, Nanking's railway station on the north bank of the Yangtze, was reported moving regularly only as far as Chuhsien, the new headquarters.

Not a single Nanking paper carried any word of the retreat. Instead, the official Central News

Truman Said to Have Asked If Chiang Plans to Resign

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek (right) is pictured as he conferred in Shanghai December 12 with ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman

Shanghai, Dec. 18 (UP).—A reliable source said today that President Truman in effect has asked Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek whether he has considered resigning.

The source, who holds an official position in the Chinese government and is in close contact with the United States Embassy, said the President raised the question in a letter replying to Chiang's appeal for more American aid.

Chiang has met all suggestions that he resign with a flat rejection. He is said to feel that if he resigns, the Nationalist fight against communism would collapse.

But there is mounting evidence the generalissimo is willing to delegate powers to the cabinet.

His granting carte-blanche to Gen. Fu Tso-Yi in North China and the widest possible latitude to Dr. Sun Fo in forming his cabinet is evidence of this change in attitude.

An authoritative source said Sun had succeeded in forming a "war cabinet" and that it would be announced Sunday. This source said the cabinet was agreed on during a five-hour conference with Chiang in which the generalissimo persuaded top Kuomintang leaders to cooperate.

No mention was made of Vice President Li Teung-jen, who is believed a potential successor if Chiang is forced out.

Russia to Join New Effort on Austria Treaty

London, Dec. 18 (AP).—Russia agreed today to take part in a new effort to write a peace treaty for Austria.

The next move seemed to be up to the United States, whose representative was acting as chairman when the last four-power meetings on the subject ended without result.

[The United Press reported that State Department officials said talks on an Austrian peace treaty can be resumed at an early date. They said the United States will convene the meeting as soon as formal notification arrives.]

All of the big four powers—the United States, Britain, France and Russia—have agreed now that negotiations should be resumed.

The talks over Austria's future

Dead Put at 600 In Brazil Floods; Famine Is Feared

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 18 (AP).—Rain continued falling for the seventeenth day today on flood-ravaged areas of Rio de Janeiro and Minas Gerais States.

Morning newspapers estimated the death toll now had reached 600. Officials have announced the recovery of 310 bodies. Seven thousand persons have been made homeless and more than 1000 have been injured.

The survivors, many of them huddled in the hills, face the threat of disease and starvation.

Trouble Likely, Says Almond

Religion Classes in Virginia Suspected of Violating Law

Richmond, Va., Dec. 18.—Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond tonight said he "suspects" some Virginia counties may be violating the law in their released-time religious instruction programs.

"It's very probable that we'll run into some trouble," he said.

Almond's comment followed the filing of a petition with the school board of Henrico County by 14 women of Jewish faith protesting the released-time program in the schools.

Approximately 44 of Virginia's 100 counties have the released-time program. It is sponsored by the County Councils of Religious Education which, Almond said, represent a number of churches and denominations.

Almond said he had studied the Supreme Court ruling in the famous McCollum case and did not believe Virginia schools were in violation of this ruling by providing school rooms for the religious instruction.

He said, however, he had advised the counties the classes must be nonsectarian, noncompulsory, nonsupervised by the schools and unsupported in any way by public funds and that teachers should take no part in asking parents if they wished their children to attend.

"This, I believe, in no way conflicts with the Supreme Court ruling in the McCollum case or with the Virginia constitution, said Almond.

"However, I suspect that in some counties they have gone beyond that line and may be in conflict with the Supreme Court ruling."

Virginia's Attorney General said he does not have the authority to police the released-time program. He was asked who could challenge its legality.

"Any citizen," said Almond, who

Papers Show Spies Shared State Secrets

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Whittaker Chambers knew, early in 1938, just what had been said in confidential diplomatic talks in Europe shortly before Hitler invaded and annexed Austria.

He knew what Hitler had said to Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg of Austria in their fateful interview of February 12, 1938, at Berchtesgaden.

He knew what Austrian, French and Belgian diplomats thought about the situation. And he knew what American diplomats abroad were reporting, in coded messages, to Secretary Hull and the State Department.

Seven more of the documents in Chambers' possession were released last night by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. They cover a four-day period in February, 1938, just three weeks

Hague Denounces Truce, Proclaims Stopgap Regime, Ignores U. S. Advice

From Press Dispatches

Batavia, Java (Sunday), Dec. 19.—The Dutch-Indonesian war was on again today.

Netherlands air and land forces went into action against the Republic of Indonesia after Netherlands officials denounced the truce which had been in effect since January 17.

The Republic announced that Dutch airplanes bombed Jogjakarta, the Republican capital, today. Jogjakarta is in south central Java, about 200 miles east of Batavia.

The Republican government, in an official radio statement, said a Dutch invasion of Indonesian territory began at dawn.

The Indonesian radio announcement said Dutch amphibious forces had made a landing on the north-central coast of Java. It said Dutch planes, including two-engine, B-25 medium bombers were attacking Jogjakarta and an airfield more than four hours after the military action began. The broadcast described the Dutch action as a violation of the truce and of human rights.

The Netherlands government at The Hague had officially proclaimed a new stopgap government in its area of Indonesia yesterday morning. A foreign office spokesman followed this with announcement that:

"The Netherlands government felt itself regretfully obliged to undertake police action against terrorist and undisciplined elements in the republic who render any constructive policy impossible."

Although the offensive reportedly had started, there were no reports from the 42 U. N. representatives grouped in 10 truce teams throughout the island.

Dutch troops seized Republican headquarters in Batavia and arrested numerous Republican representatives here, including Dr. Darmasetiawan, the official emissary. Otherwise this city was quiet.

The United Press said an official Dutch spokesman at Batavia announced that Dutch troops had gone into action. No details were given. Dutch High Commissioner Louis Beel invoked immediate censorship of all press dispatches.

Later Beel took to the radio to explain that his government had denounced the truce because "no peaceful solution proves possible" under it.

Beel accused the Indonesians of repeatedly violating the truce and said his government had found further negotiations senseless.

At Washington, it was learned that the Dutch acted in spite of American advice and warnings not to resort to force. The American attitude, made clear to the Dutch both in Washington and The Hague, was that the surest way to stimulate communism in southeast Asia was to start military operations.

Strenuous efforts had been made by the Good Offices Commission of

1-to-3-Inch Snow Forecast Today In Capital Area

Washington and the nearby countryside will be blanketed with its first snow of the season early today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

"A snowfall of from one to three inches is likely," said the forecaster.

The forecaster said the temperature would dip to about 30 shortly after midnight and that snow probably would begin falling at about 4 a. m. The snow is expected to turn to rain about noontime.

The Weather Bureau explained that a precipitation area is moving across this part of the country and that the snowfall will be widespread.

The season's first snowfall of any magnitude (there was a trace of snow here last month that disappeared rapidly) should prepare the citizenry for the official entrance of winter next Tuesday at 5:34 p. m.

Monday will be the shortest day of the year with only nine hours and 24 minutes of daylight.

The Weather Bureau expects the mercury to hover at about the 34 or 35 mark throughout today.

General Li, Chiang's Likely Successor, Alternately Friend and Foe for 30 Years

The dispatches from China, reporting growing rumors of President Chiang Kai-shek's stepping down, peace talks with the Communists, and a possible coalition goverment, frequently point to Li Tsung-jen as the most likely successor to the generalissimo.

LI TSUNG-JEN

Li Tsung-jen (pronounced Lee Tsung-ren) has for the past 30 years been alternately fighting with and against Generalissimo Chiang.

Only last spring, Li—himself a four-star general and one of China's ablest troop commanders was elected Vice President of China, in spite of the opposition of Chiang and the long-dominant right wing of the Kuomintang, the party that runs the government.

The same National Assembly that overwhelmingly elected Chiang President then turned around and, in secret balloting elected his foremost critic within the government as Chiang's constitutional successor. If Chiang were to resign, or go off on a long visit abroad, Li would be the man to take over.

Small and wiry, Li has long been more or less of a warlord, and admittedly is a leading member of the clique that runs Kwangsi Province. But within that province Li has instituted agrarian and economic reforms, which he insists is the only realistic way of opposing the Communist ideology in China.

The surprise vote of the National Assembly proved Li's popularity. More important, though, Li has a personal, well-trained army, and the close friendship and support of Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, the Moslem Minister of Defense, who is a ranking military leader and also has a personal army. In their numerous ins and out with Chiang, Li and Pai have stood together.

The 58-year-old Li is a self-aducated country boy who made good the hard way. He still has the peasant touch. His habits are simple, his manners sometimes crude. He managed to get into Kweilin Military Academy in time to participate in the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty in 1911-12.

It was in 1926 that Chiang Kai-shek made his first bid to bowl over rival warlords and assume control of a central Chinese government. Li, by this time boss of Kwangsi Province, backed Chiang for a year, then helped dump Chiang. The latter made a comeback in '28 and has held the reins until now.

Li remained in the background for the next 10 years, but in '38 became active among the leaders demanding peace or truce with the Communists and union of all Chinese against the Jap invaders. Li brought his Kwangsi troops back into the Nationalist fold and then proceeded to give the Chinese their first major victory against the Japs at Taierhchwang, Shantung Province.

Although he thereafter usually backed the Nanking government, Li never hushed as a critic of Chiang and the ruling Kuomintang machine.

Like the generalissimo, Li has an invaluable all-around lieutenant in his attractive, 41-year-old wife, known as Teh Chieh or "Virtue Pure."

Madame Li like her husband is from South China, where she attended a teachers' college. During the war she organized a school for refugee students, and ran a camp for refugee orphans. She accompanied her husband in his early campaigns. Their 10-year-old son attends a mission school.

Just how Li stands on peace with the Chinese Communists is a matter of speculation. But Li is regarded as a realist. He has on occasion spoken out against Russia, but he has often declared that Russia and China must be able to live as peaceable neighbors if there is to be world peace.

Indian-British Link Approved

New Delhi, India, Dec. 18 (U.P.). The Indian National Congress Party today approved India's maintaining its link with the British Commonwealth, but only as an "independent sovereign republic."

In a foreign policy resolution adopted at its meeting in Jaipur, the party called for closer association with the Commonwealth without making India a member of it.

The resolution also said that India would "adhere to the principles underlying the United Nations charter."

Congress Party President Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramaya said that no foreign power must be allowed to hold dominion territory in any part of Asia.

Japan Warned To Prepare For Austerity

Tokyo, Sunday, Dec. 19 (AP)—General MacArthur told Japan today to prepare for greater austerity and the "temporary surrender" of some freedoms to stabilize its economy.

Any attempt to "delay or frustrate" the stabilization program demanded in Washington "must be curbed as menacing the general welfare," he said.

The statement was in a strong letter to Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, placing upon Yoshida the responsibility for implementing the stabilization program announced in Washington Friday.

The program must be carried out, MacArthur said, to form "an impregnable barrier against the evil and destructive ideological pressures" of the left.

"Japan will evolve a pattern of progressive stability for all of strife-torn Asia to emulate," he added. "If they (the Japanese people) do not, Japan may perish."

The new American "big push" to give Japan some economic stability has produced one of the worst crises in more than three years of occupation.

4-Year Recovery Plan May Require 8 Years

By The Associated Press

America's four-year plan for Japan's recovery may take eight years to succeed.

United States officials were reported yesterday to be coming around to such a view, unless the East-West global struggle eases. They blame the march of communism in China and Japan's own internal troubles.

The prospective response of the State and Army Departments is a request to Congress next month for increased funds to speed up Japanese trade and industry. Coupled with this is a policy of exerting vigorous pressure by Gen. Douglas MacArthur as supreme commander in Japan to require the Japanese to fight inflation and step up their production.

This outline of official intentions was given following announcement of a formal United States order to the Tokyo government to impose promptly a tough new system of control on the Japanese economy, no matter how painful it may be.

Jap Strike Cuts Fuel Supply to Few Days

Tokyo, Dec. 18 (UP)—Japan's railroads and key industries have only a few days' fuel supply left as a result of the maritime strike, officials warned today.

The Communists have announced destruction of the Twelfth, totaling 120,000 men.

Today the Communist radio said that the Sixth Army Group, having failed to free the Twelfth, had "turned tail and fled."

The Communists also broadcast that the two government army groups encircled another 45 miles northwest had been more than half destroyed. These groups under Gen. Tu Li-ming were originally estimated to total 250,000 men, of whom about 100,000 were combat troops.

Royall to Confer With U. S. Advisers On Greek Front

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 18 (AP).—United States Secretary of Army Kenneth C. Royall said tonight he would fly to the battle zone of northern Greece tomorrow. He plans to talk to American observers.

Royall and his party will fly directly from Istanbul to Kastoria, west of Salonika. The American Cabinet member left Greece yesterday on a brief inspection tour of military installations in Turkey.

Expressing satisfaction with Turkish installations, Royall said: "Turkey is determined to stand firmly against aggressions by totalitarianism such as represented by Soviet Russia."

Asked whether American military aid to Turkey would continue, Royall said, "Yes, I am sure it will, but I do not know in what form. That must be decided by Congress."

"New evidence of friendship"

Fresh from a 40-minute interview with Emperor Hirohito of Japan, Dr. James L. Fieser of 5009 Edgemore ln., Bethesda, Md., starts work in earnest Monday to raise 10 million dollars for a Christian university in Japan.

Dr. Fieser, for 25 years executive vice chairman of the American Red Cross, recently returned from a 30-day tour of Japan, where he visited Gen. Douglas MacArthur as well as the Emperor.

An executive director of the Japan Christian University Foundation, Dr. Fieser, who is 65, toured Japan to investigate site problems and to discover the attitude of the Japanese towards the project.

Called Old Friend

Emperor Hirohito, who seldom grants interviews to Americans, told Dr. Fieser he arrived as an old friend after the work he did in directing the Red Cross $11,600,000 relief program for victims of the 1923 Japanese earthquakes.

"We feel deeply obligated to the United States," Dr. Fieser quoted the Emperor as saying. "The Christian university is new evidence of friendship and is tied in with United States leadership in moral rearmament. It must be a university of the highest rank."

He asked Dr. Fieser to express his thanks for America's "continual help in th eface of Japan's great need."

The Bethesda resident conducted his interview in the atmosphere of collapse of China and the sentencing of Japanese war criminals, he said. December 7, 1941, was not discussed.

Three hours after the war criminals were officially sentenced, Dr. Fieser was guest of honor at a dinner given by Premier Takamatsu and his wife, and attended by most of the Japanese cabinet.

Half-million From Japs

Approximately half a million dollars of the university fund will be raised in Japan, Dr. Fieser said, "an enormous sum in view of the inflation there and the fact that there are only one million Christians among the 80 million Japanese."

The university will start with only a graduate school of education in Mitaka, 15 miles west of Tokyo. Former Ambassador Joseph Grew and General MacArthur have agreed to serve as honorary cochairmen of the committee sponsoring the actual raising of funds in this country.

No person has been selected as head of the university by the board of founders, composed of members of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

Korean Assassination Attempt Fails, But 12 Die in Clash

Seoul, Dec. 18 (AP).—Twelve Koreans were killed during an unsuccessful assassination attempt against Governor Le Nam Kyu of South Cholla Province yesterday, the home ministry announced today.

The governor's party was attacked by 200 guerillas. The ministry reported that the governor's secretary, nine police guards and two guerillas were slain. The guerillas fled after a clash with others in the governor's guard.

Governor Le was en route from South Cholla Province to Sunchon to attend memorial services for South Korean offirers slain in the Odtober 20 short-lived rebellion.

Leaders of the rebellion, accused of being Communists from Russian-occupied North Korea, still remain in the area.

During the clash th guerillas robbed one of the governor's attaches of two million won (about $4000), the home ministry said.

Other details were lacking.

Indonesia War Is Resumed

the United Nations (consisting of representatives of the United States, Australia and Belgium) to avert an open breach and promote a last-minute settlement.

The Associated Press reported from The Hague that official announcement of the opening of hostilities was made at 4:50 p. m. EST. It was understood fighting had already been in progress for several hours. The action affects parts of central Java and Sumatra, which contain one-third of Indonesia's 70 million people.

The Dutch army of some 130,000 men is equipped with British Bren carriers and Stewart tanks and United States Mitchell bombers, Mustang fighters and Sherman tanks. Presumably these arms were given the Dutch during World War II as a recent Economic Cooperation Administration announcement said no ECA dollars have been used by The Netherlands to supply arms or other military equipment to Dutch troops in Indonesia.

The Indonesians are believed to have a poorly armed force of 150,000 plus some 200,000 irregulars.

The United Press said the U. N. Good Offices Commissioners were marooned in the hill station of Kaliurang near the republican capital of Jogjakarta.

Republican President Soegarno had been scheduled to fly to New Delhi, where he hoped to obtain Indian aid for his regime.

The Dutch said the new interim regime would take over all of Indonesia except the one third controlled by the Indonesian republic. The Netherlands government's view is that the republic in its areas of Java and Sumatra, cannot maintain order.

A Dutch announcement said the new stop-gap government will seek to augment the plan for a federal regime which would be linked later on to the Netherlands crown. The Indonesian republic has refused to agree with the details of the proposed new federal system of states. Negotiations between the two parties, sponsored by the United Nations, were broken off by the Dutch a week ago.

The Foreign Office spokesman said the decision to take "police action" resulted "after the breakdown in informal conversations on the Indonesian republic on account of the latter's failure to comply with truce obligations and reply to the last Dutch note asking for a binding declaration on four essential points."

The Foreign Office spokesman said "the aim of The Netherlands government to establish an Indonesian federation as an equal partner of The Netherlands is unchanged."

The Dutch communique said The Netherlands government had decided to abrogate the Renville truce agreement and "to resume its freedom of action."

The decision to abrogate the agreement was taken under Article 10 of that pact. That article provides for the termination, by either party, of the agreement upon notifying the Good Offices Commission that the complaining party considers that truce regulations are not being observed.

The Dutch, in a surprise move on July 21, 1947, began what they called a "police action" against Republican troops. This quickly developed into large-scale fighting, and the Dutch took the richest parts of Java and Sumatra.

In Paris, a spokesman for the United States delegation said the United States may ask for a special meeting of the United Nations Security Council to discuss the Indonesian situation.

Washington dispatches said Undersecretary of State Lovett reviewed the latest developments with State Department advisers.

The government issued a document saying it had evidence republican leaders would try to cause trouble in Dutch-controlled territories after January 1. The republican government last week had predicted trouble in some non-republican states if the Dutch tried to set up any government without the republic.

The Dutch decree was issued after an emergency cabinet session this morning While the ministers were meeting, they received from Batavia a summary of a talk which republican Prime Minister Mohammed Hatta had with Merle Cochran, United States member of the United Nations Good Offices Committee.

U. S. Coordinating Forces With Allies

By the United Press

The United States and five Western European powers are coordinating their military forces in Europe for quick action under a single commander in event of trouble with Russia, it was disclosed yesterday.

Reporting this, military and diplomatic officials said such coordination is a "reasonable and logical" development in line with long-range defensive arrangements being rapidly worked out with Great Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands.

Canada would join the long-term project as it is now envisioned.

Under present plans, authorities revealed, American occupation forces in Germany and forces elsewhere in Europe in an emergency would be integrated with the air, ground and sea forces of the five European powers for defensive action, under command of Britain's Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery. Indications in official quarters were that the program is nearly ready for review on the highest governmental levels.

It was emphasized that the coordinating plan does not mean that authorities believe trouble with Russia is imminent or inevitable. The plan is stricly a "just-in-case" defense proposition, officials said.

Informants said the plan would serve as a temporary measure to forestall Communist aggression until the long-range North Atlantic security pact is negotiated among he five Western European powers, the United States and Canada. This treaty would expand military cooperation and continue it for a period of 10 to 50 years, depending on future East-West relations.

The speeding of military planning served new notice that the United States is determined to concentrate its main anti-Communist effort in western Europe, notwithstanding Communist advances in China.

In event China falls to the Communists, the United States would endeavor to hold a line stretching from Alaska, around the Soviet-held Kurile Islands, to Southern Korea, Japan, perhaps, Formosa, Okinawa and the Philippines. Japan with its industrial potential would be the key link in that defense chain.

To Start in '49

Huge Congo Base Planned By Belgium

Brussels, Belgium, Dec. 18 (AP).—The defense ministry of Belgium, an American ally in the projected North Atlantic Defense Pact, announced today that construction of a huge military base will be started in the Belgian Congo next year.

The Belgian Congo at present is the world's largest producer of uranium ore used in development of atomic energy. The new base will be miles away from the Shinkolobwe mines in the southern part of the West African colony, however. The mines are operated by a private company.

One of the purposes of the new base is to create the nucleus of a technical operation center should Belgian European territory be completely occupied by an enemy in another war.

The base will include a training airfield, repair facilities for fighting planes, a school for pilots, a technical school for Negro soldiers and a field for maneuvers.

It will take four years to build, and may serve as the nucleus for an even more important military establishment in the future.

France Talks Of Interceptor Air Force

Paris, Dec. 18 (NYHT).—French military leaders are thinking of creating an air force almost exclusively composed of interceptor planes.

This virtual abandonment of bombers, the most expensive type of aircraft to maintain, would be in line with a reduction of defense outlays demanded by the 1949 budget.

Sources close to the government said tonight that this concentration was a project of Paul Ramadier, minister of national defense.

When he appeared before the National Assembly's defense committee earlier this week, Ramadier explained the need for cutting military expenditures and laid out his idea that France ought to concentrate on interceptor aircraft.

Although the minister emphasized no final decisions could be made—in view of the still-undetermined provisions of the Brussels Pact and the possibility of an Atlantic pact—the French government now is known to be ready to proceed.

Military leaders say France could quickly develop an interceptor force because she has a large number of pilots qualified to fly only light aircraft. The French in fact, possess only a handful of bombers of American wartime vintage and obsolete.

Government circles, at least for the period of French recovery, favor: (1) a specialized air force; (2) maintenance of a smaller but more efficient force of ground troops (perhaps five instead of the present six divisions), and (3) foregoing any ambitious program of naval reconstruction.

The government plans to spend one fourth or less of the present 1,800,000,000,000 franc budget estimate on defense. Last year's budget allocated one third of the national income to the armed forces.

U. S. to Show Naval Power

London, Dec. 18 (AP).—More American naval power—an aircraft carrier and two destroyers—will show itself in Mediterranean waters after Christmas, Admiral Richard L. Conolly announced today.

Conolly is commander in chief of United States naval forces in the eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, with headquarters in London.

The vessels are the 27,100-ton carrier Tarawa and the destroyers E. J. Buckley and Hawkins, both new 2200-ton ships. All are en route from the Pacific to the United States.

Conolly said they will arrive at Colombo, Ceylon, December 29 for four days. The ships will call at Bahrein, Persian Gulf oil port, from January 8 to 10 and pass through the Suez Canal January 20-21.

Iran Takes Steps to Increase Security, U. S. Envoy Says

Boston, Dec. 18 (AP).—Iran, on Russia's southern flank, is strengthening itself to protect its democratic independence, John C. Wiley, United States Ambassador to Tehran, said today.

Arriving from Tehran, Wiley praised the young Shah for his "strong program of social and economic reform on democratic lines."

Hgh on the agenda for the Ambassador's Washington consultations is a seven-year, 500-million-dollar plan for economic development of Iranian industry and agriculture, he said. The plan will include experiments in irrigation and pilot plants to develop consumer goods industries. It also contemplates sorely needed water resources, building soil erosion remedies, malarial control, construction of roads, railways, communications and harbors and broadening of agricultural production.

Half the cost would be borne by Iran and the remainder by the International Bank, he said.

Wiley said he also decided to arrange scholarships in American technical schools for young Iranians.

Bulgarian Reds Open Conclave

Sofia, Dec. 18 (NYHT).—The twice-deferred congress of the Bulgarian Communist Party opened here today in a manner which seemed to quell rumors that the strong pro-Tito faction had gotten out of hand.

Vassile Kolarov, Bulgarian Foreign Minister and widely reported sympathizer of the Yugoslav Premier, appeared as keynote speaker at the congress. He has been under house arrest recently. Approximately 1000 exuberant party members from all over Bulgaria, and representatives of 13 foreign Communist Parties, attended.

The congress is the first since 1922, the year before the party was driven underground.

Noticeably absent from the list of foreign Communist Parties at the congress was Marshal Tito's. Those attending were Russia, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, France, Italy, "Free" Greece, Albania, Austria, Spain, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland and Romania.

The congress gave a particularly noisy demonstration for General Vlantas from "Free Greece."

Clay Confident Of Federal Rule for West

Berlin, Dec. 18 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay said tonight he still hopes western Germany will have a federal government by mid-1949.

The American military governor expressed confidence the governments of the three western powers soon would reach agreement on the occupation statute which will serve the three western zones as a substitute peace treaty.

"We were already remarkably close to agreement," Clay said, referring to his Frankfurt conference this week with the French and British military governors. Two points, he said, were left to be settled by Washington, London and Paris.

"One point," Clay said, "is whether a central government will pay occupation costs, thereby obtaining more financial authority, or (whether) this will be left to the separate States as the French want. The other point is whether a German will sit in on an allied board to arbitrate questions arising from the statute. The French don't want that.

Sees Issues Ironed Out

"But I think these are issues which can be ironed out without great delay by the three governments. Perhaps it's only a matter of weeks."

Clay minimized the possible political effects if Russia sets up an east German government in the spring.

"All it would really amount to is a zonal government, and we've been far ahead of the Russians in such matters in the west," he said.

The American-licensed newspaper Der Abend charged that the Communist "rump" government of east Berlin plans to seize power in the three western sectors of the city after Christmas.

The newspaper said the plans include "spontaneous street demonstrations" and the occupation of public buildings by force.

W. T. Babcock, deputy American commandant, said the rumored plan "wouldn't stand a chance of succeeding."

Staggered by Election

"We have evidence the Communists had thought of trying something like that right after the December 5 city election, but the election results staggered them so much they gave it up," Babcock declared.

"Now the west Berliners are so stirred up they'd tear anybody apart who tried to invade them. We are not worried about the future."

"Democratic blocs," in east Berlin are "electing" Communists to replace Social Democratic mayors in the individual boroughs of the city.

Two borough "elections" already have been held at Communist-organized mass meetings similar to the one in which Friedrich Ebert was named Lord Mayor of east Berlin by the Communists November 30.

Czechs Give Priest Life For 'Plotting'

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Rev. Sebastian Sabol, 41, described as head of the Greek Orthodox Catholic Church priesthood in Czechoslovakia, was sentenced to life imprisonment today on charges of plotting against the government.

Another priest, the Rev. Pavel Hlucko, 35, was sentenced to 15 years in prison. Two lay members of the church were sentenced to life terms. They are Rehor Buranic, 36, and Jan Zilinsky, 22.

Four other persons were sentenced to terms ranging up to five years.

Austrian Pact Plans Revived

broke down last May after weeks of wrangling here among deputies of the Big Four's foreign ministers.

The big issue was Yugoslavia's demand for a big slice of southern Austria plus millions of dollars of reparations.

Russia supported Marshal Tito's claims. The United States, Britain and France balked.

With little chance of agreement, the United States representative, Samuel Reber, then chairman, broke off the discussions by refusing to call further meetings.

Since May, Russia's relations with Yugoslavia have changed. The Soviet-dominated Cominform has indicted Tito's government for pursuing an independent "nationalistic" policy.

In all probability, this coolness inspired the Austrian government to plead anew on December 6 that the Big Four countries make another try on peace terms. The Austrians apparently hope the Russians no longer will back the Yugoslav claims.

Russia's "yes" was reported today by Tass, the Soviet news agency, in a dispatch to Vienna.

It said that Russia had "always sought an early conclusion to the treaty." Later the Soviet political representative in Vienna, Mme. Kotelov, called on Austrian Foreign Minister Karl Gruber and informed him of Soviet willingness to reopen negotiations.

In London, however, the Soviet reply was studied with considerable caution.

Fresh in the memories of the Western diplomats is last fall's conference in Belgrade on Danube River navigation rights.

Russia and Yugoslavia were at odds then, too. But they voted together for exclusion of the Western powers from administration of commerce on the river—and won their point.

Rome Police Disperse Jobless Mobs

Rome, Dec. 18 (AP).—Riot police tonight dispersed several hundred jobless demonstrators who were shouting outside the Chamber of Deputies, "We want work! We want bread!"

Meanwhile, employes of privately owned gas companies in Rome, Milan, Naples, Florence, Venice and Turin struck for 12 hours beginning last midnight for wages and benefits recently granted workers in publicly owned plants. Another big strike is set for Sunday midnight, when most of the country's million or more government employes will quit for 24 hours to protest that recent wage increases are inadequate.

Costa Rica Shows Invasion Evidence

San Jose, Costa Rica, Dec. 18 (AP)—An invader prisoner told newsmen today Dr. Rafael A. Calderon Guardia, leader of the force invading Costa Rica, had said Nicaraguan War Minister Anastasio Somoza promised him all help possible.

The prisoner, Florencio Ordones, was one of 39 men captured in the fighting in northwestern Costa Rica questioned today by a Commission of the Organization of American States.

The commission is investigating charges by Jose Figueres, leader of the Costa Rican military government, that the invasion was launched more than a week ago from Nicaragua.

The commission issued a statement saying Gen. Miguel Angel Ramirez and "other leaders" of the Caribbean Legion also had been interviewed.

That organization has been described as a body of Central American exiles with the avowed purpose of overthrowing the governments of Honduras, Nicaragua and the Dominican Republic. Ramirez told newsmen yesterday he had turned all legion arms over to Figueres two days before.

Figueres said today "there is no such thing as the Caribbean Legion."

The commission plans to leave San Jose at 7 a. m. Sunday for Liberia, general field headquarters for government forces fighting the invaders.

Earlier today the commission viewed rifles and blankets which Costa Rican officials said they had captured from the invaders.

Figueres pointed out two rifles bearing the Nicaraguan coat-of-arms and a blanket with the initials 'G. N.," standing for the Nicaraguan National Guard.

Figueres joked, "That stands for Good Neighbor, huh?"

The Costa Rican chief of staff reported that "troops of the National Guard of Nicaragua" were withdrawing from La Cruz, 17 miles inside northwest Costa Rica, to Puerto Soley, nearer the frontier on Salinas Bay. He said the troops were part of the invading force which captured La Cruz on December 11.

(Nicaraguan newspapers said "Costa Rican rebels" had abandoned La Cruz and were advancing to more strategic positions deeper inside Costa Rica.)

Figueres said Costa Rica now had enough soldiers under arms to take care of the emergency, and "if we do not proceed immediately it is because we are following tactics designed to save the lives of our soldiers."

Ecuador Arrests Socialist Leader

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Dec. 18 (U.P.). Dr. Carlos Palacio Saenz, Socialist Party leader, was arrested today on suspicion of involvement in a plot to overthrow President Galo Plaza.

An official announcement said Palacio and Juan Ycaza Laforgue vainly sought to incite army elements to revolt. Ernesto Lizarazaburu and Jose Serrano alleged to have acted as liaison between the plotters and the army, also were arrested but Laforgue remained at large.

At Quito, the capital, government officials described the plot as minor and said there was no danger of any real disturbance.

Catholic Wed To Anglican Prelate's Son

London, Dec. 18 (AP).—The son of the Anglican Archbishop of Canterbury and a Roman Catholic girl were married by a Catholic priest today.

The archbishop, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, head of the Church of England, was not present, nor was there comment from him. However, Mrs. Fisher and five other sons attended. One was best man.

The Rev. Alphonso de Zulueta, a Catholic priest, performed the service uniting Henry Arthur Pears Fisher, 30, a London barrister, and Felicity Sutton, 26, a Chelsea artist.

Since the bridegroom does not plan to become a Catholic, the service was not performed before the high altar at the Church of Our Most Holy Redeemer and St. Thomas More in Chelsea, the scene of the wedding.

Any children born of the union, however, will be reared as Catholics.

There were no bridesmaids or pageboys, and only 20 or 30 guests. The bride wore an ankle-length, cream silk gown, with a long string of pearls and a coronet as her only jewelry.

Frye Copies Inscription

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 18 (AP).—A Harvard scientist has returned from Persia with copies of an ancient inscription which may shed more light on the Zoroastrian religion—one of the world's oldest.

Dr. Richard N. Frye is back from the remote mountain village of Sar Mashad, where he viewed the largest inscription yet found in Persia—17 feet long, 9 feet high. He made impressions of the 800 words, which will take months in translation. The symbols were discovered in 1924 but had never been reproduced.

The language is middle Persian, used by the Parthians and the Sasanian empire from about 200 B. C. to 650 A. D.

Dr. Frye had to climb 50 feet up a cliff to the inscription. Nearby he found a large bas-relief showing the Sasanian King Bahran II killing a lion with his sword, his queen and ministers at his back.

Attack by Israeli Force Unconfirmed

Haifa, Dec. 18 (AP).—A U. N. truce headquarters spokesman said today he was unable to confirm official Egyptian reports that Israeli forces launched an attack on the Egyptian garrison at Faluja in the Negev.

The truce headquarters spokesman said U. N. observers in the Negev had not reported any such attack.

Red Slant on UNRRA

By The Associated Press

A group of Midwestern farmers just back from Europe said they picked up a sample of Communist propaganda. It puts a new twist on UNRRA, the former international agency from which Europeans received large amounts of aid. According to the Communists, UNRRA is a Russian city near Moscow.

U.S. Embassy Lists Inquiry On Cuts by Argentine Censors

Buenos Aires, Dec. 18 (AP).—The United States Embassy said today it expects to discuss with Argentine officials next week reports of censorship of news dispatches filed by American correspondents.

Robert Neville, Buenos Aires correspondent for Time Magazine, complained that about 1300 words were eliminated from an 1800-word story he filed. He said the postoffice failed to notify him of the deletions, and he learned of it only when his office sent a message that it could not understand his story.

Another complaint came from John Daly, Columbia Broadcasting System commentator traveling in South America. Daly said the government press office assured him there was no censorship, but that two of his broadcasts were delayed 24 hours until numerous changes were made in the scripts.

John Wilhelm, correspondent for National Broadcasting Co., and Herbert M. Clark of the American Broadcasting Corp. told the embassy their broadcasts always were censored. Wilhelm said he was cut off the air at least once during a broadcast.

Argentina has no official censorship.

Absolute Majority Seen For Peron in Assembly

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Followers of President Juan D. Peron will have an absolute majority in the National Assembly meeting early next year to amend the constitution, virtually complete returns from the December 5 election indicated today.

One of the proposed constitutional amendments would permit the reelection of Peron for another six-year term.

In the Buenos Aires capital district the Peronists polled 339,644 votes; the Radicals 201,081, and the Communists 34,014, not enough to elect even one assemblyman.

Forrestal Denies He Wants 'Gestapo'

By the United Press

Defense Secretary James Forrestal last night branded as "utterly false" charges that he is attempting "to abolish the FBI and to create a secret police force on the pattern of the gestapo or the MVD."

In a letter to Mrs. Mary B. Hartman of Philadelphia, Forrestal defended his plan to reorganize the Nation's counter-espionage and civil defense programs.

"There has never, at any time, been any suggestion by me," he said, "that the FBI or any of the agencies engaged in this type of work (counter-espionage) be abolished; only that their work should be coordinated.

"Moreover, I have never suggested that my office or any other office of the national military establishment should be the coordinating agency or control it."

Wrote to Truman

Mrs. Hartman wrote to President Truman recently complaining about the implications of the proposed reorganization of the present civil service and internal security setups.

She said she had seen reports that the Forrestal suggestions meant the establishment of a secret police force in this country. She said the idea was "sinister" and revolting to all Americans.

Mr. Truman referred the letter to Forrestal.

Forrestal wrote that he was disturbed because "you were misled by distorted reports, and because I can only assume that others are being equally misled by these distortions."

Brands Report as "Nonsense"

"In regard to the report, 'Civil Defense for National Security,'" he said, "you probably have heard that it proposes a military dictatorship, complete with concentration camps.

"That is nonsense so untruthful that I am almost persuaded that it is malicious."

Forrestal said the report simply suggests that it might be a good idea for municipal authorities—like the chief of police of Philadelphia, for instance—to have alternate jails ready in case the regular jail is damaged in war.

The so-called Forrestal plan of internal security was a report based on a study of present counter-espionage methods. It was initiated by the National Security Council.

When the report was published, it was criticized in some quarters because it took away complete control over counter-espionage from the FBI.

Pittsburgh Woman's Hiccup Spasm Ends

Pittsburgh, Dec. 18 (AP).—Pauline M. Lucas, the Waynesburg, Pa., woman who has been hiccupping continuously since February 23, stopped her spasms following an operation, her doctor announced today.

The operation, performed after every other known medical aid failed, consisted of crushing the nerves which control movement of the diaphragm muscle. While the crushed nerve mends, Miss Lucas will breathe by learning to use her chest muscles.

Next Monday would have marked her 300th day of continuous hiccupping.

Admiral Says Not to Overstress Atom

Vice Admiral Donald B. Beary yesterday warned the military against too much "preoccupation with atomic energy."

Beary is president of the Naval War College. Writing in the Army and Navy Journal, he said that despite scientific and industrial advances of the past few generations, "two factors have remained constant—the human mind and the geography of the globe."

"The mind of man is still the motivating force behind all weapons," he said, "and our preoccupation with atomic energy should not blind us to this fact."

"The final objectives of war," he continued, "will be land objectives." And sea power, he said, will go on being important as long as the seas "cover three fourths of the surface of the earth."

The "decisive combination" of modern war, Beary asserted, is "sea-air power" against which no corner of the earth, however remote, "can be considered insulated."

To Check Missing Ship

London, Dec. 18 (U.P.)—The transport ministry today ordered an investigation into the disappearance of the 5267-ton British freighter Hopestar about November 14 while it was en route from the Tyne to Philadelphia in ballast. No further details were given.

Taft Doesn't Plan to Quit as Policy Chief, Says He Will Fight Repeal of Labor Law

Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, announced yesterday that he had no intention to "quit" his post as Republican policy chief in the Senate despite demands of some of his Republican colleagues for new leadership.

At the same time, returning to Washington after a six-week absense in Europe, he dashed cold water on the proposal by Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican National Committee, that the party call a "Republican policy conference"

He also derided the reported Administration plan to seek repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Relations Act in its entirety and made clear that he and other Republicans will fight any such effort if for no other reason than that that would also wipe off the books the old Wagner Act, some features of which were retained in the Taft-Hartley Act.

Personally, Taft said, he might go along with a few amendments of the more recent statute, but he made clear that he will fight the Democratic effort to do more than that.

He offered, though, to join any similarly minded Senators of either party to enact the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, including its public housing, slum clearance and housing research features; the Murray-Wagner-Dingell public health bill, and the 300-million-dollar Federal aid to education bill.

The Senator made clear that he did not feel the Republicans' loss of control of the Congress last November 2, and President Truman's victory in a campaign waged against the record of the Congress whose policy the Senator helped shape, indicates the necessity for any shakeup of Senate Republican leadership.

Drawing from his pocket a newspaper clipping reporting that he might retire from the chairmanship of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, the Senator said: "I don't know who started the story. I didn't start it. I haven't suggested that I am going to quit."

The Senator was reminded that present rules of the Senate Republican Conference would retire him from membership on the important policy group when the Eightieth Congress formally expires December 31.

"The rules are open to change," he commented with a smile.

The Senator met reporters as another member of the Senate Republican "Big Five," Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, told newsmen he believed the Republicans will settle their leadership differences without an open squabble. Wherry, along with Senator Taft, is a member of the conservative block of Senate Republicans. He was acting floor leader this year and is known to aspire to one of the three top posts on the Republican side.

Against recent demands for more liberalism in the party, Senator Taft cited the 1948 Republican platform as evidence that the party is liberal.

"President Truman campaigned against the Eightieth Congress, though," a reporter reminded him.

"That's an individual matter, I guess," the Ohioan replied.

The Senator had no comment on questions as to whether he favored retiring Representative Scott, a Philadelphian who was picked by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for the national chairmanship after Dewey defeated Taft and other candidates for the Republican presidential nomination. But Taft denied any association with reports that B. Carroll Reece, former national chairman and generally considered a Taft man, is trying for a comeback.

Without mentioning Scott by name, however, the Senator made clear that he would not go along with the party's chairman's proposal for a party policy conference in the near future.

"I wouldn't think there should be one at this time, but maybe before the next congressional elections," the Senator said.

Other Republican members of Congress meanwhile, reacted with equal coolness to the proposal.

The conference plan was discussed with more than a dozen Republicans who will be members of the new Congress. Some openly denounced the "policy conference" idea. Others expressed private reservations. None gave it unqualified support.

Syndicate Gets U. N. Secretariat Building Job

Lake Success, N. Y., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Trygve Lie, Secretary-General of the United Nations, announced today that a bid, believed to be in the neighborhood of 24 million dollars, has been accepted for the construction of the 39-story U. N. Secretariat building and the complete foundation for the permanent U. N. headquarters in mid-Manhattan.

Lie said the building contract would be awarded to a four-company syndicate: the George A. Fuller Co., builders of the Lincoln Memorial, and the Biltmore and Commodore hotels in New York; the Turner Construction Co., Walsh Construction Co. and the Slattery Construction Co.

Vote," in addition to a figure of the goddess Columbia and a Greek temple.

Subsequently, however, he learned that Barron invited the District Commissioners to arrange for the local float. Inaugural officials claimed the overlapping plans resulted from lack of adequate coordination.

No Rivalry Wanted

Commissioner John Russell Young said he understood Barron planned a District float highlighting the Capitol dome, Washington Monument and a figure of freedom.

Said Van Arkel:

"We certainly don't want to rival the Commissioners . . . but we hope they will use the suffrage issue in the float."

A. L. Wheeler, chairman of the District Democratic Central Committee, said that if Hildreth approves, "we'll try to persuade the Commissioners to change the plans so as to feature suffrage." Hildreth, in addition to heading the Inaugural Committee, is national Democratic committeeman from the District.

Lacock Abbey Magna Carta to Be Returned to England After 2-Year Loan

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The Lacock Abbey Magna Carta of 1225, on exhibit at the Library of Congress for the past two years, will be returned to England Thursday.

The historic document, lent to the United States by an act of Parliament, will be turned over to A. J. Collins, deputy keeper of manuscripts in the British Museum, by Dr. Luther Evans, Librarian of Congress, at simple ceremonies at 11 a. m. in the library's rare book room.

Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and other notables are expected to be present.

The document has been kept in the rare book room since Wednesday, when it was removed from the special exhibition case at the expiration of the two-year loan period.

Collins will be accompaned to New York by Alvin W. Kremer, keeper of the collections of the Library of Congress, and Secret Service agents, and will be under guard until he sails with the document.

The document, a single sheet of vellum 12¾ inches by 20½ inches, has been insured by the Library while on exhibit for approximately $200,000.

It will return to London in the same especially made wooden case in which it was brought to Washington, lying flat with the green wax Great Seal of Henry III sunk into a slot.

As a token of good will, Collins, in behalf of the British Museum, presented to the library one of two collotype facsimiles of the document, complete with the seal. The facsimile is almost indistinguishable from the medieval original.

This will be the first time in almost a decade that the Library of Congress has not had an original copy of the Magna Carta on display..

The Lincoln Cathedral copy of 1215, brought here for the New York World's Fair of 1939, was deposited in the library for safekeeping during the war. When it was returned, as a good will gesture, the Lacock Abbey copy was lent to the United States for two years so that, in the words of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Jowett, the American people could share the document with the British, since it is the foundation of their liberties, too.

Mayors Blast State Control of City Affairs; Legislators Called 'Autocratic, Dictatorial'

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Municipal officials, meeting last week in Washington, the city with no home rule, described the problems of cities that have some home rule, but not enough.

Addressing the American Municipal Association convention, city officials described interference in local affairs by State legislators as "autocratic and dictatorial."

A man who made this statement, Herbert J. Bingham, executive secretary of the Tennessee Municipal League, declared bluntly that 221 towns in his State are now "operated by a foreign power—the State Legislature."

Bingham outlined the situation of municipal officials whose every move is subject to the action of a two-man local delegation to the Legislature. The two—a Senator and a Representative—may "place any provision in the city charters that is not contrary to the State or Federal Constitution."

Once introduced, such measures are quickly enacted by the remainder of the Legislature and the Governor under the "courtesy system," Bingham explained. Under this tradition, these officials decline to oppose or even debate local bills with an understanding that the favor will be returned when they introduce local measures. The Governor follows this policy as a means of assuring a friendly Legislature on administration measures, Bingham charged.

Through such "ripper" bills, the State government "can and has, on numerous occasions, fired mayors and councils of cities and appointed others. It has raised and decreased salaries of city employes," the Tennessee speaker declared.

The net result of this situation has been "a lack of civic interest and participation in the municipalities of our State," he explained.

State legislators usually are elected by the rural voters in the various districts since municipalities represent a minority of the electorate.

"In our State, candidates campaign for the rural vote and sometimes make municipal officials help their campaigns under threat of 'ripper' legislation if they don't," Bingham charged.

A similar situation existed in Georgia, Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta told the 500 delegates. He explained that under the county unit rule some rural voters "have from 20 to 50 times the power behind their votes as the citizen of Atlanta."

Firing Was Common, He Says

Until the new State constitution was adopted, firing of city officials who "did not run with the State legislators" was common.

The rural dominance of the State Legislature—with the accompanying lack of interest in city problems—is indicated in Fulton County, where four fifths of Atlanta is situated. "Politicians do not even take the trouble to even campaign in Atlanta," Mayor Hartsfield said.

The new president of the American Municipal Association, Mayor DeLesseps S. Morrison of New Orleans, related his bitter experiences with a State Legislature dominated by the Long machine.

"To my knowledge there is no more flagrant and punitive case history of interference in purely local affairs than that which befell us in New Orleans," he began. He explained that the State constitution spells out little protection of municipal powers.

"Newly elected State officials, lusting for dictatorial power and spoils, decided to abuse this lack of home rule protection . . . We saw scores of punitive, restrictive bills affecting the most vital functions of the Government and economy of New Orleans introduced by floor leaders of the Long administration immediately after the State Legislature convened last May.

"Designed to Harass"

"They were designed to intimidate, harass and obstruct the largest community of our State, whose only sin was to have a mayor and other officials whose political views differed from those in control of the State House," the youthful Mayor of New Orleans charged.

These attacks on the city included passage of a bill cutting the city's 2 per cent sales tax in half. "At the same time, the Legislature doubled the State sales tax from 1 to 2 per cent. This, in effect, meant that about 4.5 million dollars of New Orleans tax funds needed for local services and public improvements was switched from the city treasury into the State treasury," Morrison declared.

"At the same time the Legislature was reducing our municipal revenues, it also was adding to our governmental costs by increasing the number of firemen, earmarking and raising the salaries of certain other municipal and parish employes. Our costs of government were increased by approximately 1.5 million dollars," he added.

Morrison, going out into the State and campaigning against some measures, managed to achieve the defeat of a bill "which would have removed the police department from control of the city government and placed it under an elected State board" and another requiring five years' continuous residence in New Orleans as a legal qualification to serve as mayor.

The latter "spite measure, obviously aimed at your speaker (who served overseas with the Army) discriminated against any war veteran who had been away on overseas service. The repercussions were so great among veterans' circles that the measure was hastily withdrawn," Mayor Morrison said.

41 Amendments Submitted

In the November 2 general election, 41 proposed constitutional amendments were submitted to voters of the State, with most of them affecting individual communities. "The first nine of these were outright power grabs by the Governor and the State administration," Morrison declared.

He raised the argument in his State speeches that "We are all one great economic unit. Let us work together. Don't vote for amendments which will injure the largest taxpaying community of Louisiana."

"Well, when the votes were counted, the power grab amendments were defeated by an average of 35,000 to 40,000 votes," Morrison reported.

Through this decision, "the voters of New Orleans and of all Louisiana have forcibly demonstrated their interest in home rule and their rebuke against those who abridge this fundamental principle of local self government."

Morrison's interest in the problem was demonstrated again at the convention when he told reporters he strongly favored home rule in the District.

"I favor the right of residents of every municipality to vote and to administer their own affairs. Suffrage is an inherent American right. It would be sound policy for the people of our National Capital," he affirmed.

County Seeks To Close Glebe Trailer Camp

The Arlington County Board yesterday voted to ask the Federal Public Housing Authority to close down the Glebe Road Trailer Camp on the ground that the development is a nuisance.

The board voted unanimously to request the FPHA to eliminate the Government-built war housing project after hearing a spokesman for the Arlington Interracial Commission term the housing project a "moral disgace" to the community.

In seeking to close the trailer camp, commission representatives told the board that the camp had been the scene of six murders since it was established in 1941, in addition to innumerable fights and other disorders. The camp was called "a place where gambling goes on in the preesnce of children."

The trailer camp houses about 40 families in 30 semi-permanent trailers, spokesman for the interracial commission said. In one instance, as many as 10 persons were found in a single trailer, he said.

The camp originally was established to house Negro families who were evicted from land acquired in connection with building of the Pentagon.

Speaking for the interracial commission at yesterday's meeting were the Rev. Thomas O. Diggs and the Rev. Walter Wolfe, both of whom said they had visited the trailer camp in an effort to better living conditions without results.

Mr. Diggs said he had "tried to reason" with occupants of the camp, but had ben unsuccessful.

The board deferred action on a proposal to acquire a 3½-acre tract lying between Dinwiddie, Cameron and North 18th streets for use as the playground to serve the Hall's Hill area, after receiving a petition signed by 200 protestants.

The petition contended the playground which would serve a Negro community, was "too close" to an area predominantly populated by whites and would produce objectionable noise. It also claimed the $48,000 purchase price was "prohibitive."

Churches to Send 100 U. S. Youths To Aid Europe

New York, Dec. 18 (AP). — The World Council of Churches today called for 100 Christian American youths—over 18 years old—to volunteer for reconstruction work in Europe next summer.

The Rev. William Keys, secretary of the World Council's youth department, said work camps for "Christian reconstruction" already had been set up in France, Germany and Italy.

Specific projects include the rebuilding of a youth center at Stuttgart, Germany, and continued construction of Agape, a "youth-village" at Praly, Italy, Keys said.

Other projects are planned for France.

Perfume Adds a Fillip To Bubble Bath Blaze

London, Dec. 18 (AP).—Barrels of perfume exploded by a fire in a soap factory made suburban Acton the sweetest smelling place in England today.

Well-nigh overpowered by the waves of scent, firemen staggered and skidded through billowing soapsuds in a futile attempt to save the four-story building.

Sandy Confesses All; It May Puzzle Santa

Camden, N. J., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—A letter received today at the Camden postoffice is going to puzzle Santa Claus.

It apparently was written by a conscience-striken little fellow.

"Dear Santa," the letter said. "Don't bring nothing to Sandy because he is a very bad boy."

It was signed "Sandy."

Spies Who Stole State Department Secrets Knew 'Inside' on Austrian Talks, Papers Show

before Hitler snuffed out Austria's independence.

If the documents had been communicated to Moscow, the Soviet government would have learned: (1) Hitler had been "brutal" in his face-to-face dealings with Schuschnigg; (2) France and Britain were unlikely to make a stand if Germany attacked Austria, and (3) Guido Schmidt, the Austrian Foreign Minister, sedulously tried to convince foreign diplomats that Hitler would not use force or annex Austria in a hurry.

None of these things might have surprised Moscow, for they were soon known in general to well-informed European editors and probably to Soviet diplomats as well. Yet the State Department dispatches would have provided additional detail as well as information, and would, of course, have made it easy to break the State Department code.

Report by Wiley

Two of the newly released documents were records of talks between John C. Wiley, American counselor at the Vienna legation, and Schmidt, the Austrian Foreign Minister. Schmidt was reassuring, although he admitted that the Austrian Chancellor's talk with Hitler had been "extremely hard," with three German generals present to increase the pressure.

Schmidt told Wiley that Arthur Seyss-Inquart, who had been appointed as Austrian Public Security Minister at Hitler's demand, was really a devout Catholic who would resist "Nazi extremists." Seyss-Inquart became Nazi governor of the Netherlands during the war, and was hanged at Nuernberg as a war criminal.

Schmidt himself was arrested by the French in Austria toward the end of the war, was put on trial in Vienna as a Nazi, but was acquitted for lack of evidence.

Wiley told Schmidt the United States "maintained a deep and sincere interest in the welfare of Austria, and I was sure it hoped earnestly that the Austrian government would firmly resist threats against the independence of Austria."

Halifax Mentioned

He also had a talk with the French Minister to Austria, who had seen Schuschnigg and learned first-hand details of the interview with Hitler on February 12.

"Hitler boasted to him (Schuschnigg) of the military prowess of Germany," Wiley reported to Washington, "deprecated French military equipment, alleged that everything he did with respect to Austria and the Sudeten Germans was in entire agreement with Halifax (British Minister has telegraphed this to the Foreign Office), that in two years' time Italy would no longer mean anything to Germany, and that it was his holy mission to unite 80 million Germans into a nation which would rule Europe."

Lord Halifax, later the British Ambassador in Washington, had seen Hitler four months previously on a visit to Berchtesgaden. The record of their's has never been published, but according to the authorized biography of Neville Chamberlain, Halifax said any changes in Central Europe should be carried out by "peaceful" means.

Wiley also reported having seen the Italian minister in Vienna, who told him Austrian independence was not menaced by anything Hitler was doing.

Bullitt Cables Released

Four of the cables released last night came from Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Paris. Bullitt was busy getting information about the Austrian crisis and about the French attitude in case of an attack on Austria.

He talked on February 15 to Alexis Leger, the chief of the French Foreign Office, who told him Hitler had received the Austrian Chancellor with "the utmost brutality." Leger said acceptance of Hitler's demands "would mean the end of Austrian independence."

Two days later the French Foreign Office told Bullitt the British had reminded Berlin of their deep interest in whatever took place in central Europe, and that the French would do the same without delay.

"It seems clear," Bullitt cabled home, "that the French and British action in Berlin has been taken mainly for the sake of the record, out of a feeling that they could hardly afford to pass by recent events in complete silence." The "recent events" were Hitler's summons to Schuschnigg to see him at Berchtesgaden, and his submission of demands on Austria.

The last message in the series, from Prentiss Gilbert, counselor of embassy in Berlin, reported that Seyss-Irquart had been called to Berlin and told by Hitler to clean up "Communist elements" in Austria. This, said Gilbert, was "sharply indicative of the nature of the new relationship between Germany and Austria."

Inventory of 'Spy' Papers

Here is a brief inventory of the State Department documents released yesterday by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. All deal with the situation about three weeks before Hitler's invasion and annexation of Austria in March, 1938:

Feb. 14, 1938— To: Secretary Hull.
From John C. Wiley,
counselor of legation,
Vienna.

An account of a talk with Foreign Minister Guido Schmidt of Austria, telling of Hitler's interview with Austrian Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg at Berchtesgaden on February 12. Schmidt tried to be reassuring about Hitler's intentions, and said Austria could remain independent for a time. Wiley told him the United States hoped Austria would resist any threats against its independence.

Feb. 16, 1938— To: Secretary Hull.
From John C. Wiley.

A "strictly confidential" account of a second talk with Schmidt, who "seemed on the whole cheerful" and said German military maneuvers on the Austrian frontier were not a demonstration against Austria. This message also reported talks with the French and Italian ministers to Austria.

Feb. 15, 1938— To: Secretary Hull:
From William C. Bullitt,
Ambassador to France.

A brief cable saying that, according to an informant in the Austrian legation in Paris, Italy would mobilize if Germany attacked Austria, but also wanted the Austrians to "temporize" in their dealings with Germany.

Feb. 15, 1938— To: Secretary Hull.
From William C. Bullitt,

An account of a talk with Alexis Leger, chief of the French Foreign Office, on the Austrian situation. Leger said Austria's acceptance of Hitler's demands would mean the end of Austrian independence. He was not sure about the French position, but inlicated that neither Britain nor France would do anything if Austria were attacked.

Feb. 16, 1938— To: Secretary Hull.
From William C. Bullitt,

A brief account of a talk with the Belgian Ambassador, who had recently been stationed in Berlin. The Ambassador said everyone knew Hitler could take Austria whenever he wanted to, but thought Austria would be allowed to remain independent "for the time being."

Feb. 17, 1938. To: Secretary Hull.
From Prentiss Gilbert,
Counselor of Embassy in Berlin.

A brief cable reporting that Arthur Seyss-Inquart, newly appointed Minister of Interior, had come to Berlin and had been told by Hitler to clean up "Communist elements" in Austria.

Feb. 17, 1938— To: Secretary Hull.
From William C. Bullitt.

News that the French government was about to ask the Germans "the exact significance" of the Hitler-Schuschnigg talk, and to express France's "deep interest in whatever takes place in Central Europe." The British had already done the same. Bullitt said these steps were "mainly for the sake of the record."

Sayre to Get Jury Subpena At Gangplank

New York, Dec. 18 (NYHT.).—United States marshals will greet Francis B. Sayre, former Assistant Secretary of State, and his secretary, Miss Anna Belle Newcomb, when they arrive from Paris Sunday morning and serve them with subpenas calling for their appearance Monday before the new Federal grand jury investigating Communist spy activities and the theft of secret documents from State Department files in 1937 and 1938.

The marshals will be waiting at the pier in Hoboken for the Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam to dock at 8 a. m. with Sayre, Miss Newcomb, and other United Nations officials returning from the General Assembly meetings in Paris.

Sayre, now president of the trusteeship council of the U. N. and superior to Alger Hiss when the latter worked in the State Department, was reached by ship-to-shore telephone at 4:35 p. m. today and said he was completely surprised by the grand jury invitation.

He said he had heard of the indictment of Hiss for perjury "only indirectly" and that "I have no comment."

"You must excuse me," he said in ringing off, "I don't know what this thing is all about yet."

Truman Spends 1st Day in Weeks Without Callers

President Truman had no official engagement list yesterday for the first time in weeks.

Instead of conferring with a steady stream of callers, as he has been doing since the election, Mr. Truman tackled a pile of documents a foot high for reading and signing.

He also put aside part of the day for work on his State of the Union message, which he will deliver in person to a joint session of Congress January 5.

Ex-Curb Seat Holder Charged With Swindle

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—A broker who once paid $60,000 for a New York Curb Exchange seat was arrested today for alleged stock swindles which police said may total $250,000.

George Piperno, 49, who said he was president of the American-Canadian Enterprises Co., was released in bail of $2500 for a hearing tomorrow on grand larceny charges.

Four persons, police said, have charged Piperno with taking for his own use a total of $32,500 which they had given him to invest in stocks.

Spy Probers to Hear 2 New Witnesses

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A former Assistant Secretary of State and a former Communist who has asked protection from the wrath of his erstwhile associates are scheduled to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee this week.

Acting Chairman Mundt (R., S. Dak.) indicated yesterday that, in addition to these two, he hoped to call six or seven other witnesses before the committee. It is continuing its probe into alleged Soviet espionage in Government departments during the late 1930s.

Mundt said former Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre would appear Wednesday and Sayre's secretary, Miss Alla Belle Newcomb, would be heard Tuesday. His announcement followed an exchange of radiograms with Sayre, who is on his way home from France.

In 1937 and 1938 Sayre was boss of Alger Hiss, indicted last week by a New York grand jury for perjury. Hiss, on leave from his present job as president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, was accused by former Communist Whittaker Chambers as one of several Government employes who furnished him with secret documents for transmission to Russia. Hiss has consistently denied this charge and currently is suing Chambers for slander after the confessed former Soviet agent repeated it on a Baltimore radio program.

The former Communist who has agreed to testify if he is furnished FBI protection is George Hewitt, New York Negro who renounced communism in 1944 after several years as a party member under the name Tim Holmes. Members of the Un-American Activities Committee said he would testify before a secret session Monday

Although these members declined to identify the witness, the United Press reported from New York that it had identified him as Hewitt. Representative McDowell (R., Pa.), a committee member, was understood to have conferred with him at length in New York Friday.

The FBI already had been asked to protect the former Red by his employer, who said Hewitt had been threatened by his one-time comrades. Hewitt has served as a Government witness in several deportation cases.

Members of the Un-American Activities Committee said Hewitt would be subpenaed to come here, a move which would bring him automatically under protection of the FBI.

Mundt said meanwhile that he had arranged a conference with the Attorney General's office to try for an agreement on what witnesses may be questioned by the committee without interfering with the Government's prosecution of Hiss. The witnesses he would like to have cleared for questioning, he said, were Hiss, himself, Mrs. Hiss, Chambers, Mrs. Chambers, Hiss' brother, Donald; former Bureau of Standards employe William Ward Pigman, Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley and an unidentified employe of Aberdeen Proving Ground. Miss Bentley, a confessed former Communist, was one of the original witnesses who touched off the committee's espionage investigation last summer.

The acting chairman said all witnesses would be heard in closed sessions. He added that the committee hoped to complete its current investigations before Christmas and threw in a warning that the search for spies should not be confined to the top levels of Government.

"Any Communist could be a spy," Mundt declared. "We think he is a spy. The more important position he holds the more likely it is he is engaged in espionage activities."

Of the witnesses sought for this week, he said:

"We want to gather additional information from these witnesses, thinking it would be helpful in determining the extent of current espionage activities in Government, and also in assisting us in developing legislation to prevent the continuance or recurrance of this type of espionage activities which documentary evidence now on hand conclusively demonstrates to have operated in the past."

He referred to documents turned over to the committee by Chambers, who said they had been filched from State Department files in 1937 and 1938, for relay to Soviet Russia. The committee yesterday released for publication the last of 58 documents containing 114 pages of messages which had been microfilmed or copied by typewriter. Some messages were summarized in type or by hand.

The documents released by the committee were cleared by the State Department as no longer threatening to national security. A number of documents were not cleared by the State Department and will not be released.

Chambers' Wife Held in Death

MRS. WHITTAKER CHAMBERS, wife of the key witness in the Government's spy probe, leaves a police stationhouse in Baltimore yesterday after being freed in $1000 bail on a charge of causing the death of a 70-year-old woman in traffic. The auto accident occurred, Mrs. Chambers said, when she was on her way to a railroad station to meet her husband, who was returning from New York after testifying before a Federal grand jury

Soviet Spy Ring in Alaska, Kersten Reports

By The Associated Press

Representative Kersten (R., Wis.) said last night an "espionage" ring in Nome, Alaska, has been feeding information on military installations there to Russia.

Kersten, chairman of a House Labor subcommittee which has been checking up on subversive activities in labor, said he uncovered the information on a two-week tour of Alaska in October.

In Nome, he said, he found "Soviet officials right across from Alaska seemed to have up-to-date information on what was going on. They knew the number of men there, and the names of men."

Kersten said we have an airfield and a polar training school at Nome.

"How extensive the espionage is beyond Nome, I don't know," Kersten said. "I don't know how well the system is developed. What the source is, I'm not sure. But there's some form of espionage (in Nome); very likely Communist."

Kersten said he also found Communist "infiltration" in a fisheries union in Anchorage, one of our main Alaskan military installations.

He said he found a "rather important" Communist Party member assisted in setting up a union council there.

He said he "couldn't imagine" this Communist going to Anchorage "unless there was some good party reasons. It's entirely possible there might be espionage there, too."

Kersten is preparing a report on what he found, to be made public Monday. It will ask the next Congress, he said, to act immediately to strengthen United States military defenses there.

Kersten said it will point out the "increasing danger to Alaska defense caused by the imminent fall of China."

He said he was "shocked" by what he termed the present "inadequate defenses in the Alaskan area.

He said we need at least 16,000 combat men to defend our airfields there, "and we have considerably less than that there now."

Nixon Terms Probe Of Condon Case Unfair

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—A member of the House Un-American Activities committee said tonight the committee had made mistakes and deserved criticism, particularly in the handling of the case involving Dr. Edward U. Condon, head of the U. S. Bureau of Standards. He termed the committee's handling of the Condon case "unfair."

The committee member, Representative Richard Nixon (R., Calif.) made the statement while being interviewed over the American Broadcasting Company by Bert Andrews.

Veteran Convicted Of Miscegenation

Ellisville, Miss., Dec. 18 (AP).—A 23-year-old Navy veteran was under conviction today for miscegenation, and District Attorney Paul Swartzfager said he believed it was the first in the State's history.

The miscegenation law, which stems from the State constitution of 1890, forbids marriage or cohabitation between white persons and those with one-eighth or more Negro or Mongolian blood.

Davis Knight, who served in the Navy as a white man and married a white girl, was convicted under the law last night and sentenced to five years in the State penitentiary. He filed notice of appeal today.

Principal point at issue in the trial was the ancestry of Knight's great-grandmother, a woman known as Rachel who lived on the plantation of Capt. Newt Knight, a colorful figure in Mississippi history.

The State contended Rachel was a Negro. Several witnesses testified she and her offspring were known as Negroes. The defense produced witnesses who said they believed she was a Cherokee Indian.

Defense Attorney Quitman Ross said his appeal would attack testiony regarding "the reputation of people as being Negroes" without clarifying the amount of Negro blood.

Witnesses included 89-year-old Tom Knight, son of Capt. Newt Knight, who "seceded" from Missisippi during the Civil War and founded the "free state of Jones" in Jones County.

Tom Knight testified Davis Knight's grandfather was a son of Rachel and that Rachel was known as a Negro.

Attorney Ross said that Davis Knight was drafted as a white man at Camp Shelby in 1943 and served three years in the Navy, as a ship's cook. He was married in Ellisville, with the mayor officiating, and the couple moved to Laurel.

Classes Feared Law Violation

then explained any school patron who desires can make a test case in court.

Difference Not Explained

Almond said the released-time program in Virginia differs from the one instituted in Champaign, Ill., which brought about the McCollum ruling, but did not say in what way.

(In the McCollum case—in which Mrs. Vashti McCollum, Champaign (Ill.) Freethinker, asked the courts to stop Champaign schools from holding religious classes once a week—the Supreme Court last March 8 voted, 8 to 1, to outlaw religious classes in public schools.

(Justice Black said for the majority that the classes used both public buildings to spread religious doctrines and the public power to force children to go to school to provide pupils for the classes.—Editor's note.)

In disagreement with Almond's interpretation was Samuel H. Gellman, Richmond attorney who was one of a six-member delegation that protested the released-time program Thursday night before the Henrico County School Board.

Gellman said he believes the porgram is in violation of both the United States and Virginia Constitutions as well as the ruling in the McCollum case.

He said the appearance of the delegation before the school board was a followup to the petition of protest filed earlier by the 14 women of Jewish faith, all of whom live in the Dumbarton area of Henrico County.

Although the petition was filed by members of the Jewish faith, a spokesman said many Protestants and Catholics had also expressed displeasure with the religious education program in the public schools.

Included in the delegation with Gellman was Dr. Ariel L. Goldburg, rabbi of Beth Ahabah Synagogue, who said after the meeting with the board:

"We made our appeal on the strong basis of the separation of the church and the State in America and especially in Virginia. And we considered what James Madison and Thomas Jefferson had had to say on the subject.

"Of course, we are all tremendously interested in religious education, but we think that it's up to the church and to the church and synagogue to put the program through. To me, it seems rather insulting to say to the school, 'You do this for us.'"

Dr. Goldburg said he knew that many Southern Baptists, Seventh Day Adventists, Unitarians and some Catholics are opposed to the program.

Gellman said he did not expect a court test in Henrico County but that he believed eventually the religious classes would become the basis of legal contention in "some of the several counties in the State where the classes are conducted."

Richmond is in Henrico County but the city schools do not have the released-time program.

Dr. Minor C. Miller, director of the Department of Christian Education of the Virginia Council of Churches, said:

"The County Councils (of Religious Education) furnish teh teachers for the classes and no class is placed in a school unless it has been requested by a number of parents of children in the school."

He said "no child" can attend the class without parental consent and "the classes are not compulsory."

According to Henrico Superintendent of Schools C. K. Holsinger, the Henrico classes are held for a one-hour period each week. Children who do not attend the classes are permitted to go to the school library for a study period.

Dr. Roberts Accepts Call

Dr. Paul Roberts, pastor of Central Baptist Church in Decatur, Ala., will become pastor of Petworth Baptist Church, 7th and Randolph sts. nw., on January 9.

Dr. Roberts

The 41-year-old clergyman will succeed the Rev. James P. Rodgers, who resigned last July to become pastor of First Baptist Church, Winterhaven, Fla.

Dr. Roberts' call was indorsed unanimously at a congregational meeting last Wednesday night at Petworth Church.

He has served his present pulpit four years and previously held pastorates at Bristol, Tenn., and Johnson City, Tenn.

Carroll Council Concludes 50th Birthday Celebration

The golden anniversary of the Carroll Council, No. 377, Knights of Columbus, was concluded last night with a banquet-dance at the Mayflower Hotel attended by 250 persons.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, topped a list of Catholic dignitaries who were present.

John J. Deviny, United States public printer, and a member of Carroll Council was the guest speaker.

Other speakers included Justin J. McCarthy, past district deputy; Henry G. Catucci, grand knight; William A. Kehoe, sr., State deputy; Charles E. Marx, chairman of the fiftieth anniversary celebration, and the Rev. Kenneth L. Moore, Carroll Council chaplain.

Archbishop O'Boyle congratulated the council, which was named for the first Archbishop in America, Archbishop John Carroll, on its first 50 years. The Archbishop urged the knights to maintain their "intense obligation to the laborers, the poor and the underprivileged."

Deviny reminded the guests that a German Archbishop sponsored the first printing press, and the Gutenberg Bible, the first product of this press, can be seen today in the Library of Congress.

'Brick Wheeler' Awarded $25,000 In 'Hush' Prizes

Munster, Ind., Dec. 18 (AP).—Oscar Keith, 34-year-old brick wheeler of Munster, tonight won some $25,000 in prizes for identifying radio's "Mr. and Mrs. Hush" as Veloz and Yolanda, the dance team.

Keith, father of four, said he was "somewhat excited" by the windfall. But he gave the credit to his wife.

Keith wheels bricks about a brick plant in a barrow.

The contest was put on by the National Broadcasting Co.'s "Truth or Consequences" program.

Keith's prizes include 12 pairs of women's shoes with matching handbags, a complete home paint job, a complete home laundry, a $1000 oil portrait of the winner, two $1000 diamond rings, a $1000 ruby wrist watch, a $1000 gift certificate from a mail order house, a $1500 tractor, a year's supply of food for a family of four, a complete power-tool home workshop, a new automobile, a $2000 electric kitchen, vacations in Sun Valley and Washington, D. C., a spinet piano, a radio-phonograph, a $2500 United States security bond, a movie camera and projector, a three-year supply of tires and tubes, a living-roomful of maple furniture, $1000 worth of men's clothing, $1000 worth of women's clothing, and a 10-year supply of a washing powder.

Virginia Is Queried On Doctor Permits

The Virginia State Board of Medical Examiners has been asked what action it intends to take to "equalize border practice" in issuance of reciprocal permits to doctors from the District.

District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, secretary of the District Healing Arts Commission on Licensure Practice, said the commission has written the board asking when the State Legislature will meet and what "relief measures" the board will recommend to it.

Dr. Ruhland has protested the present inequity of the District Health officials granting "borderline" permits authorizing Virginia physicians residing in the nearby area to handle cases within the District, while the Virginia group refuses to grant reciprocal permits to District doctors.

At present the District Commission is holding up requests of three Old Dominion doctors for permits pending some action by the Virginia group. The Virginia board has contended it has no power to issue such permits without further action of the State Legislature.

Physicians desire "borderline" permits at nominal fees rather than pay a full license fee. Virginia now requires a license costing $50 plus an interview by members of the board of examiners. The District has been granting $1 permits to nearby Virginia doctors who occasionally had District cases.

Gales School Conversion Abandoned

The District Health Department has shelved all plans for converting the 74-year-old Gales School, at G st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., into a health center, Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, disclosed last night.

Dr. Ruhland said the funds earmarked in the District's share of the Hill-Burton National Hospital Construction Act money have been transferred for use in erecting the proposed pediatrics-crippled children's building and a laboratory structure at Gallinger Hospital.

A $106,000 contract for remodeling the closed school structure was awarded last spring, but was not signed by District officials after the Comptroller General's office questioned use of Health Department funds not specifically authorized for the project, in addition to the Federal funds.

Last night, Dr. Ruhland said the spending of more than $100,000 for renovation of "such an old building" is not considered "worth while," and he therefore has discontinued any effort to obtain funds for the change.

The structure was scheduled to provide space for department functions now situated in the Acacia Life Insurance Annex Building. These include maternal and child welfare clinic service, a pharmacy office and school medical inspection specialists.

were placed over his abdomen and right thigh. It was an hour before he was back in bed.

For Becraft, the skin removal will burn for some time. The surgeon said it will take at least three weeks to heal over. But he hopes the beer salesman—"not a volatile person . . . he just wanted to do it and he did it"—will be able to walk out of the hospital about Tuesday.

For the boy, it gave him a longer lease on life. The surgeon said "we're not too optimistic" about his chances for life, but the boy may live. And the operation did another thing: it cut down a lot of the constant pain.

Now, when doctors dress the burns, the lad demands: "Put some more skin on me . . . put some more skin on me." He knows the graftings ease the pain. The raw area where he was burned seeped "white hemorrhages," body fluids before the skin was placed over it. Untimately, the surgeon said, this skin will disappear and scar tissue and skin will replace it.

Michael has been receiving a blood transfusion daily. Since November 12, when he suffered the burns, he has had so much blood pumped into his veins that his own blood type has changed. To start, it was A-positive.

Friday hospital physicians worked out a mixture that is right for the boy—whole type O blood in the form of indirect transfusions with accompanying saline injections.

Michael will be 4 years old Thursday. He wasn't supposed to live more than a few hours after he arrived at the hospital. His surgeon yesterday said he had "no idea" when the boy can get out of bed, if he lives. And he'll have to learn to walk again.

Casualty Hospital doctors and nurses have teamed up to give him care around the clock. His father and Becraft have given large patches of skin to him. Many unknown blood donors have supplied blood.

Red Cross Seeks More Blood Donors

An appeal for more blood donors was issued by the District Red Cross yesterday, because of an anticipated increase in holiday accidents and the need for whole blood.

"This is a Christmas gift to humanity that anyone in good health, between 18 and 60, can give," said Rudolph M. Evans, chairman of the Red Cross Regional Blood Center's blood recruitment committee.

The blood center, at 1730 E st. nw., is open Monday through Friday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and on Monday night from 7 to 9 p. m.

During the past week, a total of 667 pints of blood were distributed to hospitals in Washington and nearby institutions in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, as follows:

District of Columbia—Casualty Hospital, 15; Children, 11; Columbia, 8; Doctors, 19; Emergency, 37; Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat, 1; Freedmen's, 18; Gallinger, 12; Garfield Memorial, 4; Georgetown University Hospital, 32; George Washington University Hospital, 102; Homeopathic, 8; Mount Alto Veterans, 32; Providence, 10; Sibley Memorial, 27; St. Elizabeths, 20, and U. S. Soldiers' Home Hospital, 1.

Virginia—Alexandria Hospital, 36; Anderson Clinic, Alexandria, 1; Arlington Hospital, 23; Circle Terrace, Alexandria, 3; Mary Washington, Fredericksburg, 44; Loudoun County Hospital, Leesburg, 6; Physicians, Warrenton, 5; U. S. Naval, Quantico, 5, and Winchester Memorial, 30.

West Virginia—Newton D. Baker General, Martinsburg, 30; City Hospital, Martinsburg, 14; King's Daughter, Martinsburg, 4.

Maryland—Glenn Dale Sanatorium, 20; Leland Memorial, Riverdale, 4; Prince Georges, Cheverly, 18; Suburban, Bethesda, 14; Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, Takoma Park, 5; Warren, Laurel, 1, and Hagerstown, 44.

(Also, Pennsylvania—University of Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, 3.)

Religious Instruction Radio Topic Tonight

Whether District public school pupils should be given religious instruction on school time will be discussed at 7:30 p. m. Sunday over radio station WINX on the District Roundtable program.

Participating will be Washington attorneys Leonard S. Melrod, E. Hilton Jackson and William Hannan, Dr. Madaline K. Remmlein, of the National Education Association, Gilbert Parks, of Protestants United, and George Donegan, Georgetown University law student.

Cripples Walk Again With Steel Hip Balls

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A Washington bone surgeon has reported initial success with a new operation to replace the human hip ball with a ball of steel.

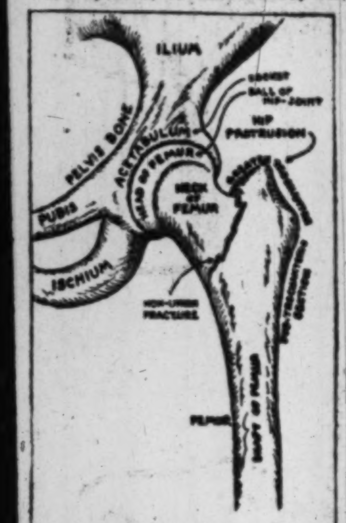
The replacement is made to restore ambulation to the aged bedridden laid up by old hip fractures and joints frozen solid by arthritis of the hips. It could also be used, he said, in surgery for hip cancer.

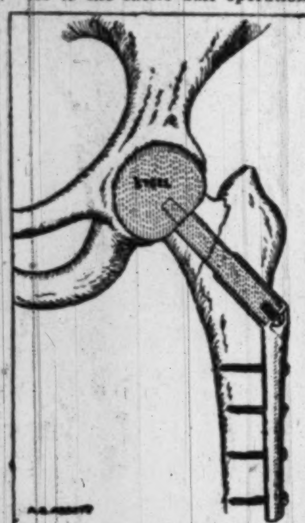
Dr. Leonard T. Peterson, assistant clinical professor of orthopedic surgery at George Washington University Medical School, reported the progress at the December scientific session of the Washington Orthopedics Club. Another speaker, however, cautioned the members against premature optimism in such operations.

Walking Again After Year

The new operation, Dr. Peterson said, has already been performed by him on six patients here. The first five, he reported, are now walking about their hospital rooms, though they had been bedridden for as long as a year before the operations. The sixth case, operated on less than 10 days ago, is expected to show similar improvement.

The metal insert technique, it was reported, is under study in several large cities. The work closely follows earlier reported success with hip ball replacements made of plastic lucite under Dr. Stephen S. Hudack of New York City.





Dr. Peterson said his operation uses the Jaenichen-Collison metal femural head, a three-part appliance designed about two years ago by Dr. Robert Jaenichen, Saginaw, Mich., orthopedist, and engineered by J. G. Collison of Greensboro, N. C. The metal is molybdenum steel, highly resistant to body chemistry.

Three Patients Demonstrate

Parading three of his patients before the bone surgeons, Dr. Peterson explained the surgical techniques of the repair. One was a Mount Alto Hospital war veteran whose hips had solidified with arthritis; the second was a 75-year-old woman operated on for an unmended hip fracture of last March, and the third, a 64-year-old woman whose hip fracture of December, 1947, had failed to knit.

In the operation, the bone surgeon said, the hip ball bone above the unmended break is completely removed from the body. This necessitates chiseling or otherwise severing the ligament teres, the tough connecting ligament of the ball and socket juncture.

In some instances, said Dr. Peterson, it was found necessary to surgically ream the deep socket to better seat the 11-ounce ball of steel.

Bar Fits Into Ball

Second part of the appliance, he explained, is a round steel bar some 2½ to 3 inches long that fits into an inset of the steel ball. Its other end runs through the heart of the bone stump remaining, and is anchored by a screw to the third part, a specially designed bone plate.

The bone plate, screwed tight to the thigh bone shaft, has an angled head of tubular steel that is run through the bone stump and encircles the steel bar at its outer and downward end.

Dr. Peterson said none of his patients had noted any difference from the added weight of the appliance. Nor does there appear to be any danger that the ball would ever settle itself out of the socket, he said.

Patient Develops Pain

His other patients, the bone surgeon said, included a 79-year-old woman on whom he operated September 14 after she had been confined to bed for a year with a non-union hip fracture. Although she can now walk, he said, she is confined to her room in Gallinger Hospital with other ailments.

Another patient, an 82-year-old woman, developed pain after a short period of ambulation and is still under surgical care, he reported. Four were Gallinger patients, one was hospitalized at Mount Alto Hospital, and the last case treated was a private patient, Dr. Peterson said.

Another speaker at last Monday's meeting of local orthopedists was Dr. Harold Bohlman of Johns Hopkins University Medical School of Baltimore, a pioneer in the field of mental inserts for hip repair.

Cautioning the bone surgeons that Dr. Peterson's operations have not yet stood the test of time (the first such operation was done in May on the war veteran), he told of his own attempts in similar lines.

Fears Pain From Metal

"After more than 25 years' experimental work with metal inserts," declared Dr. Bohlman, "it is my firm conviction that unions of bone and metal, where there is much pressure, eventually break down in pain."

He cautioned that no valid conclusions of success or failure of the operations can be drawn "until at least 18 months of post-operative observation."

As to the lucite ball operations at Columbia University's Presbyterian Medical Center, first reported publicly last April, Dr. Hudack told The Washington Post last night he plans to publish a progress report in the next issue of the American Journal of Surgery to show continued success of his first five operations.

Dr. Hudack asked, however, that emphasis be given to the fact that the work is still in a developing stage.

It would be dangerous, he said, to popularize such surgery before the techniques have been clinically proven. His first lucite ball operation on a human was performed only last January, he said.

Mental Hygiene Clinic Seeks Funds

The community mental hygiene clinic sponsored by the Georgetown Neighborhood Council needs funds if it is to continue its work.

A conference of representatives of the Neighborhood Council and the clinic committee was held Friday at the councils offices, 1101 M St. nw., to consider this problem.

The clinic was opened last May on a part-time basis, financed by neighborhood contributions obtained by the clinic committee and staffed by the District Health Department. It was hoped at that time, Mrs. Dorothy Harding, council chairman, said, that the clinic could be taken over completely by the Health Department, but so far this has not been possible.

When the clinic movement was started, the committee raised $700 "very easily" by solicitation of "a few" persons in the Georgetown neighborhood, Mrs. Harding said. With greater publicity given the work of the clinic, she believed that more funds could be obtained from a larger group for continuation of the clinic.

At a monthly cost of $100, the original funds have been nearly exhausted and more are needed "vitally," she said.

Logan School Defeats Pierce-Taylor-Hayes By 600 to 483 Score on Weekly 'Quizdown'

John A. Logan School, 3d and G sts. ne., in a closely contested match, edged out Pierce-Taylor-Hayes, 7th and G sts. ne., for victory on "Quizdown" Saturday.

Logan, which led Pierce-Taylor-Hayes 300 to 283 points at the end of the first half of the weekly quiz show sponsored by The Washington Post and broadcast from 10 to 10:30 a. m. over Station WTOP, increased its lead in the last half for a final score of 600 to 483 points.

Only one person on each team achieved maximum scores of 200 points apiece—100 points a question.

They were Joan Smith, 10, 6-B grade at Logan, and Samuel Stokes, 10, 4-A at Taylor.

Both Questions Answered

Samuel, who lives at 806 L st. ne., and hopes to be a carpenter some day, correctly answered "in the East" when asked in what part of the sky the shepherds of old saw a star at Christmas. He also said, rightly, that a beaver uses his teeth to cut down trees to build a dam.

Joan, who lives at 1934 6th st. ne., and whose nicknames include "Corky," "Shorty" and "Pee-Wee" ("because I am so short"), was asked to name three of the four freedoms. Freedom from want and fear and freedom of worship, she replied. Freedom of speech is the other. She also remembered that "Alice in Wonderland" was the title of the story of a little girl and her adventures in a rabbit hole.

Second high scorers were Barbara Ann Stultz, 11, 6-A at Logan, and Earl Robinson, 9, 4-A at Hayes.

Earl, who lives at 28 Myrtle st. ne., first guessed that the Atlantic Ocean is west of the United States, but corrected it to Pacific, scoring 50 points. His reply that gravity prevents us from falling off the earth was good for 100 points more.

June in January

Barbara Ann, who lives at 17 Seaton pl. ne., and was nicknamed "Beetle Boom" because she was such a small baby, she says, first answered "winter" when asked by Quizmaster Vern Hansen what season it was below the Equator on Christmas Day, but changed it to summer and thereby gained 50 points. For correctly naming "The Star Spangled Banner" as the National anthem and Francis Scott Key as its author, she was awarded another 100 points.

Others on the Logan team were: Anthony Plummer, 9, 4-B of 429 5th st. ne.; Dorothy Swint, 10, 4-B of 403 G st. ne., an alternate; Charles Barsley, 11, 5-A of 236 G st. ne., and David Brooks, 10, 5-B of 220 F st. ne.

Other members of the Pierce Taylor-Hayes sextet were: Mary Briscoe, 10, 5-B at Taylor of 1671 Rosendale st. ne.; William Galvin, 10, 5-B at Hayes of 1005 6th st. ne.; Wilbur McCottry, 11, 6-A at Taylor of 825 10th st. ne., and Jesse Anderson, jr., 12, 6-B at Hayes of 2002 West Virginia ave. ne.

Judges Listed

Judges on the show were the following faculty members: Mrs. Constance W. Sayles, Thomas School; Mrs. Irene S. Powell, Burrville School, and Harry W. Lewis, jr., Young School. The program originated at Garnet Patterson Junior High School, 10th and U sts. nw.

As the winner, Logan School was awarded a 19-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia. Pierce-Taylor-Hayes received a Rand McNally International Edition Atlas. Both schools received an Emerson table model radio.

Members of the Logan team received ball point pens, and members of the Pierce-Taylor-Hayes team, automatic pencils.

"Quizdown" is under the direction, of Mrs. Hazel Kenyon Markel, WTOP director of public service and education, and produced by Larry Beckerman.

Programs originating in the public schools are produced in cooperation with Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent, and coordinated through the District Public Schools Radio Committee, of which Clyde Hubar is chairman.

Percy Crosby Admitted To Psychiatric Ward

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Percy L. Crosby, 57, creator of the comic strip character, "Skippy," yesterday was admitted to Bellevue Hospital's psychiatric ward, authorities there said today.

Crosby, the hospital said, had lacerations of both wrists and chest injuries. His condition tonight was said to be fair.

[Crosby formerly lived at Ridgelawn, 200-acre showplace estate in Fairfax County, Va., overlooking the Potomac River. He sold the estate in 1939.

[The cartoonist's first wife, who won a divorce in 1940, was Alice Dale Crosby. Crosby remarried shortly after.]

Josephus Daniels' Relative Marries

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Miss Elizabeth Bridgers Daniels, daughter of Jonathan Worth Daniels of Raleigh, N. C., was married in a quiet noon ceremony today to Charles Bela Squire, Wilton, Conn., newspaperman.

The bride's father is editor of the News and Observer in Raleigh and a son of the late Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in President Wilson's Cabinet.

Squire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Hart Squire of New York City and Lyme, Conn., is editor of the Wilton Bulletin. The couple will make their home in Wilton.

ECA to Absorb Costs Of Handling Supplies

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 18 (U.P.). The Economic Cooperation Administration today announced it will absorb all costs in handling incoming freight parcels and relief supplies from the United States for Germans in the bi-zonal area.

This will reduce postal charges from 10 to 6 cents per pound.

A similar reduction for other Marshall Plan countries is being arranged.

Lieutenant Dies At Fort Meade of Grenade Injuries

By The Associated Press

Lieut. Charles Deakin of Danbury, Conn., died in the Fort Meade post hospital today of injuries suffered when a grenade exploded in his hands.

He was demonstrating the workings of the grenade to a group of soldiers on the range Friday when it went off

Sergt. Erskine J. Underwood of Iva, S. C., and Pvt. Robert J. Degraffinreadt of Silver City, N. C., who were standing nearby, were wounded.

Man Faces 5 Bootleg Charges After Raid on a Speakeasy

One man was charged with five bootleg law violations yesterday after an early hour "speakeasy" raid by police on a rear room at 1379 H st. ne.

He is Robert S. Dorsey, 22, of 1347 Wylie st. ne. Before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, Dorsey was charged with keeping, concealing and selling untaxed whisky and released under $500 bond for hearing December 30.

He was also charged with illegally keeping and selling taxed whisky before Judge John P. McMahon and was placed under $500 bond for jury trial January 14.

Seized was one gallon of bootleg corn whisky and a case of legally manufactured liquor. A 21-foot bar was lifted from the place but was smashed, police said, while they were trying to deliver it for storage.

Ten customers were arrested, charged with disorderly conduct and allowed to forfeit $5 collateral each.

Finnish Premier Threatens to Quit

Helsinki, Finland, Dec. 18 (U.P.). Reliable sources said today that Premeir Karl August Fagerholm's Social Democrat government has threatened to resign unless the Diet changes its decision to abolish bread rationing.

The government intends to ask a formal vote of confidence next week on the question. The Diet last night rejected, 95 to 81, a government motion to continue bread rationing as an anti-inflationary measure.

Comic Strip Characters Leave the Funny Pages to Join Our Party

'Brick'— Ken Ernst presents his Brick Bicker with a few seemingly effortless touches. You can see more of Brick in the Mary Worth strip

Christmas Cheers—Carriers and their guests send up a cheerful cry from their seats in the Columbia Theater. It was The Washington Post's Christmas party for more than a thousand paper boys. They were entertained by the cartoonists and their characters pictured on this page

The Caniff Touch—"Cheetah" is createated before your very eyes by Milton Caniff, whose pen made "Steve Canyon"

'Terry'— George Wunder introduces Terry, the blond-haired hero of his adventure strip, to The Washington Post carrier boys

And There Were 'Lucky Bucks' for the Carriers

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Six comic artists whose strips appear daily in The Washington Post yesterday brought their imaginative creations to life for more than a thousand of the paper's carrier boys.

Milton Caniff, creator of Terry and the Pirates, Male Call and Steve Canyon, was master of ceremonies for the show, which was held in the Columbia Theater.

Dudley Fisher, who draws Myrtle, put her in a bathtub with all her clothes on, while the carrier boys hooted derisively.

'How can anybody get clean with all their clothes on?" shouted one.

"Ah, but this is a family newspaper," retorted Caniff.

Fisher then drew a "head" of Myrtle, and three carrier boys —working under a time limit— tried to see who could come nearest to duplicating Fisher's lines.

Draws Boys—in Skirts

It was so close a contest that all three boys got $5 prizes—Jimmy Snader, 13, of 1235 17th st. ne.; Galen Hudson, 14, of 2327 18th st. nw., and William McGraw, 12, of 3410 Varnum st., Brentwood, Md.

Two other carrier boys came in for some good-natured ribbing when Ken Ernst, who draws Mary Worth, and Caniff collaborated in a drawing-board skit putting them in feminine clothing.

Harry Haenigsen was introduced by Caniff as "The man who knows more about you than you know about yourselves." The boys took a dim view of this statement, but had a round of applause for Haenigsen's creation, Penny, the personification of all teen-agers.

Allen Saunders, who writes both Mary Worth and Steve Roper, but is as much of a cartoonist as you and I, made quite a passable tree for the carrier boys. He explained that Steve Roper was hidden in the uppermost branches.

RONALD J. SHELTON, 12, of 708 Potomac ave., New Alexandria, Va., got a turkey with his "lucky bucks"

George Wunder, who draws Terry and the Pirates now, drew Terry for the boys, and later, with Saunders, competed in a game of "interpretation."

Miss Jeanne Warner, attractive NBC television model, slickchicked onto the stage to pose while Wunder and Saunders did their best. Wunder's was much more like Miss Warner than Saunders', who depicted her as a scraggly haired, bowlegged female. The appearance of the model on the staid Columbia stage brought pint-sized wolf calls from the carrier boys.

ELBERT L. MOORE, 16, of 209 Cromwell ter. se., got a cocker spaniel pup. His name? Why, Spots, naturally

For rapt Bob Altman, 13, of 26 Mississippi ave. nw., and David Green, 11, of 1000 Crittenden st. ne., both on-stage, Miss Warner had a pair of kisses. It was a day when it paid to volunteer.

It was a day, also, when carrier boys who had worked for new subscriptions, got a chance to cash in the "lucky bucks" they had received for their energy.

Top winner in a lucky buck raffle were Elbert L. Moore, 16, of 209 Cromwell ter. ne., who got a cocker spaniel pup, and Ronald J. Shelton, 12, of 708 Potomac ave., New Alexandria, Va., who got a turkey.

Elbert is going to call his new pet "Spots," and Ronald is going to help eat his prize for Christmas dinner.

Cartoonists' Stories to Appear

The cartoonists later were feted at a luncheon at the Hamilton Hotel by circulation personnel of The Washington Post.

And, beginning Monday, the public will get a reporter's-eye-view of what it takes to be a successful newspaper cartoonist.

Slated to appear in these columns is series of articles outlining the circumstances—some of them lucky, some of them the result of hard work—which have established these men as "tops" in their field.

Among artists who will be "sketched in"—and not with crayons—are Caniff, Elmer Woggon and Allen Saunders, the Steve Roper team; Marvin Bradley and Frank Edgington, who collaborate on Rex Morgan, M. D.; Allen Saunders and Ken Ernst, who do Mary Worth; Leslie Charteris and Mike Roy, whose other name is "The Saint;" Ed Dodd, of Mark Trail; Buford Tune, who draws "Dotty," and Harry Haenigsen, who thought of Penny only two years ago.

'Hey, Myrtle'—This little tomboy was right at home at the carriers' party. Cartoonist Dudley S. Fisher sees to that

Guess Who— He who says he draws as well as you and I, shows that he can. He is Allen Saunders, who writes Steve Roper, Mary Worth

She's a Teen-Ager—It's "Penny," of course. She just couldn't miss the party. Neither could Harry Haenigsen

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutz

Budget Bureau Orders Federal Pay Figures Given to States, Cities

Uncle Sam will make it easier for the States and cities to collect taxes from his two million employes. He will give them full information on their taxable incomes.

This new Budget Bureau order, which went out yesterday to Federal agencies, has special significance at this time, since both Maryland and Virginia are trying to collect back taxes against thousands of Federal workers who work in those States but live elsewhere.

In addition, the District is after other thousands of Federal workers to pay taxes here—employes who claim legal residences in other States. The Budget order specifically provides that tax information on Federal workers here is to be given to the District assessor.

At the end of each calendar year each Federal worker is given a statement on his gross pay, income taxes withheld, etc. The Budget order calls for duplicate copies of these statements for the use of States, cities and other taxing authorities. In return, the Internal Revenue Bureau will be given the income lowdown by States and cities on their employes.

The project is being handled by W. B. Hill, who is on the staff of Internal Revenue's practice and procedure division here.

NOTES: AFL leaders again have gone to the White House to protest against the Navy ban on the unionization of its supervisors . . . At RFC, James Daugherty, its general counsel, is chairman of a committee to outline a policy and a program for the big lending agency . . . At Justice, there's talk that David L. Bazelon, chief of its Alien Property office, is in line for a Federal judgeship.

EXAM: At the Pentagon depot, the Army has 10 women, all war-service appointees, classified as "storekeepers." They fully expected to get permanent status under a storekeeper examination that's now open. But a study of Civil Service's own sample questions shows the test will be composed largely of technical questions on radio, electricity, machine and woodworking shop equipment. Either the women are improperly classified or this is another screwball Civil Service examination. They haven't been doing work that would require answers to the sample questions.

CIVIL SERVICE: Three of its G-girls are checker-uppers on the commission's cafeteria. The girls check on the prices, selection of food, quality, etc. The girls report shortcomings to Commissioner Frances Perkins, who will see to it that corrections are made. Miss Perkins has persuaded her commission colleagues to eat in the cafeteria at least once a week.

HOUSING: Some of the enthusiastic public housers have their guns aimed at Ray Foley, the housing and home finance administrator, and Franklin Richards, the Federal housing boss. They charge these and other housing officials played footsie with the housing lobbyists while the President was denouncing them during the political campaign.

HOOVER REPORT: It's a good bet that its report to the President and Congress won't be made in early January, when it's required by law. This is the plan:

The Eightieth Congress must meet on December 31 to adjourn. At that time a resolution will be introduced to extend the time for filing of the report by perhaps 60 days.

The delay will give the President more time to study the commission's recommendations and to decide which ones he will support.

NAVY: At its nearby ordnance laboratory, a simulated air speed 5.18 times the speed of sound has been achieved in its big wind tunnel, a record. The speed is the equivalent of nearly 4000 miles an hour under normal conditions.

EXAM: Civil Service this week will announce an examination for printer-proofreader for openings at the Government Printing Office here. About 25 vacancies will be filled within 10 days after the announcement.

PAY RAISE: After all the steam that has been worked up behind the bill to raise the salaries of Federal executives, there's a high-placed move on to sidetrack the legislation. This is the plan:

To give top priority to a separate bill to raise the salaries of three officials—the President, Vice President, and the Speaker by January 20. A second bill to raise the pay of 200-odd additional executives would be taken up at some indefinite future date.

If this delaying tactic is successful, it's a good bet that no executive pay bill will be passed for months and the Government will pay for it through the nose by the loss of additional able but discouraged officials. To break up the bill and to do it piecemeal only invites opposition. From what the President said a few days ago at his press conference, he won't agree with those who would delay action on the measure.

The average Federal worker can't hope to get another pay raise until the executive pay raise bill goes through. Why? It is simple enough—the average employe has had at least three pay raises, the executive pay hasn't been boosted in years.

Meantime, Senators Flanders (R., Vt.) and O'Conor (D., Md.) will hold a joint press conference on Wednesday to formally make a report on an executive pay bill to the full Senate Civil Service Committee. It's a good bet the subcommittee will go down the line for whatever the Administration desires.

Parcel, Card Mailings Well Ahead Of Last Year

Shoppers Buckle Down for Final Stretch of Gift Purchasing Here

Washingtonians have mailed 28 per cent more parcel post packages and 13 per cent more letters and cards during the first 17 days of December, 1948, than they did in the comparable period last year.

That was announced yesterday by Postmaster W. Gordon Bell as evidence that District residents really are doing their Christmas mailing early this year.

Shoppers have finally buckled down to the business of buying their Christmas gifts, a check of department and other downtown stores showed. With Christmas only a week away and the weatherman promising snow, holiday shoppers jammed stores on the last Saturday before Christmas, and buying was reported generally heavy.

Sales of Christmas merchandise were expected to climb this week to a "zero hour" peak on Friday.

In the outlying sections, merchants viewed the holiday shoppers with mixed feelings. Most of them felt that more shopping was being done by residents in stores near their homes but that volume was about the same as last year.

In Chevy Chase a store owner reported that the number of customers served so far was an increase over the same period last year, he said, but customers are not buying as much.

Silver Spring store officials stated that sales were good and that there was no major difference with downtown sales volume. More persons they said were learning to shop in their own growing community.

An Alexandria store official said "Our sales volume and number of customers are up today. However, a lot of rural customers come in on Saturday. They are concentrating on buying useful or practical items and very few luxury items. We expect biggest sales next week, we feel customers are still waiting."

In the Bethesda and Hyattsville areas, store owners also felt that they were getting a larger share of customers than previous years but that they were insisting on better quality goods and limiting their purchases. Luxury items they said were selling more slowly than former years while sales of more practical gifts such as clothing were increasing.

Travel into and out of Washington also felt the holiday surge. Closing of colleges and prep schools Friday helped fill 60 extra sections on the Pennsylvania Railroad and additional facilities on that and other railroad, bus and airlines yesterday. One railroad reported holiday business not quite so brisk as at the same time last year. A big bus company found it heavier than a year ago. With Christmas falling on Saturday, holiday travel was reported spreading out over a longer period this year.

Airlines have added about 20 per cent more space to take care of the "Home-for-Christmas" rush.

'49 Masonic Group Elects J. V. Thomas

The Association of Worshipful Masters for 1949, representing the District's 48 Masonic Lodges, was organized last night at the Masonic Temple, 13th and New York ave. nw., immediately after the 1948 group held its last regular meeting.

Officers elected to head the 1949 association, which in the past has presented the annual benefit Masonic pageant, the Night of Thrills, were: J. Vernon Thomas, 4805 45th st. nw., Justice Lodge, president; Glenn C. Russell, 3956 Ames st. ne., Hope Lodge, vice president; Harold E. Miley, 634 Pennsylvania ave. se., George C. Whiting Lodge, corresponding secretary; Raymond K. Hancock, 2505 Branch ave. se., The New Jerusalem Lodge, recording secretary, and John J. Koopman, 4435 Albemarle st. nw., Mount Pleasant Lodge, treasurer.

James D. Foote, King Solomon Lodge, and L. Malcolm Graham, Warren G. Harding Lodge, were elected executive committeemen.

Presiding officers of the District's oldest lodge formed the organizing unit for the 1949 group. Dalton V. Brundson, master of Federal Lodge, served as temporary chairman.

At its last meeting, the Association of Worshipful Masters for 1948 formed a perpetual association with the following officers: John E. Strawser, 3612 20th st. ne., president; Richmond T. Zoch, 4805 Sheridan st., Riverdale, vice president; Walter L. Chism, 5037 11th st. ne., recording secretary; James M. Barnard, 3617 18th st. ne., corresponding secretary, and Howard P. Bailey, treasurer.

Camp Lee Soldier Hurt In Car Crash Dies

Pvt. Gordon J. Thomas, 19, an Army recruit stationed at Camp Lee, Va., died in Walter Reed Hospital last night from head injuries received in an automobile accident.

Washington police said Thomas was injured in Caroline County, Va.

DINGMAN'S NEW GENERATION—Three small girls play in the front room at 25 Dingman pl., while a two-week-old baby boy sleeps on the couch

By Ben Bradlee
Post Reporter

An alley dwelling at 26 Dingman pl. nw., outlawed in 1934 by Congress, and condemned three times since as "unfit for human habitation," is occupied today by three evicted Negroes.

No. 26 Dingman pl. lies in the block bounded by New Jersey ave., North Capitol, E and F sts., less than half a mile from the Capitol, and in the shadows of three modern hotels.

The structure is not occupied by choice of its tenants, who were forced to move there after their home for 14 years at Ball Court nw., was razed six months ago.

No wall is free from gaping holes where plaster has crumbled. Moisture seeps through roofs and walls. The four small rooms are lit day and night by lanterns when there is money for kerosene, for there is no electricity.

Cold Air and Pests

Outside doors hang askew, too small for their frames, admitting cold air, rats and insects. Floors, which sag from the weight of their occupants, are littered with lye to kill the rats.

Ceilings bulge. Wind whistles through and around windows, whose frames and sills are rotten. The walls are damp. The path to the outside toilet facilities is ankle deep in mud. The privy is a wooden outhouse.

The rent is $28 a month.

In March of 1948, when its four small rooms were occupied by three families, 10 persons in all, No. 26 Dingman pl. was condemned by the Health Department because of "insanitary conditions."

The children in the house were scrawny. Three had the measles. One was critically ill with pneumonia in Gallinger Hospital.

"Repairs" Were Made

The house was vacated, but the condemnation order was rescinded after "repairs" were made, and the three present tenants moved in on July 7. Inspection by a reporter last week and testimony by the present tenants revealed that the repairs consisted of the following: two new boards framing the inside of the front door, new panes of glass in some windows, hanging of an inside door that had become unhinged and the patching of a large hole in the kitchen floor.

Mrs. Emma Cobb, who lives in 26 Dingman pl. today with a sister and a man who refused to give his name, pays her $28 a month rent to James Gilbert, 53 F st. nw.

Gilbert rents the building from its owner for $12.35 according to the manager of the property, J. Merrill Conner of 218 Spring st., Chevy Chase, Md. Conner said he gets 65 cents for his work and forwards $11.70 to the owner, Mrs. Blanche Catherine Lockwood, who maintains residence at 1407 35th st. nw., and in Philadelphia, Pa. Conner said she had not seen the property for "a long time." Mrs. Lockwood could not be reached.

But 26 Dingman pl. is just one of 1300 alley dwellings which make up the worst part of the District's 40,000 slum houses.

Alley Dwellings Banned

Congress outlawed old alley dwellings, when it created the Alley Dwelling Authority in 1934 and decreed that no alley should be occupied after 1944. ADA was given $500,000 to raze, clear and rebuild all District alleys in four years.

The ADA had plans to rebuild Dingman pl. in 1935, but no funds.

The 1944 deadline has since been extended and re-extended by Congress. Today it is set for 1955.

In 1942 the ADA became the National Capital Housing Authority by executive order.

Today, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has authority to designate areas to be redeveloped.

Dingman pl. has been designated.

But the agency which has power to buy the land for redevelopment, the Redevelopment Land Agency, was not given funds with which to buy the designated areas.

Unfit "For Years"

William H. Cary, jr., chief of the Bureau of Public Health Engineering, said yesterday that 26 Dingman pl. and the 11 other dwellings in the alley "hadn't been fit for human habitation for years, and as presently constituted they are not now."

"The situation is critical," he said, "and it's going to be much worse, because about 10,000 temporary wartime housing units are deteriorating rapidly. We are getting more and more complaints every day."

The problem can only be solved by funds, Cary said.

"No matter how unsafe or unsanitary a building may be, it's pretty hard to condemn and evict when you know these people have absolutely nowhere else to go, because they are already at the bottom."

Mrs. Cobb has tramped the streets since the day she occupied No. 26 in search of better quarters.

None of the 11 other houses in Dingman pl. has electricity, gas, hot water or any form of central heating. They differ from each other primarily in the number of occupants. Some houses have only two people; some have as many as eight.

The youngest inhabitant of Dingman pl. is 2 weeks old, a baby boy who spends the endless days on a sofa under the framed motto "And a Little Child Shall Lead Them." The oldest has forgotten her age.

The buildings are owned by absentees, some of whom have not inspected their property for as long as 16 years.

At 28 Dingman pl. lives Mattie G. Colemon, who has forgotten her age in the nine years since her husband died and she came to the Nation's Capital from Georgia.

She is bedridden, in an unlit room at 28 Dingman pl., wrapped in tattered blankets and warmed by a single pot-bellied stove which serves as both a heating and cooking unit. The stove is called a "Birmingham Luxury."

One Room Heated

She is attended only by a 13-year-old adopted daughter, away at school for most of the day. They sleep in one bed in the front room, the only one they can keep heated.

The door which checks the cold air closes the room to light. The one window is patched with cardboard.

They pay $28 a month rent for this building to an agent, who rents the structure from the owner for $12.35.

Mrs. Colemon came to 28 Dingman pl. in June of 1948 after her home at 44 G pl. nw. was torn down to make way for a parking lot. Since she has not walked for a year, she cannot look for another place.

Walls are damp. Roaches are persistent. The cold water faucet hasn't worked since July.

Mrs. Mary E. Slattery, 3710 S st. nw., owns the structures at Nos. 29 and 30. No. 29 was condemned in 1945, but reopened after repairs.

She said yesterday she had not visited the property since before prohibition, when Dingman pl. was "a hangout for bootleggers and college boys."

"What Can You Do?"

Mrs. Slattery rents both buildings to an agent for a "very low price," she said, and has no idea what rent is charged the actual tenants. She said she realized conditions were bad in Dingman pl., but added, "If people choose to live that way, what can you do about it?"

The building at 27 Dingman pl. actually collapsed several years ago and was razed. The empty lot protects Mrs. Colemon from rats more than some of her neighbors but this advantage is counteracted by the dampness which seeps through the open wall.

Lucy Magnell has lived at 25 Dingman pl. for three years. It is warmer than most, with two stoves in the crowded front room, for Mrs. Magnell has a 2-week-old grandson and serves as the block baby-sitter.

The walls of her rooms carry framed mottoes such as "Teach Me Thy Way, O Lord," "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" and "God Bless Our Home."

The Futile Wars

But rats and roaches can't read.

Mrs. Magnell keeps a dog which she says subsists on rats, but she still has to declare war every month on the pests to drive them from her house. This war doesn't do much good, she admitted, for the neighbors also declare their own war and drive them right back. Roaches and flies offer new problems. Washing, especially for the new baby, is difficult with only a cold water faucet.

Mrs. Magnell says she pays $12 a month for her home.

Nos. 21 and 22 bring their owner $5 per month each. The present tenants refused to say what rent they were charged.

In No. 18 lives Mrs. Fanny Lloyd, who works 16 hours a day to support her household of eight persons, six of them children.

She works from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. at the Bellevue Hotel which she can see from the rear of her house, and she works from 5 p. m. to 2 a. m. in the Colorado Building. In her lunch and supper hours she comes home to cook for her children and care for those who are sick.

Primitive Facilities

Behind the Lloyd house stands the decrepit wooden out-door toilet, an often isolated island in pools of muddy water, and often clogged.

Small scraps of soap stand on a rotting fence. The back yard is littered with rusted scrap metal to be sold in hours of special need. Broken orange crates are saved for fuel.

Mrs. Lloyd described her own home as "not fit for people's dogs." She welcomes inspectors from the Bureau of Health, she says. "I want them to see what a hell of a place we live in. But we can do no better."

Mrs. Lloyd is buying her building for $2800. She pays $30 a month to the Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Next door is John Bell, who said he had paid $25 a month "for too long" to buy his home. A five-foot crack in the brick exterior runs between his home and Mrs. Lloyd's. There are five people living in his house.

Next to John Bell lives a young mother of six daughters. When she opened her door in answer to a knock, she said she couldn't leave the door open long enough to talk. Her children all had colds.

There is little evidence of Christmas in Dingman pl. In one window, serving as a patch for the broken pane were two imaginative drawings of mythical animals, but the occupant was more interested in their use as window panes than as expressions of talent.

Three little boys walked down the puddled alley whistling and singing "We Three Kings of Orient Are."

Priority Plan To Be Used On Egress Inspections

Buildings Deemed 'Most Risky' Will Be Checked First; 3-Year Job Seen

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District Department of Inspections plans to set up a priority system for checking the District's "most risky" buildings first early next year for compliance with new egress regulations.

Robert H. Davis, department director, disclosed the plan in urging building owners to obtain copies of the egress requirements, which become effective January 1, and begin bringing their structures up to the standards required.

Voluntary action by owners will save them "the headache of making expensive changes under pressure," Davis said. He explained that if owners await until inspection teams furnish list of deficiencies, they will have only 30 days in which to complete the work, unless they show "good reason" for extending the limit.

Took District Buildings First

Davis said an eight-man inspection team working under Building Inspector R. D. Kinney is concentrating first on buildings owned by the District government and have now almost completed work on all schools.

In addition, other structures attracting large numbers of people, such as theaters and major hotels, have been checked and deficiency reports are being prepared.

After this work is completed, plans will be made for the priority system so that the city's potentially most dangerous structures may be inspected first. A complete study of the District's 16,000 buildings is expected to taken another three to four years, Davis said.

Penalties for Noncompliance

The penalty for conviction of failure to comply with the egress orders is a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $100 per day of noncompliance. In addition, Davis may order use of the building discontinued until the changes are completed.

The new regulations, designed to prevent tragedies such as Bostons Cocoanut Grove holocaust and the Winecoff Hotel fire in Atlanta, will require major structural changes in District schools, the Board of Education was informed last week.

Association to Discuss Objections to Rulings

The Columbia Improvement Association will meet Monday at 8 p. m. to discuss resolutions protesting the egress regulations and the recently enacted multiple housing regulations.

The session will be held in the Fourth Presbyterian Church, 13th and Fairmont st. nw., Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell of 515 East Clifton ter. nw., association president, announced last night.

The group will discuss a resolution that both sets of rules are "unnecessary, unreasonable, unconstitutional and a burden and nuisance to homeowners, and should be repealed."

Members will be asked if they favor classing some homes as tenements, as the housing regulations specify for purposes of licensing, and also if they favor egress rules directing removal of latticed screen doors of apartments, closing of transoms, erection of masonry closets around boilers and installation of metal pipes to carry accumulated heat outdoors.

Bill Planned On Detention Time Limit

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.), plans to introduce a bill to define the "reasonable" length a prisoner may be held legally by police before his appearance in court.

He said yesterday that he was prompted by last Monday's Supreme Court decision that reversed the grand larceny conviction of a Washington man because the confession on which his conviction was based was obtained through an illegal 30-hour detention.

"In light of this decision," O'Hara commented, "the Justice Department and District Attorney's Office are up in the air as to just what constitutes a reasonable period of detention.

"I don't believe in policemen employing third-degree methods, but I do think Congress has the right to define what is a reasonable detention period under certain circumstances."

The high court had ruled in the Andrew Upshaw case. According to the evidence, Upshaw was arrested on a Friday at 2 p. m., but, instead of being taken into court on Saturday, was held for 30 hours for questioning and allegedly confessed to stealing a $135 watch from the home of Inspector Robert C. Pearce.

Though there was no evidence that Upshaw was "coerced" into confessing, the 5-4 majority ruling said that persons arrested must be taken before a committing magistrate "without unnecessary delay" or such a confession is void.

Area News in Brief

It's Either Too Hot Or Too Cold There

It's either too hot or too cold on the ground floor of the Andrew Jackson Building, according to Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Chalfonte.

Health officials reported to Municipal Court prosecutor that tenants on that floor have been complaining because of the ventilating system. It seems that when the temperature is normal on the rest of the floor, it is in the high 80's at the Baltimore & Ohio ticket office in the new building at Connecticut ave. and H st. nw. And when its normal at the B. & O., it's in the low 60s on the rest of the floor, it was said.

Chalfonte gave the building operators 30 days to remedy the situation.

Too Much Porch

E. W. Beck, 4300 Hillside rd. se., a building contractor, was fined $50 in Municipal Court yesterday for violating building regulations. According to Inspector Charles O'Connell, Beck built houses at 715-717-719 31st pl. se., with porches projecting 13 inches farther out than the limit in the District-approved specifications.

Burglars Busy

Burglaries at a private home, a store and a gasoline station were being investigated yesterday by Montgomery County police of the Bethesda station.

A thief evidently cut his hand breaking glass in a door to enter the home of William W. Robey, 16 Westwood dr., Westmoreland Hills, for he left a trail of blood through the house. He stole a revolver, a box of bullets, and four fifths of whisky.

A $300 cash register and $27.90 were taken by another glass-breaking thief at the Sycamore general store, 7027 MacArthur blvd., owned by B. Johnston.

Two tires valued at $24 were stolen from the gasoline service station of Charles R. Callison at 6913 MacArthur blvd. Police said he entered by pushing in a piece of cardboard substituting for glass in a door.

Md. Bandit Eludes 200 Police, 2 Planes

A Baltimore stickup specialist had apparently eluded an army of 200 police in Montgomery County yesterday.

He was chased into the county Friday night by Baltimore police following a holdup. His car was sighted several times by police, but the bandit suspect, driving at 95 miles an hour, eluded them.

He finally abandoned his car on Route 90, the Burtonsville-Laurel rd., near Burtonsville and fled into a wooded tract adjacent to the Wrenn farm.

Searchlights were called into play and hundreds of police and volunteer firemen combed the woods throughout the night. The search continued throughout the day and two planes were flown over the area to see if they could spot the fugitive.

Suspected in 12 Holdups

Baltimore police believe the elusive bandit is responsible for at least a dozen holdups in West Baltimore. They sighted him Friday night in a stolen car shortly after a Baltimore candy store had been held up and robbed of $200.

The chase led into Howard County and then into Montgomery County. Montgomery County police received a "lookout" and at about 11 p. m. Detective Sergt. Stanley Harding of the county police and Trooper John Collister of the State police spotted the wanted man sitting in his car in a filling station in the vicinity of Brighton Dam, which is near the Montgomery-Howard County line.

The suspect was examining a map, but he looked up and saw the State police car. He raced off. The two police officers gave chase, following him out Route 29 in the direction of Brighton Dam. He apparently swerved off on a side road and lost his pursuers.

A few minutes later, County Policemen Alton Duvall and David Bissett sighted the car on Route 29 at Ashton and gave chase. They chased the car to Brown's Corner, where it swung onto the Burtonsville-Laurel road.

The fugitive car had almost reached Laurel when its driver saw that State police had set up a road block. He spun the car around and raced back toward Burtonsville, where, in the meantime, another road block had been set up.

Again the driver spun his car around. This time he backed it into a bank and got stuck. He jumped from the car and raced into the woods, the police hot on his heels.

That was the last seen of him. Baltimore city police sent 15 cars filled with detectives to join the manhunt. State police estimated 75 police cars had taken part in the chase and the search.

To aid police in combing the woods, searchlights were taken to the scene by the fire departments of Sandy Spring, Silver Spring and Chevy Chase and the Bethesda rescue squad No. 1.

During the day, two planes, one from the National Guard and the other from the Civil Air Patrol at Fort Meade, flew over the area, but could not detect the fugitive.

Baltimore police said the identity of the bandit is known. In a "lookout" he was described as white, about 25, 6 feet, about 175 pounds and with light brown wavy hair. He was wearing a light tan Eisenhower jacket.

Accused Police Slayer Killed By Fifth Chief in 5 Months

Evarts, Ky., Dec. 18 (AP).—This coal-mining town's fifth police chief in five months was charged today with killing a man already under indictment for the murder of a former chief.

Harlan County Judge W. J. R. Howard swore to a murder warrant charging Isachar Combs, 28-year-old police chief and veteran of six years' Army service, with killing Bryan Middleton, 48, restaurant operator.

Combs was released under $5000 bond and returned to his duties as chief law enforcement officer of this mountain town of 2000.

Patrolman Lewis Deaton, 32, Combs' assistant, was in a Harlan hospital with a bullet wound in the hip, which he suffered during an exchange of gunfire last night with Middleton.

The gun fight, which Deaton said resulted when he and Combs tried to serve a search warrant on Middleton, started in the presence of many spectators. They fled.

Middleton was indicted several weeks ago on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of E. J. Baumgardner September 14. Baumgardner also was police chief at the time.

Mayor Elihu Bailey expressed the hope "we don't have any more trouble.'

Evarts' rapid turnover in police chiefs started last August 9. Albert Smith resigned and was replaced by Baumgardner. The latter was shot and killed September 14.

Several days later H. T. Collier took the job. His assistant, Orville Brock, was shot and wounded from ambush on the night of October 10. Collier resigned the next day, explaining he didn't want to get shot in the back."

George Sellers became police chief No. 4, but he, too, resigned November 11. His resignation followed his arrest in nearby Harlan on a charge of drunkenness.

Combs, who came here from nearby Breathitt County, took over as chief No. 5 a few days after Sellers resigned.

Mayor Bailey today said bootleggers have given the police department considerable trouble in the past. Combs declined to discuss last night's shooting.

Judge Sets $10,000 Bond In Rape Case

A 30-year-old truck driver was charged yesterday in Municipal Court with raping a housewife who is five months pregnant.

The defendant, Ernest Powell of 810 F st. sw., was held in $10,000 bond for action of the grand jury, even though only $3000 was suggested by the prosecutor.

Judge George D. Neilson, in raising the bond, said:

"There seems to be a wave of this kind of offense. It is becoming a community problem and measures must be taken. I know that high bond won't stop it, but it may prove discouraging."

The complaining witness, a 20-year-old mother of one child and expectant of another in April, said the rape was perpetrated only after Powell put his hands around her throat and threatened to "hurt" her.

She says that she was in her kitchen in the F st. address shortly before 11 p. m. Thursday when Powell, a social acquaintance of several months, walked in. Her husband, she related, was working nights at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

She said that Powell invited her to play cards in his room which adjoins her kitchen and that she went there with that purpose.

Rape Attempt Case Certified

Thomas Campbell, Alexandria bus driver, was held for grand jury action in Alexandria Police Court yesterday on a charge of attempting to rape a young housewife in her rooming house last Monday.

Campbell, who lives at 1309 King st., was bound over to the grand jury after a closed hearing in the Alexandria Civil and Police Court. Judge James R. Duncan said he ordered the courtroom cleared to "spare the complainant embarrassment."

Campbell's bond, originally set at $5000, was reduced to $2000 yesterday but no reason was given for the reduction. The grand jury is scheduled to convene on the second Monday of next month.

Auto Body Firm Suffers Fire Loss Of $10,000-$15,000

Fire of undetermined origin yesterday caused damage estimated at from $10,000 to $15,000 in a building of the Rosslyn Auto Body Co., 19th and N. Moore sts., Arlington.

The blaze, discovered about 6 a. m. by the occupants of a police cruiser, gutted the interior of a one-story cinder block building a short distance from the company's main office.

Principal damage, officials of the firm said, resulted in destruction of upholstering material stored in the building, although the structure itself also was badly damage.

Firement from the Arlington, Cherrydale, Clarendon and Ballston departments extinguished the fire in about two hours but were called out again around 10:30 a. m. when a passer-by noticed smoke from still smoldering upholstery.

'Unwritten' Law Defense

St. Louis, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, jr., held in the murder of Byron C. Hattman, his wife's lover, revealed today through his attorney that he intended to invoke the "unwritten law" as his defense.

His lawyer, Leo F. Laughren, indicated self-defense as well as what he called "the traditional right of a man to defend his home" would be the bulwark of the defense if Rutledge is tried for the knife slaying in a Cedar Rapids, Iowa, hotel

Dr. Rutledge, ill from poison he swallowed while detectives waited to arrest him yesterday, admitted he engaged in a violent struggle with Hattman after his wife's confession she had had intimate relations with Hattman.

Today, Mrs. Alvin M. Steinke, Hattman's landlady, said Hattman customarily carried a black-handled Commando knife.

Truman Joins in Greetings to Grandma, 107

Exira, Iowa, Dec. 18 (AP).—Grandma Kilworth carved herself a queen-sized piece of cake and received a letter from President Truman wishing her "peace and contentment" at a community party here today in token of her 107th birthday.

To the nearly 1000 persons who jammed the high school gym to help Mrs. Mary Kilworth celebrate, she remarked:

"This is just too much fuss over an old woman."

The stage of the gym was banked with flowers, including a spray of 107 red roses.

Mrs. Kilworth came to this country from England in 1863. For today's event she wore a dress made of material brought from England when she visited there in 1910.

She recalls the second election of Abraham Lincoln and his assassination, the impeachment of President Johnson, the advent of electricity and many other occurrences.

Chicago Girl of 10 Raped and Slain

Chicago, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Ten-year-old Roberta Rinearson was found raped and strangled today near a cemetery. She had been gagged with a piece of her underclothing.

Roberta

The blonde, blue-eyed child, mature for her age, disappeared last night. Her grandmother, Mrs. Ann O'Donohue, with whom she lived, reported her missing at 10:30 p. m.

The girl's body, which had been dumped from an automobile, was found this morning by a railroad employe as he passed in his car.

Coroner's Physician Dr. Thomas Carter said Roberta was strangled. He said a medical examination showed she had been raped.

Police said the girl's parents were separated, but the mother's whereabouts were not known.

The father, Robert Rinearson, left the Chicago police force late last year and now is a salesman. State's Attorney John F. Boyle ordered three teen-age boys taken to a police station for questioning.

Roxas' Daughter Is Wed in N.Y. To Countryman

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Miss Ruby Roxas, daughter of the late president of the Philippines, Manuel Roxas, was married at noon to Vincente Roxas in St. Ignatius rectory, New York.

The wedding was delayed until Miss Roxas had received a special dispensation from the Archbishop of Manila to be married here.

The groom, no relation to Miss Roxas, is associated with the Soriano Enterprises of Manila, a large Philippine business concern.

Attending the wedding were Emilio Abello, Minister of the Philippines Embassy, Washington, D. C.; Philippines Supreme Court Justice Roman Ozaeta and Mr. and Mrs. Jose Melencio. Melencio is consul-general for the Philippines in New York.

'Greetings, All,' Just Fits Inside A Christmas Card 8 Columns Wide

By Alfred Friendly

SAY, Printer, don't you think it's time
To set us up a Christmas rhyme?
And don't you think the day is ripe
To fuss with fancy fonts of type;
To frame a line in rich Bodoni,
That carries cheer to Mike Monroney,
Or else, by using large Italic,
Send Yulish word to Charlie Halleck,
Or maybe, trying 8-point Roman,
Convey our best to A. Smith Bowman?

Yes, Printer, beat that keyboard hard
And set us up a Christmas card
(Another day, another dollar,
Get hot and pound that Mergenthaler).

Desist for once from setting scarewords,
Or stories that engender swearwords,
Or tales of jails and hurly-burly,
Or heads like "Reds Get Surly Early," "Determine German Scene a Plight,"
Or news that Jews and Arabs fight.

(The yarns like those—we groan with the weight of them,
We've heard too much; we've suffered a spate of them:
The livelong year we live in fright of them;
To hell with that; good cheer in spite of them).

Break out the type with Christmas symbols,
The kind with pine trees, drums and timbals,
St. Nicks and dolls and holly wreath,
And pigs with apples in their teeth.
Then set them out in gay disorder
To serve this Christmas card as border.

Fascism Takes a Posthumous Beating—From the Christmas Tree

By Barrett McGurn

ROME, Dec. 18—To all the defeats Fascism suffered in World War II, there will be another to add this season when thousands of Italian children frolic beneath Christmas trees. One of Fascism's many vain efforts was to stamp out the Christmas tree.

The Fascists' grudge was based partly on logic and partly on preposterously extreme nationalism. On the one hand Fascists argued sensibly enough that Italy has a shortage of all trees, and particularly of evergreens; on the other, they campaigned against the Christmas tree on the ground that Italy had enough native Christmas customs without importing any from "the Anglo-Saxons and the Teutons."

The Fascist drive against the Christmas tree lasted more than a decade. At least one international incident with Germany, two rows inside the Fascist organization and a long list of misdemeanors occurred in the course of the Fascists' losing struggle. Much of the story has become known now for the first time.

Invented by St. Francis

THE IDEA of banning the Christmas tree occurred to the Fascists in 1927, five years after they took power. They pointed out that Italy had a Christmas custom of its own—the Christmas "crib"—which has flourished since the Fifteenth Century. (Cribs are groups of statuettes representing the birth of Christ. Few Italian families are without them. Some family cribs contain thousands of figures and fill an entire room.)

The Fascists added that the Christmas tree was virtually unknown until the present century, while the crib has been known in one form or another ever since an Italian saint, Francis of Assisi, reportedly invented it in the Italian town of Greccio, east of Rome, in 1223.

The Christmas tree, they said, came either from England, where it has been used since about 1840, or from Germany, where it has been in vogue for about three centuries. Some asserted that the Germans inherited the Christmas tree from pagan tree worshipers and that therefore the tree had no proper place in the most prominent Christian holiday season.

The Fascist government entertained the idea of abolishing the Christmas tree without discussion, but florists argued successfully that such a measure would injure their business. The Fascists accordingly contented themselves for the time with establishing fines for cutting evergreens in the national forests except for pruning purposes or by special permission of the Forest Militia.

Even Children Disagreed

THE restrictions were not enough to satisfy extremists, however. Enrico Galloni was one of a considerable number of persons who took pen in hand to urge sterner measures. He denounced the custom of the Christmas tree as "foreign spiritually and damaging materially." He protested that Italian Christmas tree users were really unpatriotic, snobbish people, that venders of such trees were "greedy speculators" and that anybody taking part in the Christmas tree traffic even as a purchaser was committing a "crime" against plant life. He called for a total ban.

Opinion among the children who wrote to Benito Mussolini on the subject was divided. Maria Rosa Spotorno, of Genoa, was heartily against the Christmas tree, for example. Dina Pavolini, an 8-year-old in a Turin grade school, was just as earnestly in favor.

Maria took the view in a letter to the "most beloved Duce" that it made very little sense for children to plant trees in the springtime while chanting "Giovinezza" ("Youth," the Fascist anthem), and then to "kill them at Christmas."

Maria's letter was received warmly. The secretary of the Fascist Party unit of her village told her that Mussolini had received her "nice letter" and that a campaign was under way to correct the views of persons who had forgotten the crib in favor of the Christmas tree.

Parents Got a Scolding

DINA received quite different treatment. She wrote her letter to Mussolini in 1937, a year after Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist Party, finally had got around to abolishing the Christmas tree in the same way he outlawed the handshake (in favor of the Fascist salute). Dina told the Duce that "one of the nicest" moments of the year was the one when mothers unlock the room in which children find Christmas trees laden with "bags of chocolates and Fascist Party parade uniforms."

The favorable reference to Fascist uniforms was not enough. Dina got no reply, but her parents were visited by a colonel of the Forest Militia who told them coldly in the name of the government to "use the really Italian Christmas crib" instead of the tree henceforth.

The incident with Germany occurred soon after the drive began. H. Stroheker, the commercial attache of the German embassy, protested that he had heard that the Christmas tree trade had been suppressed. The report was premature. The Fascists told him comfortably that they had merely established rules to protect the forests, and that even Fascist organizations were still using Christmas trees, "but with the roots on."

Arguments about the Christmas tree broke out inside the Fascist ranks in 1932 and 1935. The first occurred when the national commander of the Forest Militia ordered vigilance against unauthorized cutting of Christmas trees, and his Modena subordinate went him one better by abolishing the tree in his zone on the grounds that Mussolini "willed" such a ban, that the Christmas tree was "foreign" and that the forests should be guarded against depopulation.

Possibly embarrassed by his subordinate's advanced behavior, the militia commander protested to the government that the ban hurt florists and that, anyway, Christmas trees were not foreign at all. He insisted they were really an ancient Roman custom subsequently adopted by Christians. The commander won a temporary victory.

The other internal Fascist row broke out at Bologna after police reported that "there has been a noticeable increase of Christmas trees decorating the homes of the rich," and that reports were abroad to the effect that the Forest Militia was unusually generous in giving pruning permits. The Forest Militia drew up several long reports asserting to the contrary that the use of Christmas trees actually was declining in Bologna.

'Vetoed' by Germans

WHAT would have happened to the Christmas tree in Italy if fascism had survived is an open question. The war, in any case, finished effective resistance.

First came the German troops with their fond use of Christmas trees, and then the equally devoted Americans and British. Their example was copied everywhere.

"Not a courtyard where English and American soldiers were stationed was without a fir or the top of a cedar," Dr. Angiolo Del Lungo, editor of "Earth and Sun," one of the last of the anti-Christmas tree publications, says sadly these days, "To try to stop the Christmas tree now is useless and ridiculous. We confess it—the Christmas tree has won."

Del Lungo still opposes the use of cut Christmas trees on the ground that they mean an immense annual sacrifice of timber. He is using his publication this year, however, merely to urge that people concentrate on live potted Christmas trees which can be used four of five seasons and then replanted, or that they adopt the use of "composition" trees.

The latter are highly original substitutes made by inserting pruned branches into a notched pole. Del Lungo argues more or less convincingly that the composition trees really are better than live trees because the branches can be made to slant downward like miniature mature trees instead of upward the way baby evergreens grow.

Rough on the Parks

THE campaign for the composition trees seems, however, to have little hope. Post-Fascist forestry officials are not even sure it is a good idea. They point out that the only persons likely to use such trees are poor people who cannot afford normal trees. Instead of buying pruned branches at florists, such persons are more likely to cut them at random in the public parks.

Even leaders of the resistance movement against the Christmas tree, like Senator Luigi Gasparotto and Dr. Del Lungo, admit they will have Christmas trees themselves this year. At least 500,000 of the trees will be used in Italy this season.

Though the Christmas tree clearly is in Italy to stay, the fate of the forests and of the crib is far less terrible than critics of the tree foresaw. At least 60 per cent of the trees will come from commercial nurseries and not more than 5 per cent from park vandalism or forest thefts, Dr. Del Lungo's inquiries have shown. And nearly every tree, informed estimates predict, will have a crib at its foot.

DEER LODGE, Mont., Dec. 18.—There's a hustle here in Montana State Prison as inmates lend a helping hand to Santa Claus.

Convicts are busy packing and shipping thousands of toys for children who might otherwise be missed by Santa on Christmas morning.

Among these aides to Santa are numerous lifers. Warden John E. Henry says these men, who must always observe their own Christmas behind the walls, have helped create a Yuletide spirit in the prison.

It's a year 'round project, this toy repair job, but the atmosphere changes as the sentimental holiday approaches.

There is little talking among the men who work on the small articles which delight a child. But guards report a surprising change in the grim visages of imprisoned felons in the final days before Santa makes his long trip south.

Hard expressions turn soft when rough hands repair doll eyes and voices, put mechanical toys in first-class running condition, repair and repaint all kinds of old and broken toys.

Warden Henry started the project two years ago as a morale builder for his charges and for the benefit of needy children.

Service clubs and other groups throughout the State collect old toys and ship them to the prison. Inmates repair the toys and reship them to sponsors for Christmas distribution.

Repaired toys went to about 3200 children in 24 communities last year and this year's total will be larger.

Warden Henry believes his prison was the first to start such a project. He hopes others will follow the example because:

"Besides the joy brought to needy children, the program has worked as a morale builder for the men. A great interest in the work is shown by the inmates, who seem to have a great feeling of satisfaction in working on the program although they are in prison."

Crisis Is as Old as China Itself, as New as 'Gold' Yuan

WAR IN China has been going on a long time; so long that its essential background, its impact on the great mass of the Chinese people and its import for the future tend to become shadowy to many readers of daily spot dispatches.

Three of the top Associated Press correspondents in China have undertaken to provide a frame of reference for this titantic struggle directly affecting one quarter of mankind.

By Fred Hampson

Chief of the Associated Press Staff in China

SHANGHAI, Dec. 18.—Today's crisis in China has no clear beginning or cause.

Some blame it on Yalta, where concessions to the Russians put the Chinese Communists in a powerful position in Manchuria.

Some blame it on the Marshall mission, which tried to coax Chiang Kai-shek into a coalition government with the Communists at a time when the Generalissimo was winning the civil war.

Some blame it on Chiang, declaring that his military, economic, social and political failures stripped him of the popular support he once held.

Ultra-nationalists, of course, blame it on the United States for not giving more aid.

Some students of China view the crisis as a new phase of the impact of a modern West on a big, backward country whose ancient ways never have meshed too well with the high-geared twentieth century.

Some say it is part of a social ferment of the whole Orient, accelerated by communism. Some insist it is simply aggression directed from Moscow.

5000-Year-Old Roots

IN SOME WAYS, the causes go back to the early days of civilization when old Cathay—China's ancient name—began developing habits and a philosophy which still resist change 5000 years later.

In another sense, the causes go back to the days when the West first "discovered" China, and awakened in its people a desire for the things the "foreign barbarians" had.

In a narrow sense, the causes go back only to World War II, and its aftermath of friction between the foreign ideologies of American democracy and Russian communism. Neither had any root in China but both won some supporters.

Communism first appeared in China during the struggle for power which followed the overthrow in 1911 of the Manchu dynasty, which had ruled China with few interruptions for centuries. At first communism actually was a part of the revolutionary movement from which came Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang (National Party).

With the Manchu collapse, China broke up into areas ruled by independent warlords. They paid little attention to the struggling central government set up by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, and carried on by Chiang Kai-shek after Sun's death.

The Yangtze Parting

CHIANG set out from Canton early in the 1920s to smash the warlord system. His armies contained all revolutionary elements, including Communists.

Upon reaching the Yangtze, Chiang purged his ranks of Communists and chased them into the hills. With Nanking, Shanghai, Canton and the central city of Hankow in his hands, Chiang seated his government in Nanking and turned to unifying China.

Foreign capital was encouraged, and Shanghai developed into a great city with special privileges for foreigners. Foreign ships carried commerce up the Yangtze to China's interior. Foreign money built the railroads and highways.

The Chinese Communists were having a rough time, meanwhile. They were harassed by Chiang's armies and occasionally by a few unliquidated warlords who preferred Chiang to communism.

In the early 1930s the Communists set forth from southeast China on their famous long march to the north. They found refuge in the remote hills of Shensi Province, and set up their capital in the old cave city of Yenan.

Some students estimate that by 1935 the long march and the rigors in the semidesert northwest had reduced the Communists' strength to 10,000. Once established, however, they recuperated. Today the Communist Party in China is believed to number two million.

'Convinced' by Kidnaping

WHEN the Japanese moved into Manchuria and crowded into China proper, the Communists proposed that Chiang break off the civil war and that both fight the invader. Chiang held out, feeling that the Communists would use the respite to expand and rearm.

Not until the Sian incident, when Chiang was kidnaped by one of his own marshals and prevailed upon to turn his attention to the foreign enemy, did the war against Japan really begin.

During the war, the Nationalists and Communists accused each other of fighting the Japanese with only a fraction of their power, saving the rest of their strength against the day when the civil war could be resumed.

Whether the two Chinese enemies ever entirely stopped fighting each other is debatable. Certainly, after victory over Japan they were quickly at each others' throats again.

The Soviet dash through Manchuria in the closing days of the war put Russia in a position to help the Reds. The huge stockpiles of Japan's Manchurian armies were permitted to fall to the Chinese Communists.

General Marshall's futile mission followed. After he left, blaming both sides for the failure, the war flared again, and from then on the Chinese Communists slowly began to win.

The ravages of the Japanese war and the steady drain of the civil war were more than China's economy could stand. Foreign trade stagnated because China ran low on foreign exchange and imposed rigid import restrictions. Exports, which would have helped build up exchange, rotted on the wharves because China wouldn't allow foreign ships to carry them away and her own shipping was inadequate.

The United States poured into China close to three billion dollars. Extravagance, waste, mismanagement, graft and inflation rendered it of little help.

ECA to the Rescue

THERE is no question the Communists played smart. Seeing Chiang stuck economically, they began a war of attrition.

They avoided capturing cities, because they would have to support them. They instituted land reforms, which were easy because the Communists did not have to feed the cities.

Raids on government positions and communication lines kept the pressure on the Nationalists, whose economy went through a succession of crashes. The last collapse was failure of the "gold" yuan, the currency which Chiang issued in place of the worthless 12-million-to-$1 paper yuan.

Pegged at four to $1, it quickly slipped for lack of public confidence.

That failure very nearly set off a revolt against the government in the cities. Only a tremendous rescue job by the United States Economic Cooperation Administration saved the day when the big cities of Nanking and Shanghai ran out of food.

The Communists' strategy paid off when they made their big move in Manchuria last October. Weary, often unpaid, demoralized Nationalist soldiers went over to the Communists by the thousands.

Mukden fell, and with it the whole Manchurian corridor. Chiang had spread his forces so thin that the action thereafter was like the toppling of a row of dominoes.

Within a month the Communists were marching into the heart of China, threatening Nanking, Shanghai and the whole Yangtze River region where Chiang broke with the Reds two decades ago.

Change Hardly Touches China's Great Masses

By Spencer Moosa

Associated Press Staff Writer

PEIPNG.—China has about 460 million people. It is doubtful if more than 10 million of them are actively involved in the civil war. The vast majority forms a great inarticulate mass which suffers from the war but which, for years to come, will remain almost ignorant of any political change.

The farmer represents about 80 per cent of the population. He lives in conditions which to most Westerners are unimaginably squalid, yet he has little desire for the comforts of the big cities.

He and his ancestors before him have suffered from the march of contending armies. Conscription, oppressive taxation, famine, flood and pestilence are his lot—yesterday, today and probably tomorrow.

Old-time foreign residents say the farmer probably is worse off today than he was 30 or 40 years ago. Before 1937, for example, he might have had a kerosene lamp to light his mud-and-thatch hut. Today he cannot afford the fuel.

Simple, superstitious and hard-working, he accepts his manifold afflictions as the mandate of heaven.

Coolie Gets Along

THE farmer has been hit less hard than other Chinese by inflation, however, for whatever he gets to eat he must grow for himself. For the 20 per cent of Chinese who are not farmers, inflation is one of the war's worst scourges. It has produced striking results.

The coolie, least honored of all men, makes more than the college professor, most honored of all.

Take Charlie Yuan, for example. This American-educated professor at Peiping's National Normal College is paid the equivalent of $15 a month. He also gets allowances of two tons of coal for the entire winter and a 49-pound bag of flour each month.

Charlie's wife and seven children would starve if he did not have some curios to sell. Another professor, considered China's leading Shakespearean scholar, sold his treasured library to feed his family. Still another drowned himself when he saw his children going hungry.

Many prosperous coolies sport the elegance of permanent waves. It is just another mark of the Western craze in the coastal cities, where foreign clothes, wrist watches, fountain pens and thermos flasks are sought-after symbols.

The 2-Cent Millionaire

THE Chinese is by nature a shrewd trader, and artisans and shopkeepers, with goods or services to sell, keep up with inflation better than most people do.

The effects on the upper classes have been more varied. One man had one million Chinese dollars in the bank before the Japanese invasion. It was then worth $333,333. After three changes, into Japanese puppet currency, Chinese national currency and finally the "gold" yuan, the depositor found his money was worth 2½ United States cents.

Yet some of the rich have grown richer. These are mainly hoarders and profiteers.

A busy clandestine trade flourishes between Nationalist and Communist territory. Before Mukden fell to the Reds, a Chinese businessman boasted that he used to travel regularly between Mukden and Russian-held Dairen. He said he had to bribe three parties—the Russians, the Chinese Communists and the Chinese Nationalists—and also risk being shot as a spy, but he made good money.

One Peiping dealer went to Mukden for a last-minute haul but miscalculated the Communist arrival. He's still there.

It is only by such "bad luck" that his sort is affected by the civil war.

Many Think a Flight To South Inevitable

By Harold K. Milks

Associated Press Staff Writer

NANKING.—The Chinese government exists on a day-to-day basis. It appears incapable of long-range planning. Every official, from Chiang Kai-shek on down, seems to be holding out in hope of some unforseeable miracle that will defeat the Communists.

Possibility of a coalition with the Reds crops up again. All such talk, however, is strictly on the quiet.

There remain these alternatives: To fight to a finish around Nanking or to move southward and await a better time for attempting a comeback. President Chiang has given no indication which course he will follow.

Many of his closest followers admit privately that a shift of government "somewhere to the south" is only a matter of time. Chiang's official spokesmen continue to deny heatedly that Nanking will be abandoned, calling such reports "Communist inventions designed to cause disorder."

Yet evidences of flight are everywhere. Trucks, usually military, fill the streets, each crammed with household goods, families of government workers and officials and occasionally boxes recognizable as government files.

They are bound for Canton, the island of Formosa or other points south.

Panic and Passivity

NANKING'S million people wait with a mixture of anxiety and indifference for the arrival of invading Communist armies. Recently the military had to close the railway stations for 24 hours, so great was the panicky crush of persons trying to flee. But thousands more quietly continue their daily tasks.

In the Chinese Foreign Office, staff members pack archives for transfer southward. Outside, workmen are installing new traffic signals—as though no one intended to leave Nanking.

One minor government official told me, however: "I followed the government from Nanking to Hankow, then to Chungking. Then I came back to Nanking. This time I'm staying. The Communists, if they seize the government, will need men like me—and I'm tired of running away."

So many officials have been finding business elsewhere that a bill has been drafted to confiscate the property of any who desert their posts. Yet various cabinet ministers have admitted privately that they plan to leave.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Many millions of Chinese live in mud-and-grass hut villages like this one in the western district of Shanghai. War has burdened them with conscription and taxes for a decade, but political change might not affect them for years

Most observers doubt that Chiang can maintain himself as head of a functioning government if he is forced to leave Nanking. He lacks the popular support he had during the Japanese war, when he successfully fled to Chungking.

Neither is a divided China seen as a likely possibility. If Chiang should undertake to rule south of the Yangtze and leave the Reds to the north, observers feel it would be another Korea on a stupendously larger scale, with uninterrupted fighting across the Yangtze.

The possibility of a coalition with the Reds—without Chiang—has received recurrent consideration. At one brief period high government officials, fearing to approach Chiang personally to suggest that he step aside, sought vainly for some foreign diplomat to undertake the task for them.

U. S. Becomes Goat

AT ONE time officials thought that gigantic American aid might save their government. These hopes, built up during the American presidential campaign, have declined, particularly in view of the politely cool reception given Mme. Chiang on her aid-seeking trip to Washington.

Criticism of the United States is growing rapidly. More and more Chinese are inclined to overlook their own official failures and to blame Uncle Sam for all evils, both military and economic.

This flood of anti-American feeling was not even reduced when the Economic Cooperation Administration distributed rice and flour, halting food riots that threatened Nanking and Shanghai with anarchy.

Of more than 5000 American civilians in China, about 1500 have left within the past few weeks on advice of the State Department, and more are going daily. The American joint military advisory groups are being pared 'way down.

American officials in China admit grave concern over the future relations of their Government with whatever regime emerges from the present crisis.

Even if the Communists should form a coalition with the dissident factors headed by Marshal Li Chi-shen in Hongkong, it undoubtedly would be top-heavy with Communists. Such a government could scarcely be expected to be friendly to the United States. The Communists long have fulminated against the billions of American aid given the Chiang regime.

As a guinea pig, the United States has kept its consulate in Communist-captured Mukden, but the results of the experiment have not been clear. The Communists cut off the consulate radio, and it has nothing to do in a governmental way for a further test.

Several American businessmen have asked whether they would be permitted to trade with the Communists if Nanking and Shanghai should fall. The embassy replied that Washington has made no ruling to prevent such commerce. It said its warning to civilians to leave was not intended to influence "businessmen, missionaries and other Americans with substantial interests in China to abandon their interests or remove their representatives."

Some who had contemplated leaving have decided to stay since last week's promise of Marines to protect American lives and property in Shanghai if necessary. They had feared the chaos of a changeover more than Communist rule.

British Have Backing

THE British, with the biggest foreign business stake in China, are determined to stay and "see it through." Some Americans feel that the British have been given an advantage by the British Foreign Office's declaration of a hands-off policy toward the Chinese government. The British government also has indicated support for its subjects' majority decision to stay and try to do business with the Communists.

The Soviet attitude remains a mystery. Some observers believe Ambassador Nicholas V. Rischin would be instructed to stay in Nanking, looking forward to recognition of a Communist government; others believe he would be the first to follow any flight of Chiang.

The latter argue that Russia prefers a China in turmoil rather than stabilization of any sort.

Old China hands who feel sharply the general anti-foreign attitude of the Chinese people, predict that a victorious Communist regime would not like the Russians any better than other Europeans.

Whatever happens, it is a safe bet that the great bulk of China's 460 million people will neither feel nor care who rules them or what happens in the cities. It may be years before the masses in the hinterland are aware of any change in their already-hard lives.

Japan Assuming China's Old Role

By The Associated Press

IT APPEARS highly unlikely that a peace treaty will be signed with Japan or that the United States will withdraw its occupation force as long as communism remains a threat in the Middle East.

Highly placed officials, viewing the possibility the Communists may win in China, say that if this occurs there would be two reasons, at least, to delay a treaty and withdrawal of forces:

1. Without the occupation forces, and stripped as she is of any military or even substantial police strength, Japan would be an easy prey for Communist groups.

2. The belief has sprung up that democracies of the world need a bulwark in the Orient against Communism. By a curious twist Japan, the former enemy, is moving swiftly into that position—once held by China, the former ally.

Japan's location is important, too. She could play the role of the "unsinkable aircraft carrier" held by England in relation to Europe.

Incidentally, if the Reds take over the whole of China it appears likely now that the United States will suggest to American businessmen there that they undertake only such business with them as would be to our national interest.

That is to say—the Government would like to maintain the flow of strategic materials from China if possible.

'Athenian Democracy' To Be Tried in India

A NEW experiment on the lines of the city-states of ancient Greece will shortly be tried in the villages of the United Provinces (India).

It is proposed to set up village assemblies and village courts in settlements with populations of 1000 or more, as provided under the village self-rule act passed recently by the provincial legislature. Smaller villages can also set up such bodies by joining together.

A village assembly will consist of all villagers, men and women, above 21. Each village will have an executive council elected by the assembly. There will be one village court for four assemblies, each of which will send five representatives to the court.

Nearly 8000 courts are expected to be set up in the province, to hear civil, criminal and revenue cases within certain limits. The court will have no power of imprisonment, but can impose fines up to $30.

The village population of the United Provinces is about 54 million. When the scheme is put into operation, the province is expected to have 35,000 village assemblies, with an ultimate target of 50,000.

War-Battered Oran Adopted by Wichita

The port city of Oran, Algeria, one of the landing places of American troops in the Allied invasion of North Africa six years ago, has been "adopted" by Wichita, Kans.

The people of Wichita wanted to help rebuild the cultural institutions of some French city of similar size which was damaged in the war. Oran was suggested jointly by the French Ministry of Reconstruction and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Bombarded both in 1940 and 1944, three of Oran's schools were totally destroyed and many others damaged, its archives burned and its libraries ruined. Its museums are still to be rebuilt, and it lacks textbooks and school supplies.

Austria Will Develop First National Park

THE Neusiedler See, Austria's biggest lake right on the Hungarian border, and its surroundings will be Austria's first national park.

The state government of the Burgenland, where the lake is located, has sponsored a research committee for the scientific and economic development of the Neusiedler See area. Little is known about the lake and its shores because there are poor communications to the more densely populated parts of the country. However, this area is supposed to be one of the most interesting in Central Europe from the botanical and zoological points of view.

Fifteenth Century Aspect Of Kremlin Restored

Restoration of the Kremlin's medieval walls and its 19 towers is almost completed, and the historic buildings will soon look as they did when they were originally built.

Igor Grabar, a leading art historian of the Soviet Union, has superintended the restoration of the towers and walls, built between 1485 and 1495.

Some aspects of the structures which had been changed during the centuries of their existence are being restored to their original form. The narrow lancet windows of one of the towers were widened during the reign of Tsar Peter I; they have been narrowed now to conform to the original design.

The external decorations, such as the bear cubs and ducklings of white stone, are all restored by now.

Migration of 100,000 From Indies Proposed

THE eventual migration of 100,000 people from the overpopulated islands of the British West Indies has been proposed by a British government commission.

The proposal is to move these people, including 25,000 adult workers, to British Guiana and British Honduras over a 10-year period. This migration, it is hoped, would start a "chain reaction" of further development and settlement in subsequent years.

The British Colonial Office has explained, however, that even if the scheme were adopted immigration on any appreciable scale could not begin for two or three years.

Neither British Guiana nor British Honduras has the minerals or mineral oils needed for heavy industry, and the settlement proposed would be almost wholly agricultural. Among the detailed projects suggested for British Guiana are large-scale banana plantations, extraction of 3 million cubic feet of timber, cocoa plantations and the development of the cattle industry in the inland savannah country.

Student Village Will House Olympics Teams

Plans for a student village to relieve the housing shortage at Oslo University and to house competitors in the winter Olympics of 1952 were recently announced in the Norwegian capital.

Housing will be provided for 1000 students on a single-room basis. Three-story buildings will include groups of four single-room units grouped around a common hall, kitchenette and shower room. There will also be a large meeting room, dining rooms and other common facilities.

Public and private contributions to the building fund will make it possible to provide student housing for as little as $8 a month. Building is expected to start next fall and to be finished before the winter Olympics are held in Oslo in 1952.

Polish Patriot's Kin Thanks Gen. Eisenhower

THE granddaughter of Poland's great poet-patriot, Adam Mickiewicz (1798-1855), has thanked Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for establishing a Mickiewicz chair of Polish culture and literature at Columbia University.

The poet's granddaughter, Miss Marie Mickiewicz, now lives in Paris. She wrote the General that she was "doubly happy" because the new chair was established on the 150th anniversary of her grandfather's birth.

"My grandfather had two great ideals in his life: poetry and the brotherhood of all nations," she wrote. "The last war has proved to us that Mickiewicz' idea on international brotherhood was not an empty phrase.

"You have often had occasion to watch and appreciate the valor and heroism of my people. It is my hope that you will likewise appreciate, with all the sympathy they deserve, their ideal of peace. By establishing the chair of Polish literature and culture at Columbia University, you have created one more center for world peace and understanding between our two countries."

Government Institute Training Dominicans

Because the Dominican Republic depends so heavily on the export of sugar, cocoa, tobacco and coffee, the government there has established a National Institute of Agriculture to train young Dominicans to become agronomists.

An agricultural bank with an authorized capital of 5 million dollars has also been set up to assist farmers in the West Indian republic.

In spite of the emphasis on agriculture, more than 1500 new industrial establishments have been licensed in the past five years, and a new Department of the National Economy has been active in getting the support of foreign capital. Most of the republic's urban population is now employed by manufacturing industries whose capital investments are estimated at more than 100 million dollars.

Immigrants Flocking To Canada This Year

CANADA admitted almost as many immigrants in the first half of this year as in the entire year of 1947.

New Canadian figures show that 57,275 immigrants were admitted in the first half of 1948, compared to 64,127 for the whole of last year. Of the newcomers, 23,468 came from the British Isles, 8319 from northern Europe and 18,886 from among the displaced persons in Europe.

Dutch immigrants into Canada were more than three times as many as in the corresponding period a year ago. The Dutch total was 5820, of whom 4318 went to Canada under a joint Dutch-Canadian scheme of settling farmers and their families, and ultimately enabling them to buy their own farms.

About half of all the new immigrants settled in Ontario, about one sixth in Quebec and one tenth in British Columbia.

Britain's Colonies Have Spokesman Here

LONDON (AP).—If British colonies turn to America for financial assistance, they will have an ace operator on hand to speak for them. Sir Sydney Caine, new British treasury representative in Washington, is a Colonial Office veteran.

Government spokesmen deny that Caine was chosen to go to the United States at this time because a colonial expansion program is in the offing. But they agree that it is a coincidence.

Just as Whitehall was announcing Caine's selection to succeed Sir Gordon Munro in Washington, the government was pushing through the House of Commons a bill authorizing the treasury to guarantee any International Bank loans granted the colonies. Headquarters for the bank is in Washington.

At the same time, in other quarters plans are being made to link colonial development with the activities of the Economic Cooperation Administration. Most of the finances for ECA will come from Washington.

What 46-year-old Sir Sydney thinks about it is strictly a matter between himself and his superiors. He is a British civil servant of the old school and as such publicly expresses only the official government viewpoint.

Peiping's Changing Names Trace Past

PEIPING, reported engulfed by the Communist tide in China, seems face to face with a critical new page in its 3000-year old history.

Something of the city's thrilling story can be traced in its bygone names. When the Tartars swept south a thousand years ago, Peiping was called Nanking, Southern Capital. Two centuries later, after Tartar hordes had driven deep into the country beyond it, the name was changed to Chung-tu, Middle Capital.

Marco Polo's hero, Kublai Khan, gave it the great walls and splendor which justified the name Ta-tu, Great Capital. Subsequently known as Peking (Northern Capital) during the Manchu Dynasty, it became Peiping (Northern Plain) in 1928 when the young Nationalist government made Nanking on the Yangtze its capital.

Peiping has long been known as the most fascinating city in China. Some of this fascination comes from the mighty but ineffective walls which surround the Tartar city to the north and the Chinese city to the south. Much is due to the splendor of the "Forbidden City," from which foreigners long were excluded, the Summer Palace, the Temple of Heaven and many other world famous structures.

Freedom of Press Has Lost Ground in Past Year

A WORLD survey of censorship conditions shows that additional areas of the globe have come under censorship or other restrictions affecting freedom of the press in the past year.

The fighting in Palestine brought restrictions in several countries of the Middle East. The Russian sphere of influence extended into Czechoslovakia, bringing with it some of the curbs associated with the Communist method of operation. Foreign correspondents in Yugoslavia still were restricted in their operations despite the Tito-Cominform flare-up. China clamped down on some of her newspapers as the Communists drove south. Even in France there were threats to freedom of the press.

Generally speaking, this freedom continued strong in Britain, Italy, Belgium and Scandinavia. But there were limiting factors: In Britain, for instance, libel laws are so strict that some American newspapermen question how free the British press actually is.

Here are some highlights of a survey by the Associated Press:

Western Europe

FRANCE—Paul Ramadier, Minister of National Defense, announced recently he would invoke a wartime decree making it unlawful to write any story dealing with defense of the country. Among the indirect influences bordering on censorship are Government control of newsprint and a law prohibiting the publishing of a newspaper without a license issued by the Secretary of State in Charge of the Press.

The French Press Agency (AFP) is not directly censored, but it is supported by government contributions.

GREECE—Despite her long fight with the Communist guerillas, this country has maintained substantial press freedom. There is no censorship of foreign correspondents' dispatches. Sometimes correspondents who report things which some government leaders dislike are branded "Communists" or "enemies of Greece" by officials. However, no attempts are made to intimidate the writers.

Communist newspapers are outlawed because the Communist Party itself is illegal. Other newspapers are free except for the usual libel restrictions. There has been voluntary censorship during the civil war for security reasons.

PORTUGAL—The government reported recently to the United Nations that it has kept censorship within "prudent and moderate limits" and is justified in exercising supervision over articles on political or social questions. Little is printed that is unfavorable to the government.

SPAIN—There is an officially unannounced "responsibility censorship" whereby foreign correspondents are held responsible for their writings. The domestic press is rigidly controlled.

AUSTRIA—The pattern for handling news in this little country, occupied by four powers, is somewhat complex. American correspondents send their dispatches free of censorship over French and American telegraph lines. These lines run through the Russian zone.

The Austrian government has set up no barriers to the free entry of news via foreign news agencies, which use radio and radio teletype. The Russians have refused to permit American news agencies to establish connections with Prague by leased telegraph lines.

Only the four occupying powers can ban newspapers, and then only if charges of reviving or supporting Nazism can be proved.

GERMANY—Newspapers are licensed by the occupying powers, and these licenses are, of course, subject to withdrawal if a newspaper offends. Several publications have been banned in various zones. An example of restrictions on foreign correspondents is this: Americans cannot go into the Russian zone of occupation unless officially invited. Foreign news agencies operate more or less freely in distributing news.

Russia and Her Neighbors

RUSSIA censors the news of all foreign correspondents, including material mailed from the country. It also restricts the movements of these correspondents and limits the sources of their information. All newspapers and radio stations in Russia are under government control, and the news service supplied to them is a government news agency, Tass.

FINLAND—Still manages to preserve a considerable degree of press freedom. Foreign correspondents are not restricted, and the domestic press is free from preventive censorship. However, there is heavy self-control about everything concerning the USSR, whatever the color of the individual newspaper. Finland is bound by both the peace treaty and a friendship and military pact with Russia. A Finnish law gives the government a free hand to intervene "against a newspaper publishing such kind of material which can damage the relations with a nation in friendly relations."

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—Since the Communists took over last February, the domestic press is not free. Laws forbid the publication of anything threatening the state or bringing discredit on the government, on Russia or on the "peoples' democracies."

There is no opposition newspaper, magazine, radio or book. Free entry of news from abroad is barred, with only a limited number of persons permitted to receive English-language publications.

The chief weapon against foreign correspondents is the possible refusal to prolong the "permis de sejour" (permission to remain) granted by the Interior Ministry for six-month periods at most. The correspondents also are held liable for the truth of their stories after publication.

However, in a questionnaire distributed at the Congress of Democratic Lawyers at Prague in May, Czechoslovakia reported she has no censorship. She insisted the only restrictions apply to such general matters as trade, manufacturing and military secrets.

YUGOSLOVIA—Despite the split between Marshal Tito and the Cominform, there are many limitations on press freedom. There is no censorship of foreign correspondents, and national laws assure freedom of the press within the country. Nevertheless, the press is completely government controlled and publishes no opposition news or commentary.

Foreign correspondents find their activities limited by lack of free news sources. The director of information is the only channel through which newsmen may obtain interviews or official information. In the past year this office has confined its services to organizing trips to cooperative farms, arranging interviews only with lesser functionaries at least three weeks after requests are made, providing necessary official passes for trips to other parts of the country, and taking care of visas. For more than six months the director held no press conference on important developments inside the country.

Newsmen must depend on their respective embassies, whose sources of information are greatly restricted, and upon unofficial reports and observations. These things may be written freely, mailed, cabled or telephoned without restriction.

There is the constant threat the government may summarily expel a correspondent for "false and tendentious reporting," without further explanation. Several correspondents have been expelled in the past year.

Tanjug, government news agency, has a monopoly on news distribution within Yugoslavia.

Internal Control Only

POLAND—This country adheres to strict control of the internal press but interferes in no way with the activities of foreign correspondents. The government says it is interested only in true reports by foreign newsmen on what is going on in Poland, and no correspondent has ever been expelled for failing to fill that requirement. The government also contends it has never denied a visa to a foreign correspondent.

Foreign news agencies may sell their service to Polish newspapers or agencies, but comparatively little of their news gets into the press.

Polish newspapers print what they are told to print and leave out what they know the government does not want printed.

HUNGARY—There is no censorship of foreign correspondents' dispatches, but there have been frequent cases of "friendly advice" as to what should or should not be filed.

Postwar regulations permit only political parties to publish newspapers. Consequently, the dailies belong either to government parties or to other parties which more or less support the government's policies.

Lack of newsprint permits government control of the press through rationing. Publications of nongovernment parties and Roman Catholic publications usually carry only 4 pages, in contrast to the 4 to 8 pages daily and 8 to 16 on Sundays for organs supporting the government.

Middle East

ISRAEL—All copy of foreign correspondents is censored, and correspondents were given only civil credentials to cover an army at war. Movements near any operational front are forbidden. Personal pressure is attempted on both official and unofficial levels. The domestic press is controlled by the Interior Ministry.

EGYPT—Foreign correspondents' dispatches have been censored since the Egyptian army began fighting Zionists in Palestine in May. The domestic press is censored. Foreign news services must be self-censored in conformity with government rules. Similar conditions exist in some other Arab countries.

TURKEY—Foreign correspondents are not restricted in their activities and their dispatches are not censored. Generally speaking, the domestic press is free.

Orient

CHINA—There is no censorship of foreign correspondents' dispatches, but various pressures are exerted to get a "better press" abroad. All completely independent Chinese papers have been shut down, but the two foreign-owned, English language papers in Shanghai criticize the government.

JAPAN—There is no censorship of foreign correspondents' dispatches, but United States Army public information officers frequently withhold stories of what they consider a derogatory nature. The native press is not censored prior to publication, but SCAP continues postcensorship.

INDIA—Foreign correspondents' dispatches are not censored, but there is some personal pressure on correspondents by officials. The domestic press is technically free.

PAKISTAN—Dispatches leaving the country are censored regularly. The domestic press is virtually free.

BURMA—Open censorship of outgoing dispatches was imposed September 27; prior to that, censorship was secret. For the past year no correspondent has been able to interview government officials. The local press is under government pressure to report news favoring the government.

KOREA—There is no direct censorship in the American-occupied south. President Syngman Rhee has said the press is free to criticize public officials in editorials but not in news stories. Korean officials talk freely to foreign correspondents and make no effort to prevent the movement of news to other countries.

SIAM—Foreign correspondents' dispatches are not censored. The government has proposed a licensing plan for newspapers which could result in censorship and even suspension.

INDO-CHINA—Censorship apparently is confined to military information; foreign correspondents' dispatches on political matters go through untouched. The domestic press is rigorously controlled.

INDONESIA—In the Dutch-controlled area, outgoing cables are known to be reviewed by government officials; Communist papers are outlawed, but mildly Republican papers still publish. In the Republican area, no antigovernment papers function but foreign correspondents operate freely.

SINGAPORE AND MALAYAN FEDERATION—Foreign correspondents operate freely. Newspapers must have government permission to operate, but licensing is largely a formality.

Argentina doesn't censor foreign correspondents' dispatches, but President Peron has attacked the correspondents in public statements, especially United States newsmen

In Nicaragua, General Somoza, the War Minister and "strong man," personally censors all outgoing press dispatches. Newspapers are not permitted to attack him directly

Romulo Gallegos, then President of Venezuela, suspended freedom of the press November 20. The suspension was continued by the military junta which ousted him four days later

Western Hemisphere

CANADA—No visible controls over the press.

MEXICO—Newspapers appear reluctant to attack the government as a whole, but take cracks at separate officials and branches of the government.

ARGENTINA—No censorship of foreign correspondents, but they must register. The domestic press is free in theory but not in practice; publications of the leading opposition parties do not appear any more or do so clandestinely.

CHILE—"Blind" censorship, where correspondents do not know whether their dispatches are passed, killed or changed, was applied to outgoing dispatches after the announcement of an abortive plot against the government. The government has broad powers to suspend or punish newspapers and radio stations, and Chile's six Communist publications have died as a result of the outlawing of the party.

PERU—Blind censorship also prevailed in Peru during the recent revolution which overthrew the government.

VENEZUELA—Constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and assembly were suspended November 20 when political tension gripped the country. Prior to that there was no censorship.

BRAZIL—No censorship, but the Communist Party and its press are outlawed.

URUGUAY—Press freedom is a characteristic of Uruguay's democracy.

HONDURAS—There is blind censorship by a censor who cannot read English. No criticism of the government may be transmitted by cable or radio. The government impedes distribution of liberal newspapers.

GUATEMALA—Outgoing dispatches are censored to eliminate criticism of the country.

EL SALVADOR—Criticism of the government in cable and radio messages is not permitted.

NICARAGUA—General Somoza personally censors all outgoing dispatches. Newspapers may not attack Somoza or the government directly.

HAITI—Two opposition newspapers were suspended recently.

Australasia

TRADITIONAL press freedom prevails in Australia and New Zealand.

7 Lines Spell Judicial Murder

A Better Obituary for Csornoky

By Hal Lehrman

PARIS, (By Air).—A seven-line dispatch from Budapest laconically announces that Victor Csornoky was hanged in a Hungarian prisonyard at 7 a. m. last Tuesday. Victor Csornoky, former Hungarian Counsellor of Legation in Washington and Minister in Cairo, deserves a handsomer obituary than that. This writer knew Csornoky well—and knows that Csornoky's death is a plain case of judicial murder.

The executioner of the Communist-ruled "Democratic Hungarian People's Republic" did not slip a noose around Csornoky's neck the other morning because Csornoky was guilty of "treason, pro-American and pro-British espionage, anti-democratic activity and blackmarket currency dealings." Csornoky died, at the age of 29, because of two entirely different crimes.

First, he was a junior leader of a political party which once defeated the Communists in a free and fair election. Second, he was married to the daughter of Zoltan Tildy, the sad-faced Calvinist pastor who was chief of Csornoky's party, and, until last June, the non-Communist President of Communist Hungary.

When Csornoky was arrested, Tildy was compelled to resign. The son-in-law's execution simply makes the old man's resignation stick.

Bayonets vs. Ballots

I FIRST MET young Csornoky in Budapest in November, 1945. He was then political secretary of the Smallholders Party. This was the strongest postwar party in the country. Its leaders had fought the Hungarian Fascists during the war and had been harried and jailed by the German Nazis. The only trouble with the party, from a "democratic" point of view, was that it was not Communist.

This may have been the reason why, a few days after I made Csornoky's acquaintance, in the first and only free elections permitted under the Russians throughout "liberated" Eastern Europe, his party won a landslide 57 per cent majority. The Communists, heading a "People's Front" combination with two fellow-traveling parties, received a handsome 17 per cent.

Despite this, the Communists (who had the million bayonets of the Soviet occupation army in Hungary "voting" for them) took half the seats in the cabinet. But the Communists knew they were not yet ripe enough to grab total power openly. So they allowed the installation of Csornoky's father-in-law as president of the newly proclaimed Hungarian Republic. Then they devoted themselves, for the next 2½ years, to strengthening their grip on the police, the army, the civil service and the government sufficiently to get rid of President Tildy and the last vestige of Smallholder influence.

Tildy was a classic "Henry Wallace" type. Also he was a little dazzled by the splendors and comforts of his high office.

I asked him once why he was aiding and abetting the Communist transformation of Hungary into a totalitarian, Soviet-puppet state. He replied that Hungary had to "get along" with the Russians. As soon as the Communists removed all "fascist" elements and insured themselves against "counter-revolution," he told me solemnly, the Russians would become "reasonable."

Victor Csornoky was an accidental victim of his distinguished kinsman's folly. From the beginning the Communists had started building up a "case" against Csornoky in order to have something on Tildy when Tildy had outlived his usefulness as a non-Communist screen for the Communist march to absolute power.

As early as 1946 the Communists were spreading rumors of Csornoky's alleged black-market activities. This was at a time when the Csornokys and Tildys were living in modest Budapest flats while the Communist bosses were making fortunes from black-market contraband smuggled across the Rumanian, Czechoslovak and Austrian frontiers.

VICTOR CSORNOKY
. . . A roly-poly novice

'Escape' to Cairo

CSORNOKY managed to get away on diplomatic assignment to Washington. It looked like a safe mission, but his perfectly normal contacts with Anglo-American officials in the line of duty presumably became the basis of later charges that he was a "foreign spy."

When he was recalled to Budapest, he went back in the face of a renewed Communist whispering campaign against him. But he assured me calmly the last time I saw him in New York that they wouldn't dare touch him. They had no evidence against him, he said, while he had "plenty on them."

Csornoky's mistake was to think the Communists needed real evidence to make an invented indictment hold good. The next I heard from him was in a letter postmarked Cairo. He had had a lot of trouble in Budapest, Csornoky wrote me, but had somehow succeeded in getting out whole again, this time as Minister to Egypt. "For the time being," he added prophetically, "Hungary still has at least one democratic representative abroad."

That was the last word I ever received from Victor Csornoky. This summer he was again recalled to Budapest. Csornoky obeyed because, with his father-in-law sitting in the Presidential Palace, he could not refuse without embarrassing the Chief of State.

Immediately after his arrival, Csornoky was arrested and charged with every crime of Fascist sedition in the Communist book: Among other things, he was accused of conspiring to "abduct" Tildy out of Hungary. The latter denied any knowledge of the plot, but resigned, which was exactly what the Communists wanted. Ironically, Tildy was forced even in his resignation letter to denounce his son-in-law and reaffirm his loyalty to the "People's Democracy."

A "Socialist" named Arpad Szakasits, who had hidden in a Budapest church during the war while the real Socialist leaders were in German concentration camps, became the new President. Former President Tildy's son-in-law was sentenced to death by a Communist lynch court. Szakasits declined to commute the sentence, and the "Supreme Court" of Hungary, entirely controlled by the Communists, rejected all appeals.

Petkov Knew Peril

THE CASE of Victor Csornoky is the latest in a long series of judicial murders committed in Russia's Europe since the Communists took over. In a way, it is reminiscent of the case of Nikola Petkov, Bulgarian Democratic Peasant Party leader.

Petkov was arrested four times by the Nazis during the war. He took part in the coup d'etat which brought the Red army into Bulgaria without the firing of a shot. He was a hero of the resistance, by the Communists' own admission at the time of the liberation. But when Petkov refused to be a stooge for the Communists, he was forced out of the liberation government.

Petkov was wiser and more clairvoyant than Csornoky. The last time I saw the Bulgarian leader, at a secret interview late one night in 1946 outside Sofia, he told me that the Communists would "dispose" of him eventually, but that "they will do it legally." A year later he was indicted on bogus charges of "espionage and conspiracy with the Fascist western powers," tried, condemned and hanged.

Poor Csornoky was no Petkov. Csornoky was a fat, roly-poly, light-hearted novice in politics, no seasoned veteran like the great Bulgarian, and too young to have made the mark that made Petkov's distinction. But Csornoky was an obstacle to Communist power and, like Petkov—and Romania's imprisoned Juliu Maniu and many others—he has become a martyr to freedom.

Cannon's Already Had The Russian Brushoff

By George Bria
Associated Press Staff Writer

WIESBADEN, Germany, Dec. 18.—A fighting general with first-hand knowledge of the Russians, leads the United States Air Force in Europe.

Lieut. Gen. John K. Cannon, who took over this vital command from Lieut. Gen. Curtis LeMay last October, learned about the Russians in the summer of 1944. Cannon then commanded the Mediterranean Allied Tactical Air Force. He was sent to Moscow to coordinate the over-all air effort against the Germans. The attempt was notably unsuccessful.

Cannon is taciturn today about his experience with the Soviets. He spent a couple of weeks in Russia, including some time at the front. He visited a number of air bases and got a polite brushoff when he tried to fly one of their planes.

"I wanted to fly a Stormovik fighter," he recalls. "The Russians at the field said they had orders to see that nothing happened to me."

The 56-year-old, short, blue-eyed Cannon is a General Patton of the air, leading his men in combat. In the invasion of Sicily in the summer of 1943, he flew a P-51 fighter and chalked up a record as the only man who ever successfully "ditched" one.

He brought the swift craft down about 300 yards from the coast of Sicily and swam ashore. He was then 51.

Cannon knows the best and the worst about flying. He had two crashes as a fighter pilot in the States. He brought one plane down on one wing and smashed his face. Plastic surgery fixed it.

Agricultural Graduate

CANNON was born at Salt Lake City March 9, 1892, of Mormon parents. His father was a lawyer. He was graduated from Utah Agricultural College in 1914. Three years later he was appointed a second lieutenant in the Infantry Reserve.

He spent the First World War in the United States and entered the Air Service Pilots School in 1921 "because I liked flying." A year later he was appointed director of flying at the newly formed advanced flying school at Kelly Field, Tex.

Cannon took a breather from flying in 1938 to serve as chief of the United States military mission to Argentina. He returned three years later with a fluent knowledge of Spanish. After commanding the First Interceptor Command at Mitchel Field at the outbreak of war, he was sent overseas in 1942.

After leading the Twelfth Air Support Command in the invasion of North Africa, he advanced throughout the Mediterranean campaign, winding up as commander in chief of all Allied air forces in the theater. When the war ended in 1945, he was appointed commander of all U. S. Air Forces in Europe. He returned to the States in 1946 to take over the Air Training Command at Barkedale Field, La.

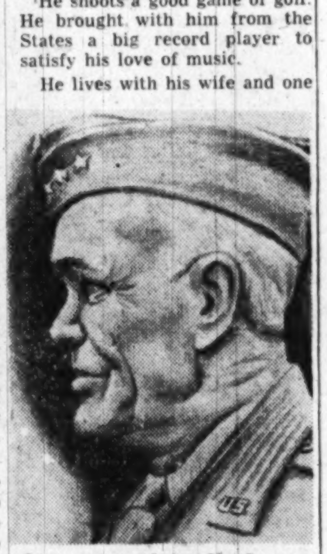
Cannon came back to Europe in October to find the Air Force engaged in the back-breaking job of feeding Berlin. The airlift was already highly organized under LeMay, who went home to head the Strategic Air Command.

At Home to EMs

CANNON is known to his subordinates as a moderate, temperate man with a love for practical joking. One of his favorite tricks is to rub his shoes on the rug and communicate an electric shock to the ear of an unsuspecting aide.

He shoots a good game of golf. He brought with him from the States a big record player to satisfy his love of music.

He lives with his wife and one daughter in the former home of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's in-laws, the Henkell champagne family.



Lieut. Gen. John K. Cannon, as sketched by AP Artist H. E. Munhall

His door is open to every man in his command. His staff has standing instructions to pass on directly to him any telephone call from an enlisted man who wants to speak to him. Many of them do. He frequently walks unannounced into an enlisted men's mess, stands in line for chow and washes the dishes. This is how he learns if there's anything wrong with the mess.

Cannon dislikes politics and will not engage in a discussion with reporters on the international situation. Of today's east-west conflict, of which the airlift to Berlin is the red hot symbol, Cannon merely says, "I think the peace can be kept. We are fighting to keep what we have—to avoid war."

The general doesn't like to give advice—or to take it.

Gen. Tooey Spaatz once was giving him advice on how to carry out an assignment during a staff conference in North Africa.

Cannon interrupted: "Wait a minute, Tooey, don't tell me how to do it. Give me the job and I'll do it."

Spaatz smiled. "Okay," he said, "you do it."

Liquor Taxes

Commissioner Guy Mason has suggested a relatively painless way to augment District revenues by increasing liquor taxes. With the crying need for more money to finance essential services, it would be the height of inconsistency to continue a liquor tax rate that is the lowest in the entire country. Even doubling the present tax of 50 cents a gallon would leave Washington taxes below the national average of $1.21.

However night club habitues and the liquor industry may regard it, the plain fact is that liquor is a luxury that is not bearing its share of the freight. Commissioner Mason estimates that an additional two million dollars could be derived from doubling hard liquor taxes alone. Probably an additional $800,000 could be obtained from a similar increase in license fees. Just how badly this additional money is needed is indicated by the fact that it will cost an estimated 5.5 million dollars merely to extend the last Federal pay raise to District workers. Nor does the prospective sales tax remove the need for additional funds. Even the most optimistic estimate of sales tax revenues leaves a large gap between what the District can expect to take in and what it ought to be spending on its municipal services.

Commissioner Mason has expressed doubt as whether the added taxes should be extended to beer, which he regards as a "poor man's drink," and with respect to wines, he believes the tax extension needs further study. We can see no need for such solicitude; to exempt these items would give hard liquor dealers a legitimate grievance. Actually, the doubling of the present 50-cent tax on each barrel of beer would make very little difference to the average beer drinker. District wine taxes are among the lowest in the country.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board already has gone on record before Congress as favoring an increase in liquor license fees as a means of inducing greater respect for such licenses. To be sure, any tax revision must take into account the possibility of diminishing returns. The District is now a mecca for liquor purchasers from Maryland and Virginia. But there is little possibility that a reasonable increase in taxes would drive away much of this trade, since the rate in Maryland is $1.25 per gallon of hard liquor exclusive of the sales tax and municipal taxes. When the continuation of cheap liquor is weighed against the overwhelming need for more District revenue, there can be only one answer.

Newfoundland

Representatives of Newfoundland have followed up the mandate of a popular referendum last July by concluding a formal agreement for union with Canada. The merger is a logical move which conforms to the geography of the continent and should redound to the benefit of both parties. It brings under one governmental roof the Dominion of Canada and the island which commands the mouth of the great St. Lawrence River as well as the strategically important ancillary of Labrador. And it ends the anomalous crown colony status of Newfoundland, restoring to the people popular government along the lines of other Canadian provinces.

The agreement still must be ratified—by the Canadian Parliament, the Newfoundland government and the British Parliament—but the hope is to make such ratifications mere formalities and to usher in the union by March 31 of next year. No formidable opposition can be foreseen. In 1945 the British government gave its blessing to a convention to determine the future position of Newfoundland, and presumably the disposition to let Newfoundland manage its own affairs still holds. Possibly there may be some dissent in French-speaking Quebec, whose premier recently has been making political capital of his xenophobia. But presumably any such dissent will be voted down by the Canadian Parliament.

Actually, the people of Newfoundland have a great similarity of interests with the residents of Canada's maritime provinces, and the merger is a sensible extension of these interests. Canada and Newfoundland already have a common currency. Under the union, Canada will assume Newfoundland's debt and will pay the new province a subsidy because of its particular geographic and population problems. But the agreement is not one-sided. Canada receives the benefit of Newfoundland's resources—the vast iron ore deposits in Labrador and the fishing and pulpwood industries of Newfoundland proper.

Presumably the desire of the considerable body of Newfoundlanders who looked wistfully at the possibility of union with the United States will now be sublimated in an effort to continue and increase the ties between the United States and Canada. Defense-wise, the merger should make no difference to Canadian-American cooperation, since the tacit understanding is that Canada will respect the bases in Newfoundland granted to this country by Britain in 1940. As a matter of fact, the event should be welcomed in the United States as a carrying out of the principle that in union of like-minded peoples there is strength.

New Espionage Law

The inapplicability of the country's espionage law to the outrageous theft of confidential documents from the State Department in 1937 and 1938 is sufficient proof that that statute needs an overhauling. Some time ago we pointed out that the most the special grand jury in New York could do would be to indict for perjury the persons who gave Communist agents a pipeline into the State Department, if they have lied under oath about their activities. Since then Alger Hiss has been indicted on such a charge. Because of the momentous nature of the case any well-founded charges that will help to get a court decision as to who was responsible for this encroachment upon the Nation's security are important. In the long run, however, changes in the law may well be the most significant outcome of this scandal.

We are glad that the Administration has put aside its red-herring charges long enough to give the problem serious attention. For the advice of experienced officials in the Department of Justice will obviously be needed in shaping a law that will be workable as well as constitutional. It is also encouraging to note that the bill will be sent to the Judiciary Committees of the House and Senate, where it will have the attention of men of judgment as well as experience in such matters.

The most obvious change to be sought will be a lengthening of the period during which espionage charges may be brought after the crime has been committed. At present a peacetime traitor who tampers with our security is immune if he can keep his crime hidden for three years. In our opinion, it is absurd to suppose that the passing of time mitigates a crime of this sort. Certainly those who raided confidential files for the benefit of the Soviet Union 10 or 11 years ago ought to be punished, and we think Congress would be remiss in its duty if it should fail to provide stiff penalties for similar offenses, belatedly discovered, in the future.

Some change in the law requiring "proof of intention and motive" in the theft of confidental documents is also doubtless needed. An official or anyone else who steals a legitimately confidential document is guilty of a serious offense even though he might be innocent of any intent to aid a foreign nation or injure his own country. Great care will have to be exercised in drafting such a law, however, to prevent it from becoming a shield for officials seeking to avoid adverse publicity. On several occasions the Department of Justice has used encroachments upon our security as an excuse for seeking legislation that would muzzle the press. Attorney General Clark's wire-tapping proposal will need equally rigorous scrutiny.

A fourth provision that ought to be considered, we think, is the registration of organizations which collect funds from the public. Many patriotic citizens who have given money to supposedly worthy causes would be shocked to learn that their funds have gone to finance espionage for Moscow. It is not enough to run down spies after their crimes have been committed. Congress has an obligation to cut off the source of funds drained into subversive channels under false pretenses. That can be done only by requiring all organizations, except regularly established churches, to give an accounting for the funds they collect from the public. In a democratic society it is not too much to ask groups relying upon public solicitation of funds to operate in the open.

Waymack's Service

William W. Waymack is one of those rare individuals with both an abiding sense of public responsibility and the ability to fulfill capably a public trust. As a member of the Atomic Energy Commission he has demonstrated a singular knack for wading through details to grasp the over-all problems of atomic energy at a time when military diversion has all but overshadowed its more profound peacetime applications. A man of even temperament, Mr. Waymack has been a bulwark against hysteria of all kinds and a steadying influence on the other commissioners.

His background as editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune has given him an unusual insight into the relations between Atomic Energy Commission and the press. He has felt acutely the need for better public understanding of atomic energy, and as a corollary, the need for far better informed newspaper coverage and comment. In this connection he has fought against the aura of unnecessary secrecy that has surrounded the activities of the Atomic Energy Commission—secrecy that has been augmented with respect to information about the Bikini tests by an unreasonably restrictive attitude on the part of the President himself.

Mr. Waymack is the first of the original five-man team to leave the Atomic Energy Commission, and his resignation certainly deprives the commission of one of its pillars. But although he has long wanted to retire, he remained at his post long enough to help it weather the storm of the Lilienthal confirmation and the abortive efforts to reshape the commission last summer. Certainly he has earned the rest he now intends to take. The President will have to search hard to replace him with a man of the same caliber. But even though such a person may be hard to find, the job is one that demands nothing less than the qualities Mr. Waymack possesses so abundantly.

Inept Crackdown

ECA Deputy Administrator Bruce, acting administrator in Mr. Hoffman's absence, displayed a deplorable lack of judgment in publicly castigating Great Britain, Belgium and the Netherlands for alleged misuse of ECA funds. He also revealed his own incompetence by his subsequent admission that these charges were based on insufficient evidence and were made public without prior consultation with the State Department. The London headquarters of ECA is decidedly embarrassed by the incident, especially as investigation on the spot indicates that there are various possible explanations of the reputedly large shipments of aluminum scrap from Britain to the United States, that might absolve the Government from Mr. Bruce's implied charge of negligence or complicity in permitting such exports. At any rate, the British government says that no licenses for the export of aluminum scrap have been issued since September, 1946, and it is believed that none could have taken place without the knowledge of the government. Similar denials of misuse of funds come from Belgium and the Netherlands. While such denials are not conclusive proof of innocence, they do emphasize the imprudence of drawing hasty conclusions in advance of a searching investigation.

Mr. Bruce's attempt to correct abuses by cracking the whip over the heads of officials of friendly powers is more likely to injure the aggressor than the attacked. Moreover, the resentment aroused by such high-handed tactics—all the greater because the countries singled out for criticism are depending on American aid—handicaps our own officials in carrying out the tasks assigned them. The ECA, for instance, established under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948, is not only an agency for promoting economic and financial recovery abroad, but, as the law plainly indicates, it is also an instrumentality for strengthening ties of friendship with aided countries and furthering the Administration's foreign policy. Consequently, if the program is to achieve its dual objectives, the officials responsible for its execution must be as careful as are diplomats to avoid giving needless offense to participating nations.

The diplomatic approach does not preclude nor does it prevent close supervision on the part of the ECA of the methods of utilization of dollar funds, prompt action to suppress abuses, and what Governor Dewey called "prodding and pushing" for performance. At the same time, it is necessary to keep constantly in mind the fact that the ECA is an agency of the United States Govment and that its direct contacts are with other governments. As a result, any criticism or charges of abuse are a reflection on the efficiency or integrity of the governments of aided countries. Given such conditions it seems clear that every effort should be made to correct abuses with a minimum amount of unnecessary and unfavorable publicity, except, of course, in extreme cases requiring strong disciplinary action.

Regional Education

The Southern Governors' plan for regional professional education embodies undeniable advances in educational opportunities for white and Negro post-graduate students in that education-poor area. Men and women of the Southern States who would otherwise probably have to forego medical, dental and veterinary education will be enabled, under the regional program, to attend accredited schools within the Southern States on tuition scholarships. These opportunities will be severely limited, to be sure, both in number of students and in types of education. But the advantages are certainly worth careful assaying.

Furthermore, the composition of the regional educational council which will administer the plan shows another and probably even more significant step forward. Negro educators of the South have already participated in some degree in formulating the plan. At the Savannah meeting the council and the Southern Conference of Governors approved an expansion of the council's membership. An additional member from each of the 14 States was authorized, with the understanding that the added appointees would be Negro educators. When leading Southern whites show themselves willing, as they have here, to remove the racial barrier in administering this program there is reason to hope for a similar progress in due course further down the line.

That the barrier has not been so removed all through the operation of this program is a tragedy. White students will go to white medical schools, Negroes to Negro medical schools, and so on for the other professional schools. The plan obviously attempts to accomplish the impossible of "separate but equal" education. It is the most expensive way of going about the solution of one of the South's most pressing problems—and therefore the most foolish way since the South—less than any other region—can afford the luxury of dual educational systems. And finally, it is a deep wrong against America's aspirations. As Justice Harlan said in Plessy v. Ferguson in 1896, "Our Constitution is color blind." Our educational system, if it is to impart real devotion to the tenets of the Constitution, ought to be equally color blind.

THE FIRST INTERVIEW

There is a place upon this earth today
Where I shall talk with you before I die.
Somewhere in future time, though far away,
Must be that strong, sweet hour, when I shall try
To tell my love: I know not when nor where,
Yet every step I take shall bring me there.

Rape Acquittal

I have read with concern that Elvid H. Perrell has been acquitted of the rape of Mrs. Louise Johnson. When she said she received the news with "shock and disbelief," I think the feeling is shared by the majority of other Washington housewives, including myself. With so much violence of this sort happening every day, most of us, I'm sure, have given some thought to what we would do in a similar situation. Does a woman have to be beaten to a pulp, possibly killed, before the act is considered rape?

I feel strongly that the decision in this case is a serious mistake. It makes of Washington a mecca where sex fiends may come, take its wives and mothers, and be upheld by the courts because we "consent" instead of fighting to the death.

And the women of Washington will be afraid to report such attacks, even though the rapist is identified. We are left no protection, only a sick feeling in the pits of our stomachs!

Good Will Mission

The good will of the people of the United States toward the people of the Soviet Union needs to be drawn upon to provide the solution for the diplomatic impasse between the United States and the USSR. Toward that end, a good will delegation to the Soviet Union should be immediately organized. This could be a purely voluntary and spontaneous undertaking. A large number of delegates, say 500, could be chosen from the American people at large to carry a message of good will to the people of the USSR.

For the success of this undertaking, it would be essential to have no political or other objectives. The sole purpose of the mission would be a demonstration of good will on the part of the people of the United States for the people of the Soviet Union.

The persons chosen should be broadly representative of the whole people of our Nation, not only on a geographical basis but also as to every walk of life. The expense could be raised by voluntary contributions made by the general public.

We cannot assume that the Soviet Union would bar such a delegation. Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin has repeatedly stressed that the Soviet people want peace. Peace must be based on friendship and cooperation instead of force and the power to destroy. If we really want peace let us show our respect for and extend the sincere hand of friendship to the Soviet people.

Integrated Colleges

The vote of a majority of Southern professors in favor of an end to segregation in professional and graduate schools indicates a decided trend toward liberalism. Ballots were mailed to the entire faculty in each of the 11 State-supported universities in the South. A total of 371 replies were received, of which 255, or 69 per cent, favored unrestricted entrance of Negroes into graduate schools. One hundred five, or 28 per cent, favored regional schools, and 11, or 3 per cent, favored entrance of Negroes on a segregated basis. The regional school adherents were largely from Mississippi, Georgia and South Carolina.

Few people realize the paucity of higher educational opportunities for Southern Negroes. There is not a single institution offering a doctorate which Negro students can attend in the South. Twelve State-supported schools offer this opportunity to whites. There is at least one State school in each Southern State offering the A.M. degree, whereas only eight such schools provide this degree for colored students. There are no State-supported schools offering professional education in dentistry, medicine, pharmacy and social work to Negroes.

The expenditure per person in State-supported higher and professional institutions is 56 cents for a Negro and $2.43 for a white student. In the 17 Southern States there is 1 white doctor for every 843 persons, but only 1 colored doctor to 4409 persons and 1 white dentist to every 2795 white persons but only 1 colored dentist to every 12,101 colored persons.

The majority of Southern educators in State institutions favor integration for the reasons given by them, that, it is most economical, most practical and reasonable, most democratic and constitutional, most ethical, and provides the best solution of the race problem. These facts have been highlighted by the survey conducted by the Southern Conference Educational Fund. They give evidence of a trend toward more liberal attitudes on the part of the intelligent white Southerner.

Prayers For Peace

According to the press, the Student Council of Georgetown University has adopted a resolution calling upon the students to pause for one minute at noon each day in prayers for world peace. The student paper refers to this action as a "wholly unprecedented move." "Unprecedented moves" of this and other kinds, on an international scale, are necessary if mankind is to be saved from an "unprecedented" new war. The student resolution calls for action looking to the enlistment of all American colleges in the movement, which is reported to have started with an American Legion post at Manchester, N. H., and is spreading to other groups.

Since there are more people who are interested in peace than there are people who will make a habit of praying for peace, other means ought also to be sought of keeping this question uppermost in the public thought. College youth, the veteran organizations, the church, not to mention other groups—any one of these has the power to destroy the inane war system. When will some congregation support its minister in the initiation of a great movement by devoting its entire principal weekly service (until such time as peace shall be firmly established) to definite and concrete means of taking individual, national, and international action against war?

The action of the Georgetown students is a vastly encouraging step. Let every person who is an enemy of war take a similar step or some other step in the same direction. And let us never halt short of lasting peace.

A Farmer Views Food Prices

This is in reply to the letter by "Consumer" in your issue of December 4.

"Consumer" gives figures on farm income for the past year but fails to state that the 32 billions is gross and not income. On my own farm net income is about 40 per cent of the gross income which, perhaps, is not too far from national average. Generally speaking, the smaller the gross income the greater is the percentage of net income because the small farmer and his family do most of the work.

The extent to which parity prices are at present increasing living costs is grossly exaggerated. The only commodity that I know of which is now selling at or below the support price is corn and that is because of lack of sufficient storage facilities. I can't see where support prices are now making any material difference in the cost of food because the demand for food is keeping the price well above the support price.

When the supply of food catches up with the demand, the price will drop to a point below the cost of production, if history repeats itself and no support prices and no curbs on production are provided. I hate to think that city folks are so selfish that they oppose fair prices for farm products, especially since they willingly pay fair prices or more for other kinds of products. If parity is not fair, let "Consumer" say what is fair.

Government payments on soil conservation and improvement practices are intended to increase the productivity of the soil and thus insure adequate food. "Consumer" has much to say about improving the small rundown farm. Certainly that would be desirable for the small farmer but from the standpoint of the consumer it is just as important that large farms be improved, for both large and small farms contribute to the food supply.

It is too bad that consumers don't realize that many of the farm policies in the past have been intended for their benefit. For example, I have taken small subsidy payments for butterfat and lambs which the Government offered in lieu of raising the ceiling price. When ceilings were removed, the prices advanced 50 per cent. The farmer takes the stigma of accepting subsidy payments while the consumer gets the gravy and then gripes about it.

It seems to hurt a lot of people to see the farmer make any more than a bare living. To them he is apparently a primitive soul with no appreciation of nor desire for a higher standard of living. As a matter of fact, he is in the market for every kind of home equipment the same as urban dwellers, plus an enormous amount of machinery for running his farm. He can help to keep nonagricultural industry going, just as a thriving nonagricultural industry can help provide a market for farm produce.

My experience with farmers is that they want no more than a square deal. So long as manufacturers can and do reduce their output to meet the demand for as much as they can sell at a profit, what good reason is there for denying farmers the same privilege? If manufacturers would produce continuously at full speed year after year and dispose of their products on the open market for whatever they will bring the same as farmers have done in the past, I have no doubt that farmers would willingly forgo all Government aid and take pot luck with everyone else.

Information About ECA

By Andre Visson

French Need Facts

THE UNFORTUNATE discussion which broke out this week about the alleged misuse by three European countries of the aluminum scrap which they have been receiving under ECA credits has brought into sharp focus the exceptional importance of adequate and accurate information concerning ECA.

The damage caused by the inaccurate information casually dispensed in Washington can be at least partially repaired by an immediate investigation in ECA offices abroad. But this unfortunate incident should make us realize how important it is to keep people both at home and abroad accurately informed about the scope, the machinery, and the significance of the ECA.

It is extremely hard to make the people in western Europe realize what the ECA means to them because while the ECA funds allocated to their respective countries are given to their governments mostly as grants, all private firms which buy goods under the ECA plan have to pay for them to the last cent.

Moreover, while we are trying to do all in our power to publicize the ECA activities, the chief task of information remains with the countries which are the recipients of aid under ECA. This is stipulated in the ECA agreement and is, unquestionably, a wise provision.

PSYCHOLOGICALLY, it is indeed more appropriate for the government of the countries benefitting from our aid to tell their peoples how much we are giving, how we are giving it, and what it means to them, than for us to do so. Many people abroad would be inclined to discount the information coming from our sources as American propaganda. And we might find it embarrassing to have to tell our western European friends every day: "Look what we are doing for you!"

Nonetheless, we want them to know it, and if their governments fail to inform them we should take the matter up with their governments and devise effective means of making the information known.

Of all European countries which are recipients of Marshall Plan aid, we are most interested in having France properly informed. The future of western Europe is going to be decided in France, as well as in Germany.

When some people in Washington, disappointed and irritated by France's inability to put her financial house in order, advocate rebuilding the western European economy around western Germany, they reveal an alarming ignorance of European conditions. The French, regardless of their political adherence, will never consent to receive Marshall Plan aid or military equipment from us if their tractors are made of German steel.

We are not in a position to talk them into it. And if we insist on it, if we continue to make the acceptance by the French of our solution for the Ruhr a precondition for continuing the Marshall Plan, they will reject it as a device by us to dominate their foreign policy. Or, if the continued deterioration of their finances forces them to accept it, they will do so with the firm intention of rejecting it as soon as possible. And instead of appreciating the economic aid they receive from us, they will the more strongly resent it.

UNDER THESE circumstances the immediate objective of our policymakers is to decide whether we are willing to extend the Marshall Plan aid to France if she should continue to reject our solution for the Ruhr. And once having decided, we should make it known to the French people in clear, unmistakable terms. Because nothing is more dangerous than the confusion with which the French now regard the Marshall Plan.

As to the means of making the Marshall Plan machinery better understood by the French, we could perhaps try the following: Until now all that the French people know about the Marshall Plan is some statistics about the arrival of Marshall Plan goods that they see in the papers from time to time. But the man in the street can hardly know what these statistics mean to him. Every day he sees prices going up higher than his wages. He does not see any relief from the Marshall Plan. To be sure, his life would have been harder without it, but this he is unaware of, and it is pretty hard to make him understand it.

As for the French industrialists, they go around complaining that most of the Marshall Plan dollar credits go to big business or to the state-controlled enterprises. They complain that the medium and small enterprises are neglected. It would therefore be highly desirable to determine the proportion of medium and small enterprises and make it known to the French people.

It might be well to select a few enterprises in small French communities whose prosperity is determined by the employment given by these enterprises to most of the people in these communities.

A story about the increased prosperity of a French community due to the Marshall Plan would do more to make it understood and appreciated by the French people than any amount of publicity.

Matter Of Fact

Leftish Steel Plan Well Backed

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

A PROPOSAL which involves highly explosive issues is now being debated anxiously in the White House. It is proposed that President Truman recommend to Congress legislation to permit the Government to construct, own and operate steel plants in order to overcome the desperate steel shortage.

Most sensible people have long since written off the word "socialistic" as meaningless nonsense, simply because conservatives in this country have for so long been in the habit of using the word to describe any measure which they disliked. But the plain fact is that, if Truman approves this proposal, the criers of "wolf, wolf" will actually have a real wolf to cry about, if only a very young and rather toothless wolf. For, quite aside from its faults or merits, legislation permitting Government ownership and operation of plants in the most basic sector of the economy does actually have genuine socialist overtones.

The chief spark plug behind the move is young Assistant Secretary of the Interior Girard Davidson, who has been fighting a running battle with the steel companies. Davidson has the backing of his boss, Julius Krug, and the enthusiastic, all-out support of the United Automobile Workers' Walter Reuther and the CIO's Philip Murray.

The line-up within the Administration has not yet jelled. Davidson's natural allies would be the President's most influential liberal advisers, Counsel Clark Clifford and Leon Keyserling, vice chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. Both these men have been considering and debating the proposal, but they have not yet fully made up their minds. Neither has President Truman.

The Fearful Industrialists

DAVIDSON and his allies defend the measure on strictly practical rather than ideological grounds. The steel men, in Davidson's words, "live in constant dread of a depression," and are therefore refusing to expand steel capacity sufficiently to meet the needs of defense and a full employment economy, and to head off further inflation. The steel shortage is 10 million tons a year, and the much advertised expansion program of the steel industry, according to its Government critics, only provides for an increased capacity of a totally inadequate million tons a year.

The Davidson group is therefore pressing the White House to ask Congress for authorization to take the following steps:

First, the steel men would be told how much steel the country needs. Then, the steel corporations would be offered Reconstruction Finance Corp. loans to build the necessary plants. And, finally, if the steel men refused to go along (which most of the major corporations almost certainly would), the Government would be permitted to build and operate the plants itself.

Clearly, in strictly ideological terms, this proposal is a good many degrees to the left of anything ever submitted to Congress in peacetime by any President. Yet the fact is that some such drastic action to deal with the steel shortage has a good deal of support, not only in the Administration, but in Congress and even among some businessmen.

Even Wherry's Critical

CONGRESSIONAL support derives particularly from those who have been listening to the bitter wails of the small businessmen who cannot get enough steel to operate their plants. Even Senator Kenneth S. Wherry, Republican chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee, whose convictions are hardly Marxist, is known to have uttered harsh words about the policies of the big steel companies.

Wherry could hardly be expected to go along with anything so drastic as the measure sponsored by Davidson. But Senator James E. Murray of Montana, who will replace Wherry as chairman if the committee is continued by the Eighty-first Congress, is known to favor some such legislation. So does Congressman Wright Patman of Texas, a senior member of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

As for the businessmen, any businessman would normally recoil in instinctive horror from the sort of Government action now being discussed. But Davidson has actually received a number of letters from big and little businessmen warmly commending his stand against the steel companies, simply because many businessmen are in desperate straits for lack of steel.

The chances are that in the end President Truman, essentially a middle-of-the-roader, will not go as far as Davidson and his labor backers want. It is more likely that Truman will ask for mandatory allocation powers, and some sort of incentive device to increase steel production under private ownership and management.

Yet the fact that so far-reaching a proposal is now being seriously discussed in the White House is in itself deeply significant. It is a measure, for one thing, of the new influence in the Administration of labor and the left. More fundamentally, it is a measure of the extent to which the concept of the public interest overriding private property rights has been accepted by the leadership of the Democratic Party.

Undoubtedly the steel men have a case. Clearly, they will be called before Congress to make their case, and it will have to be a very convincing case.

Prices Sensitive to Spending

Arms Needs Can Revive Controls

By Sigrid Arne

Associated Press Staff Writer

THE President may decide he has to ask the new Congress for a partial return to wartime controls. His advisers have not decided yet what kind, if any. Decisions will be announced in Mr. Truman's "State of the Union" speech and his budget message, which will be sent to Congress in early January.

The presidential advisers are worrying about the cost of the many demands on this country for armaments: From our own defense establishment, from the Western Union (Britain, France, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg), from China, Korea, Greece and Turkey.

It is within the framework of United States foreign policy to supply arms to those foreign countries as a means of stemming the further spread of communism.

All such aid would take a slice of the steel, coke and skilled labor which are now under such heavy demand to satisfy comfort-hungry Americans, tired of wartime deprivations. The added demand would drive up prices unless some weight was tied to them.

The trick is to balance the two needs.

The President has been cautioned by his senior economic adviser, Edwin G. Nourse, that even a slight rise in military costs would mean a quick rise in prices of the goods Americans buy for their own use.

Lid on Services

NOURSE described the basic problem to a meeting of top military chiefs recently at the Pentagon. It is this:

1. Our expense for our own military setup this year has been close to 12 billion dollars.

2. When the Army, Navy and Air Force turned in their estimated needs for next year, they totaled 23 billion dollars.

3. They cut that to 17 billion dollars under their own paring knife.

4. Then they learned that President Truman would consider nothing above 15 billion dollars. (The President has let it be known to his own circle that he will demand the strictest military economy. He questions, among other things, the need for so many bases around the country.)

5. Whichever military budget is finally accepted, it would run from three to five billion more than this year. Then what of the plans to ship arms to the Western Union, China, Korea, Greece and Turkey?

A partial tip to the answer was given by Defense Secretary Forrestal in a recent New York speech. He said he thought we should supply a "generous measure of equipment" to the Western Union. Hence, if our own military costs are held down under President Truman's 15-billion-dollar lid, there will be strong pressure from within the President's circle to turn out some aid for the governments on our side of the fence.

Top level committees are working long hours here to figure how the needs can be cut down to what we can produce without a new jump in prices.

Possible Labor Shift

NOURSE made several answers in general terms. Some of the men sitting in on the talks have spelled out for this reporter some of the ideas being discussed.

There are two paths that might be taken:

1. The amount of money in circulation could be partially dried up by higher taxes or forced savings or both. Thus people would have less money to "bid up" prices.

2. Government could return to allocating strategic materials and slap price controls on commodities in short supply.

Probably a little of both will be used.

Certain types of skilled labor might be allocated, too. Nourse thought some one million to 2,500,000 skilled men might have to be shifted from civilian goods factories to armaments works. Presidential advisers say this is the toughest problem. They have no ready answer.

If new price controls are decided upon, the President will likely ask for only the sort of "standby authority" he wanted from the last Congress

The presidential advisers say certain businessmen have told them they are worried by today's high profits. But, the advisers say, the businessmen tell them they can't cut prices alone and that they believe if the President were given the club of standby authority, industries might agree among themselves to cut down their margins of profit, which would mean lower prices.

The Simpler Levy

PRESIDENTIAL advisers are talking over three kinds of taxes: income, excess profits and corporation taxes. Some favor increasing corporation taxes, since they are easier to administer than excess profits taxes.

There may be some jump in income taxes, but it will not be "across the board," in all probability.

"Forced savings" would mean a system under which slices of all pay checks above a certain level would be salted away into Government bonds that could be cashed at some later date. Several nations did this during the war, but it appears to be one of the more remote suggestions before the President's advisory group.

HARRY'S PHENOMENAL SUCCESS
. . . Hungerford, in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

A SPECIAL section on American aviation in Collier's observes the forty-fifth anniversary of the original flight of the Wright brothers' plane and the simultaneous award this week of the Collier Trophy for achievement in aviation. It was December 17, 1903, that the brothers made four successful flights for the first time. In contrast, the Collier Trophy went to the three men who contributed so vitally to the science of supersonic flight.

Orville Wright's diary, which appears for the first time in Collier's, tells the story in a wonderfully matter-of-fact way. He gives speed of the wind, starting speed (7 or 8 miles an hour), and then says, "The machine lifted from the track just as it was entering on the fourth rail . . . A sudden dart when about 100 feet from the end of the tracks ended the flight."

Charlie Taylor, only employe and intimate associate of the Wright brothers, tells, also for the first time, the details of their lives while working on the first planes and flight trials. Taylor, only surviving member of the trio, is 80 and lives in retirement in Los Angeles.

"I think the hardest job Will and Orv had was with the propellers," Taylor reminisces. "They had read up on all that was published about boat propellers, but they couldn't find any formula for what they needed. So they had to develop their own, and this they did in the wind tunnel."

Taylor believes he was the first to escape death narrowly in a plane through a last-minute change of plans. Orville was going to take him up at Fort Myer, in 1908, when the Army decided to send Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge in his place. The plane crashed, Orville was injured and Selfridge, for whom the big Michigan fighter base was named, was killed.

TIME Magazine leads off this week with lengthy profiles of Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers. Of Chambers' resignation as senior editor of Time, the story says, "Time accepted the resignation, neither judging nor prejudging his recent disclosures."

"To some of his colleagues, his fear of communism seemed a morbid preoccupation, a kind of King Charles' head," the editors recall. "He was valued, nevertheless, not only for his first-hand knowledge of communism but for his outstanding skill in writing and his wide cultural background. He had also become a genuinely religious man: a Quaker."

In summary, the story concludes: "If Chambers had lied, then Hiss had been incredibly maligned and made the victim of a monstrous slander. If Chambers spoke the truth, then Alger Hiss had led an almost incredibly clever double life. The two of them could do little more now than stand to one side, speaking their final lines, spectators more than actors in their own drama."

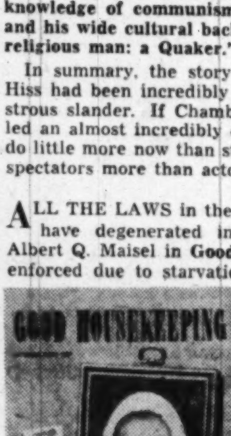
ALL THE LAWS in the land prohibiting or regulating child labor have degenerated into a "conscious-salving sham," declares Albert Q. Maisel in Good Housekeeping. These laws are not being enforced due to starvation of both State and Federal child labor law enforcement bureaus. Today there are well over two million children legally employed in this country. Hundreds of thousands of others, as young as 9 and 10 years, are working sub-rosa, Maisel reveals.



The answer, he thinks, wil be found only in better, tougher laws with teeth in them and enough funds provided by legislatures for administration. Maisel challenges the mothers of today to "get as angry about child labor as their mothers got 30 years ago."

HOLIDAY chose Budd Schulberg and Irwin Shaw to write its lead pieces on Hollywood. Both are singularly well qualified and justify the editors' assertion that "we believe we have shown Hollywood fairly for what it is: an exciting, mature and vitally important projection of American life and culture."

Schulberg deals with the history of the movies from the time they first invaded Hollywood to the present. That town, incidentally, was founded as a refuge for hyper-respectable, God-fearing American teetotalers.

"Our West Coast civilization of film-makers are facing their most crucial challenge to date," Schulberg says. The specter that haunts Hollywood now is composed of "falling stars, those falling box office receipts and the dreadful probability that the Government is going to cut the theater chains loose from the major producing outfits." The author speculates on what will come of it all.

Irwin Shaw describes that amazing phenomenon, "Hollywood People."

The Gallup Poll

Truman Tops in Popularity

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

HARRY S. TRUMAN, General Eisenhower and General MacArthur lead the list of the 10 men in the world whom the American people most admire.

This is indicated by a national survey conducted among a cross-section of the adult population.

Winston Churchill, Secretary of State George Marshall and former President Herbert Hoover rank next in order in the "admiration derby."

The question was put to voters this way:

"What man, living today in any part of the world, that you have heard or read about do you admire the most?"

The top 10, in order of frequency, were these:

1. President Truman
2. General Eisenhower
3. General MacArthur
4. Winston Churchill
5. Secretary Marshall
6. Herbert Hoover
7. Governor Dewey
8. Pope Pius
9. Harold E. Stassen
10. Albert Einstein

A similar survey to find the 10 most admired women will be reported next week.

Today's is the third "admiration derby" conducted by the institute, the first having been in 1946 and the second last year.

The trend of attitudes toward President Truman has been especially interesting in the three surveys. In the 1946 poll he ranked third, in 1947 he slipped down to fourth. Today, a month after his triumphant re-election, he tops the list.

In the first two surveys Generals MacArthur and Eisenhower were the two most admired. Winston Churchill has been well up in the list each time—fifth in 1946, third last year, fourth this time.

One significant thing about today's survey is that no industrialist or businessman turns up in the top 10 and no men who earned fame as educators.

No name popular in sports, medicine or entertainment appears among the top 10.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

State's Housecleaner Got Gate

By Drew Pearson

THERE'S one intriguing sidelight to the State Department stolen documents story which most people don't know about—namely, that the man who tried to clean up the mess was fired.

During Jimmy Byrnes' term as Secretary of State, one of his assistants was hardboiled Joe Panuch, who suspected that something was wrong and started a campaign to weed out certain State Department employes. With the full support of Byrnes, and of Donald Russell, Byrnes' Assistant Secretary of State, Panuch got four men fired, also made it hot for Alger Hiss.

Came January, 1947, however, and Byrnes resigned. And the first official act of the man who succeeded him, George Marshall, was to fire Panuch, the man who wanted to clean out the suspected Commies.

Marshall, of course, had never met Panuch, knew nothing about him. He merely took the word of subordinates who didn't like Panuch's clean-up operations.

Gen. Lucius Clay, recognizing Panuch's ability, immediately hired him as his executive assistant in Berlin, where he has been ever since. Now Panuch battles the Communists in the open; in the State Department he had to battle them in the dark.

Note—Interesting fact is that Panuch is now suing Congressman Jonkman of Michigan and a Washington newspaper on charges of libeling him when he was fired from the State Department. And Judge Alexander Holtzoff refuses to continue the case, demands that Panuch come back immediately from Berlin to appear in court.

Republicans Criticize Republicans

REPUBLICAN Congressmen have unleashed a little-noticed blast at fellow Republicans for jeopardizing national security in failing to stockpile vital materials for use in the event of war.

The blast was prepared by the House Public Lands Committee and aimed in the direction of two of Forrestal's top Republican appointees—Arthur Hill, recently resigned chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and Donald F. Carpenter, chairman of the Munitions Board. Carpenter, a vice president of Remington Arms, is a member of the Du Pont clan which contributed so heavily to the recent GOP campaign.

Republican members of the Public Lands Committee charge these two boards with "jeopardizing the security of the Nation." While the Nation once again is drafting manpower, it appears from the congressional report that the big businessmen appointed to head two vital war boards have failed to provide the equally essential defense materials.

Here is a summary of committee findings:

MANGANESE (vital to steel production)—The excess supply of manganese obtained by the United States in 1947 was only 271,600 tons. If we continue to stockpile at that rate, it will take 32 years to accumulate enough reserve manganese for our national safety.

CHROMITE (vital to stainless steel and camouflage paints)—The excess supply of chromite ores obtained by the United States last year was only 272,572 tons. At this rate, it will take 16 years to acquire a safe stockpile.

"Last year Russia supplied the United States with 46.3 per cent of the total imports of metallurgical grade chromite," comments the committee. "Without this Russian ore, a deficit of approximately 136,000 tons below actual consumption would have occurred."

COPPER—"It is common knowledge that no copper has been acquired for the national stockpile except a few tons obtained by the armed forces incidental to surplus disposal or already in their possession," the committee reveals.

"At any rate, such stocks amount to no more than a few days' supply."

During closed - door hearings on the stockpile question, the committee repeatedly criticized the Munitions Board brass hats and the State Department for permitting our mercury, tungsten, chromite and manganese mines to close down, while depending on foreign imports of these strategic materials for emergency stockpiles.

Note—The brass-hat businessmen in charge of national defense have hid their blunders with the claim that stockpiling information was "top secret." Regarding this, the committee comments: "By using data available from the minerals yearbook and from other sources, anyone, including Russia, can determine the approximate amount of chromite and many other metals and minerals contained in the national stockpile."

Un-American Leakage

ONLY member of the House Un-American Activities Committee who opposes the committee's craving for headlines is Congressman Ed Hebert of Louisiana, who, strange as it may seem, used to be an expert at writing headlines as news editor of the New Orleans States.

"It's getting so I have to read the papers every morning to learn what this committee plans to do," snapped the Louisianan, at a recent closed-door session. "If these leaks don't stop, I'll quit complaining in private meetings and start raising hell publicly."

"The way you're talking, you're placing everybody under suspicion," complained Mississippi's John Rankin. "Not all of us are talking out of turn."

"Well, somebody is and it's putting the committee in a bad light," continued Hebert. "This irresponsible leaking of confidential information plays right into the hands of our critics, and Lord knows, we have enough critics as it is."

"I think you yourself are doing a disservice to the committee by this sort of criticism," barked Rankin.

"That's your opinion," shot back Hebert. "You can act according to your conscience and I'll act according to mine."

Meanwhile, the headline-hunting continues.

Russian Friend Turns Sour

THERE is more irony than meets the eye behind the efforts of Chilean diplomat David Cruz Ocampo to get his Russian daughter-in-law out of Moscow. Only his friends know it, but Cruz Ocampo was once one of the Soviet's ardent friends.

When serving as Chilean ambassador to the Vatican in 1947, Ocampo was designated to be Chile's first ambassador to the Soviet. He was elated over the appointment. For years he had been sympathetic to the Communist idea, wanted to take a good look at the Russian experiment.

In Moscow, however, he found himself a virtual prisoner. He could study Russian affairs no better than if he had been in Chile. Finally his only son fell in love with blonde Russian Lidia Lessinia, and from that time on everything went wrong.

The Ocampo family was spied upon, threatened, antagonized. On top of this, Chile broke relations with Russia, and when the ambassador left, the Kremlin informed him that his new Russian daughter-in-law could not depart. So young Cruz Ocampo and his wife remained in Moscow.

The other day in Paris, just before Ambassador Ocampo made his bitter attack on Russia, a fellow diplomat warned: "If you want your son and daughter to live, don't make that speech."

"Life is not worth it, if you have to live in slavery," the ambassador replied, and proceeded to make one of the fiercest attacks ever heard at a United Nations meeting.

Bellbottoms' Pay

ONE REASON the boys in bellbottoms don't always wear that recruiting-poster smile is the double dealing they get at the Navy pay window. Even though they work side by side, enlisted men often draw different subsistence pay—on the whim of a superior officer. Personal drag seems to make the difference.

A Navy spokesman, questioned by this column, agreed there was "no apparent reason" why some enlisted men draw $105 monthly for living off naval base, while others receive only $67.50, $37.50 or, in most cases, $31.50. The deciding factor, the spokesman admitted, is often a superior officer's recommendation.

At Navy headquarters here, requests for more subsistence pay have been rejected with the terse explanation that "subsistence cannot, under present laws, be approved." Yet other enlisted men in the same offices are able to get the full $105. This would indicate that the Navy either is breaking the law or else citing laws that don't exist.

The Freedom Train Nears Last Siding

By David A. Stein
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—It's a lucky thing the Marines were picked to guard the Freedom Train. Any outfit less familiar with the know-how of keeping situations well in hand might have had some trouble.

The exhibit hall on wheels, in which priceless documents of American history have been touring the country for 16 months, has an honor guard of 30 Marine combat veterans, headed by Lieut. Col. Robert F. Scott of Blacksburg, Va. The train will end its official tour here January 2.

Almost four million people have passed through the Freedom Train on its 36,000-mile journey, but keeping the crowds in line on 394 exhibit days in 320 cities from coast to coast has been only a small part of the job tackled by the Leathernecks.

The Marines have reason to remember Brooklyn, for instance, and the mystery of the disappearing stripe. Normally the gleaming white train has red, white and blue horizontal bands around it. In Brooklyn the three colors blended into two—just red and blue.

A bewildered Leatherneck who could scarcely believe his eyes made a quick investigation. Four thousand high school girls had been standing in line. Their lips on a level with the white stripe. One girl impulsively kissed the train. Thousands of others did, too, and their lipstick completely blotted out the white line.

Anchors Away

THEN there were the missing bronze stars. In the first month of the Freedom Train's tour, 1100 of them disappeared into the pockets of young souvenir hunters. The star-headed bolts were used to anchor the documents into their cases, between sheets of clear plastic.

Although the Marines exercised the greatest vigilance, no one ever discovered how the bolts were removed. The strongest Leathernecks tried to extract the stars, taking plenty of time and without secrecy. They couldn't do it, but the youngsters were so successful that a new filch-proof anchorage had to be devised.

The "soap boxers" were another problem. They would get aboard the train, find an audience in front of a popular exhibit (the Bill of Rights was a favorite) and start to harangue.

The nearest marine would ask the orator to pipe down. The speechmaker invariably dared the Leatherneck to make him stop. The Marines worked out a system.

At a signal, the guard stationed at the nearest vestibule unlocked a door on the off-side of the train. Then two marines escorted the protesting offender, as gently as possible, to the exit.

Hawkers were also a source of headaches. The Freedom Train outpulled the circus as a crowd-getter in most towns, and ambitious souvenir salesmen couldn't resist temptation.

Ambitious Engraving

THE FREEDOM TRAIN might have made its four without a scratch if it hadn't been for one enterprising lad. No one knows how he evaded the Marines, but he managed to carve his initials on the head of the locomotive. What instrument he used is still a puzzle. It dug through seven layers of paint, so deep that the finish had to be sandblasted off to repair the damage.

There were other incidents the Marines would rather not remember, but there were some they won't forget. One day a Negro woman, 108 years old, stood in line for hours to board the train. "I just wanted to see Mr. Lincoln's papers before I died," she said. "You see, I was born a slave."

No burglar ever tried to steal any of the documents; the Leathernecks estimate it would take the best Jimmy Valentine at least two hours, uninterrupted, to break through the vault-like enclosures. Approximately 20 tons of steel were welded into the inner and outer walls of the exhibit cars. The bronze trim around each case was touched by so many fingers that it now has a beautiful antique finish.

Always on Time

J. EDWARD SHUGRUE, national director of the American Heritage Foundation, sponsors of the Freedom Train, estimates that only 1 out of 12 who wanted to board the train was able to do so. Peak attendance was 14,615 in one day, and the lowest was 6049 people who braved a fierce storm.

Despite a tight schedule, the Freedom Train never was late and never missed a date. Traveling on presidential priority, it was a "blue flag" special, with every grading, bridge and crossing carefully guarded and all switches spiked.

Shugrue estimates that the train could continue on for at least two more years in answer to requests from all parts of the country. Its sponsors have decided to end the tour, he adds regretfully, because of the great responsibility they feel for the precious cargo it carries.

The Omens Are Strong at Christmas

By Susan R. Morton

IF a girl in the mountain section of Virginia wants to know the sort of man she will marry, she must visit the pigpen on Christmas Eve.

The hogs will probably be asleep, but a knock on the pen will awaken them, and they will grunt. Should the first sound come from an old hog, then she will marry an old man, but if one of the young pigs is the first to grunt, she will know that she is to marry a young and handsome man.

Of course, the really smart girl slips out just before dark, and fastens the old hogs away from the young ones.

There are many other Christmas omens, both of good and ill portent, that are still believed in in the remote sections of the Blue Ridge. Their origins are often quite forgotten; "just for luck," is the magic phrase that carries them through the years.

Omens From Insects

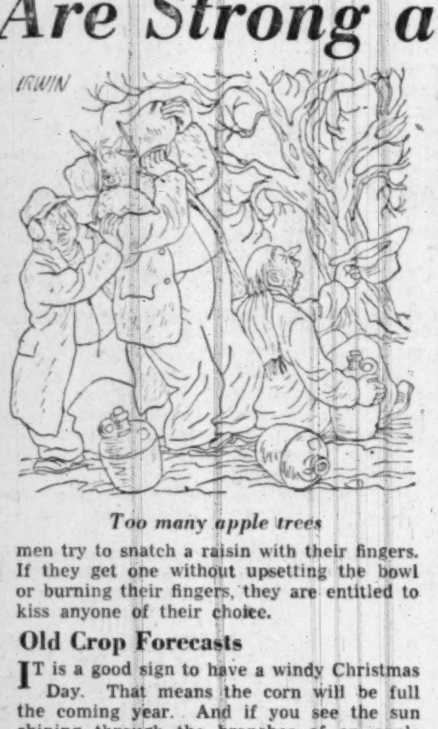
PERSONS born on Christmas Day have the power to see spirits and other unusual things, it is said.

If you will go to the beehive on Christmas morning, you will hear the bees humming, and if your ears are attuned you can tell if they are predicting good luck and health for you. The louder the hum, the greater will be your prosperity.

If you hear a cricket chirp on Christmas Eve, especially if it is on the hearth, it is an omen of good luck for the coming year.

It is well accepted that the crowing of a cock will drive away evil spirits. On Christmas he is apt to crow early, while at other times a cock crow is seldom heard until near dawn. On that one day he is warning any malevolent spirits to leave before the birth of Christ.

Besides the custom of kissing beneath the mistletoe, there is the bowl of brandy set on the Christmas table. A few raisins are added and the brandy is ignited. The young men try to snatch a raisin with their fingers. If they get one without upsetting the bowl or burning their fingers, they are entitled to kiss anyone of their choice.



Too many apple trees

Old Crop Forecasts

IT is a good sign to have a windy Christmas Day. That means the corn will be full the coming year. And if you see the sun shining through the branches of an apple tree the first thing Christmas morning, there will be abundant crops the coming season. Also, a warm Christmas means a cold Easter, or a late spring.

To insure good luck for the household, put a roasted apple in the egg-nog before anyone partakes of it, using the following incantation:

"Health to all who drink tonight;
Crops grow well, in weather bright."

The Christmas candle must never be snuffed out. Blow it out very carefully and save it for New Year's Eve, when the way in which it burns will tell the fortune of the household for the coming year. A flickering flame portends illness in the family, while a steady flame promises good health for all.

There are also ill omens which are most potent at this season. It is bad luck for a squint-eyed woman to enter the house on Christmas Day, just as it is unlucky to meet a woman first on New Year's Day.

Toasting the Orchard

THE old custom of blessing the apple trees on the eve of Old Christmas (January 5) probably dates back to ancient England, and is still practiced in some sections here.

The man of the house, accompanied by his friends, goes from tree to tree with a pitcher of cider, or, better still, something stronger, offering the following toast:

"Here's to the old apple tree,
Blow and bear, blow and bear;
Hats full, bags full, bushel baskets full,
And then some to spare."

The greater the number of trees, the more difficult it usually becomes to return to the house to replenish the liquid, as each man must partake of the contents of the pitcher at every toast.

Christmas is visiting time in the hill country, beginning with Christmas Eve and extending through New Year's. There is always some hospitality, frugal or sumptuous, depending on the circumstances of the host.

In as many homes as you eat mince pie or fruit cake on Christmas, so many months in the ensuing year will you be happy. And, for your greeting, don't forget this couplet:

"To wish you a Merry Christmas and a
Happy New Year,
A pocket full of money and a belly full of beer."

Or, as you enter, repeat this magic rhyme:

"A pie sat in the apple tree,
A hen sat clucking by;
I wish you a Merry Christmas,
And every day a pie;
A pocket full of money,
A cellar full of beer,
A fat pig in the sty
To last you all the year."

Gas 'Leak' Brightens Berlin

By Tom Reedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—The Soviet zone of Germany has sprung a gas leak. For cold Berliners, groping in the dark of their power-short, blockade city, that's good.

Every week daring Germans slip through the Russian blockade with tanks of the manufactured gas known as "propan." It heats, cooks, makes hot baths, provides light and even serves as fuel for automobiles.

A thriving business in the gas has been organized by an enterprising German in the British sector. At least he says he is a German, although he looks more like a Czech or a Pole and his accent definitely is eastern.

However that may be, he is a one-man blockade buster, and that's okay with the blockaded. The business operates on the oldest business principle. Eastern Germans and Poles make the gas. They want West marks, rather than the Soviet-issued East marks. The Berliner has West marks, but little light or heat. Add ingenuity and transportation and you've got a deal.

Openly Advertised

THE operation is a curious mixture of open publicity and veiled mystery. For instance, the Berlin boss issues little handbills advertising:

"Gas in each home for cooking, frying, baking. No pipes, no installations. Usable at once. High heating value. Approved by authorities. No danger of explosions."

The mystery, of course, is how the gas tanks are smuggled through the tight blockade and who is doing it. The "factory" headquarters here hums with activity. Rough looking men and occasionally women hold whispered conferences in corners. No names are divulged, but they do not object to photographers.

Outside stands one of the "six by six" United States Army trucks that supplied World War II armies. It still has a coat of khaki paint. The license plate bears a "P." That means Polish. In the trucks are two dozen tanks of the gas being unloaded in broad daylight.

The "Boss" confides that business is so good, although his black market prices are high, that he is working on a deal now to bring in the gas by rail. That would be quite a feat, but it is possible. Germans once made away with a whole trainload of coal in the Ruhr, took it to the hook of Holland and swapped it for potatoes.

Some of the gas originates in Poland, some in Silesia and other parts of eastern Germany where the coal or lignite for making it is available. Tanks of it are hauled by trucks over back roads in darkness toward Berlin. Official-looking papers—any kind, just so they have some kind of a round, red stamp—help get the cargo through.

Special Lamp Supplied

ONCE in the westen sectors of Berlin, a force of workmen distributes the gas into smaller portable tanks, ranging from three kilos (6 pounds) up to a 20-kilo size. Now they are ready for retail use.

If a customer wants gas for lighting he must buy the special lamp that goes with it. A coupling and hose are provided to connect the little bottle. The lamp has an old-fashioned gas mantle and gives a brilliant light.

If one wants heat he buys a radiator fashioned out of metal salvaged from bomb ruins. He can have a hot water heater, too. The tanks attach easily to an ordinary gas stove.

The lamp, with a 3-kilo bottle of gas, costs 145 West marks. That's $43.50 on the legal market, but less than $10 on the black bourse. A radiator with a 5-kilo bottle costs 170 West marks. Used sparingly, the bottle will last two months.

The initial cost is the heavy one. One can get refills of 3-kilo bottles for 5 marks, 5-kilo bottles for 8 marks.

The business is averaging a hundred "new" sales a week and the "Boss" says the only problem is finding enough metal containers for the gas. He says it as though breaking through the Russian blockade several times a week is like going to the movies.

Jungle Reclaims The War-Storied Solomon Islands

By Ken Likes
Associated Press Staff Writer

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 18.—The most backward and destitute islands in the Pacific today are the ones that gained the greatest wartime fame—the Solomons.

This was the report of Capt. Irving Johnson, American skipper of the yacht "Yankee II," after he had finished the most complete survey of Pacific islands that has been made since the war.

The Springfield, Mass., author and yachtsman arrived in the East Indies after sailing for almost a year through the Pacific and making 85 stops, most of them at remote islands.

"Shipping in the British and Australian Solomons is almost at a standstill," Johnson said. "Copra is not getting out and the coconut plantations are deteriorating rapidly. Many natives are going hungry."

There are few reminders that the South Pacific was one of the world's great battlefields, or that places like Tulagi, Bougainville, "Iron Bottom Bay," "The Slot" and Savo Island fill monumental places in the history of World War II.

"At Guadalcanal the piers and warehouses built during the war are rotting and falling apart," he said. "Nothing will be left of them in another year.

"Sailing through the Solomons, we spotted a few hulks of Japanese and American landing craft on the beaches, but that was about all."

Jungles have crept over most of the airfields, although some sections of Henderson Field on Guadalcanal remain cleared. The sites of a few former military bases are marked by the rusted remains of trucks and war machinery stretched out for miles in neat rows. Firearms and ammunition in waterproof packing, still usable, were found by Johnson's party on one isolated atoll.

The "Yanks" have a place in native legends, but even those are becoming vague.

BOOKS

Rescued for the Child

The Bible Story Without Begats

THE CHILDREN'S STORY BIBLE, by Harold Begbie, with a foreword by Daniel A. Poling. Illustrated in color by Cyrus Leroy Baldridge, Herbert Morton Stoops and Elliott Means. Garden City. 352 pp. $3.95.

IN THIS lyrical, modernized and slightly bowdlerized retelling of the Bible, Harold Begbie has created what is probably the most readable book of its kind recently attempted—an excellent introduction to the Scriptures for young readers.

Dr. Poling, in an enthusiastic preface, says he is thankful for a book based on the Bible that does not argue or look for flaws and contradictions, but that gives to children "the greatest story ever told of the greatest life ever lived."

I am certain that Dr. Poling does not mean to infer that he prefers for all purposes this retelling to the King James translation, or that scholarly criticism does not have its place in the study of the Bible.

Equally important, however, is that young readers be given Bible stories in such a form that they do not become bewildered or bored by whole chapters of "begats," the wailings of the lesser prophets, the discrepancies between even the synoptic gospels and other puzzling phenomena in the library of manuscripts we call "The Bible."

Rescued for the child from the sonorous but sometimes obsolete terminology of the great King James translation, these stories from the Testaments are presented in their strong-flowing narrative simplicity, recapturing the original magic they must have had for children of the Israelites listening spellbound to the traditions of their race.

Here are the folk tales of creation and the flood so persistent in one form or another with every tribe on earth. Here is the tragic beauty of Job, lessened in power, alas, by serious foreshortening. And here is that many generation saga of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and Rachel, and Joseph-of-the-coat-of-many-colors who was carried off to Egypt.

There is so much action and drama in the story of Moses, so much narrative suspense in the rise of David, so much humor in the tall tale of Samson, the strong man, that even children raised on the comics can be held spellbound by the prose and pictures in this book.

The minor prophets make less interesting reading, but the story again becomes compelling with the birth of Jesus.

Although some of the Psalms of David and selections from the Book of Proverbs are appended, I miss the great lyric poetry from the Song of Songs, doubtless considered too erotic for children. What better way, however, to teach them a few of the facts of both literature and life?

At the back of this volume are favorite hymns and carols and a distinguished gallery of religious art masterpieces, unfortunately not in color.

In an angry and vituperative world, "The Children's Story Bible" should furnish a welcome antidote to place beneath the Christmas tree. It might remind the whole family of the origin of the holiday we are commemorating.

Leave Islands To Own Code, Says Karig

THE FORTUNATE ISLANDS, by Capt. Walter Karig, USNR.; photographs by Navy Photographer's Mate 1/c Vernon C. Gustafson. Rinehart. 226 pp. $3.75.

TO MOST Americans, Pacific islands mean bare-breasted native girls and romantic nights, or shell-torn palm trees and bodies heaped on beaches—the view dependent upon the proximity to the Pacific war.

To Captain Karig, they mean a little of both and much of neither of these.

Karig says he has been "in love" with the islands of Micronesia for the 20 years that he has studied them as a hobby. "It's a safe bet," he writes, "that not one in a thousand citizens of continental United States knows that we possess the islands (of Micronesia) . . ."

Micronesia (the Carolines, Marianas and Marshalls groups) is "1200 square miles of real estate scattered in crumbs over 3,000,000 square miles" of the central Pacific, which the United States now holds under a United Nations trusteeship. (Guam, also in this area, is a United States possession.) It includes such Atom Age names as Bikini and Eniwetok, site of the A-bomb tests.

A former newspaperman, author of "Zotz!," a popular farce-satire of Washington bureaucracy, and other books, Captain Karig is special public relations assistant to the Chief of Naval Operations. A recent Pacific tour in company with Gustafson resulted in this photographic-narrative account, which is agreeably reproduced by offset printing.

In a breezy, opinionated style (which might be objectionably flippant to some readers), Karig traces the background of the Micronesian islands through their assorted rape—anatomically and otherwise—by explorers, whalers and traders, the later advent of the missionaries, and rule by the Spanish, Germans and Japanese.

For generations, he declares, these grass-skirted islanders have been misunderstood and proselytized. Their placid ways, the sex life they have so much time for, have been distorted in Western eyes, he writes. "What we call 'sex' is so inescapably ever-present in the islands that visitors from other lands . . . cannot help but misunderstand and sully the native code."

He pleads that they be left, as much as possible, to follow their own life, free of "bureaucrats," "pork-barrel gourmands," "do-gooders," etc. Primarily, he writes, they need medicaments to cure evils contracted from civilization. Despite his own Navy associations, he warns of dangers through "professionally military" administration, and urges administration by a civilian corps under the National Defense Organization.

Although not scholarly in intent, this volume makes illuminating and provocative reading. Some veterans of lesser military rank who came to know the islands during wartime may differ with Karig's account of their attractions. Others may heartily agree. But even those who disagree that these indeed are Fortunate Islands, will wish they had an informative guidebook such as this to help form their impressions.—MURREY MARDER.

In a Nutshell...

DISASTER! Edited by Ben Kartman and Leonard Brown. Pellegrini and Cudahy. 343 pp. $2.75.

"THESE are true stories from yesterday's headlines," says a blurb on the dust jacket of this book, and it's as good a description as any. The American disasters covered here run from 1811, the "Year of the Great Quakes" in the Ohio-Mississippi Valley, to the Texas City explosion of April, 1947.

Some are on-the-scene accounts; some are rewrites done from vantage points several years after the fact. Hindsight being what it is, the latter are much the better.

Big league names are present on the writing end—Herbert Asbury, Hodding Carter, Stewart Holbrook, Eddie Foy (helping with an account of the Iroquois Theater fire), Frederick Lewis Allen, Harnett T. Kane and some others.

Your favorite American disaster is surely here—whether it be the San Francisco quake and fire, the Johnstown flood or the loss of the submarine Squalus—and there is an account of the sinking of the Titanic as well. In addition, there is an index and a Supplementary List of American Disasters. Curl up with this one for a good gloomy evening.—O. B. H.

FUNDAMENTALS OF PSYCHOANALYSIS. By Franz Alexander, M. D. Norton. $3.75.

IT IS books like this that make it possible for the layman to get some beginning understanding of the incredibly complex structure of the human personality. With commendable simplicity, Dr. Alexander has written a comprehensive account of the present state of psychoanalytic knowledge, and its application in the treatment of mental illness. Happily uncomplicated by any long and confusing history of the pioneers in psychoanalysis, the book is neither very technical nor very "popular" in style—merely authoritative and readable. Dr. Alexander is director of the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis, and clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of Illinois.—L. G.

4000 YEARS OF CHRISTMAS, by Earl W. Count. Schuman $2.

CHRISTMAS hasn't always been Christian, any more than it has always been ours. It hasn't always been Christmas, either, we read in this timely little book. Christmas is an adaptation of perhaps age-old festivals that mark the change of seasons, the year's shortest day, and the dawn of a new twelvemonth. Early Christians were not interested in the date of Christ's birth. By the time they were willing to celebrate it, it was too late to learn just when it occurred, so that December 25 is an arbitrary date. Santa Claus, too, has pagan blood in his veins. There was a Saint Nicholas, Archbishop of Myra, who died December 6, in the year 326; he gave gifts in secret so that no one would learn he was the benefactor. Down through the centuries he and the Germanic god Woden or Odin, who rode an old white horse, have got jumbled into one man with a white beard, red cheeks and a pack on his back. Some German boys set out hay for his horse.

THEY TOOK TO THE SEA, by David Klein and Mary Louise Johnson. Rutgers. $3.75.

EVER since Joshua Slocum set sail in 1895 on a lonely voyage around the world, others have tried to follow in his wake. Slocum wrote a book about his adventures, an acknowledged masterpiece on seafaring. The others—such as George Mulhauser, Jack London, Alain Gerbault, Harry Pidgeon, William Albert Robinson and the rest — wrote books good and bad about their adventures. Now two part-time mariners who confine their navigation to Long Island Sound have written a good book based largely on the books of all this sailing crew.

YANKEE FOLK, by Edwin Valentine Mitchell, Vanguard. $3.

MITCHELL'S new book is a fitting companion-piece for his other volumes of fascinating stories from Colonial days: "It's An Old New England Custom" and "It's An Old Pennsylvania Custom." Mitchell ranges wide fields in gathering his fresh crop of tales. Hermits, body snatchers, snake hunters, pirates, whalers, bank robbers and many more form the colorful cavalcade which rides through his pages. The author is a deft story teller, possessed of a dry humor.

ALBUM OF AMERICAN HISTORY: END OF AN ERA, edited by James Truslow Adams. Scribner's. $7.50.

THIS fourth volume, opening with the "not so gay" nineties and closing with World War I, carries to completion the original plan for a pictorial history of this country from 1492 to 1917. The period marked the end of the blacksmith, the survey, the brewer's "blue ribbon" teams and the fire engine drawn by horses; of the Horatio Alger shoe-shine boy, the Gibson girl, the high shoe, the parasol with flounces and ribbons, the tableau, the Morris chair, the antimacassar. It was the period of Coxey's Army, the War with Spain, the San Francisco earthquake, the balloon race, Billy Sunday, Fatty Arbuckle, Irene and Vernon Castle, and Paul Chabas of "September Morn" fame.

Bad-Tasting Facts About Mentally Ill

THE SHAME OF THE STATES. By Albert Deutsch. Harcourt, Brace. 188 pp. $3.

THIS little book is good, bad-tasting medicine. It is good medicine for the average citizen who knows little about mental illness and how the mentally sick are cared for. It is good medicine for those who are responsible for the inhuman conditions which obtain in a majority of this country's hospitals for the mentally ill.

Albert Deutsch is a good reporter. When he writes about the care of the mentally ill he is dealing with a topic he has studied for years. Most of his book consists of vivid word pictures of what he saw in nine of this country's largest hospitals for the mentally ill. The picture is not pretty.

In words and photographs he depicts dilapidated, unsanitary buildings, unappetizing, cold, watery food. He describes the obsolete methods of restraint—thongs, straightjackets and shackles—used to control patients. He gives figures as to the pitifully inadequate number of attendants, nurses and doctors that are available to care for these sick people.

And he makes distressingly clear that most of our hospitals for the mentally ill can make little attempt to cure their patients; they can only provide poor shelter and worse food while these sick human beings "rot and deteriorate."

The fault is not often, he makes clear, that of the officials and doctors who run these hospitals. They do their best, but we, the American people, have persistently refused to give them the funds to provide decent housing, food and doctors.

Fortunately, Deutsch can include in his picture two bright spots which offer hope for the future. He describes the care and treatment provided in two institutions which can treat these unfortunates like sick people, and do cure them. And he describes the work of the National Mental Hygiene Committee which has done much to make the American people aware of their neglect of the mentally ill and to point the way toward their more humane care and better ways of curing them.—JOHN J. CORSON.

The Painter Is Eclipsed By the Man

Sir Godfrey Kneller and His Times, 1646-1723. By Lord Killanin. Batsford. 108 pp. $12.50.

ONCE, while, with Alexander Pope, Sir Godfrey Kneller told his nephew that the latter was looking at "the two greatest men in the world." Kneller would probably have been the first to concede the exaggeration of his remark. The world is a pretty big place, and Kneller was probably thinking only of Europe.

It is such traits as this "modesty" that make Kneller an engaging character as well as a portrait painter whose work is social history as well as art.

Born into an upper middle class German family in 1646, Godfrey was intended to be a soldier. After studying at the University of Leyden, however, he persuaded his sympathetic father that he should become an artist.

Kneller studied in Amsterdam and in Italy, in the schools of Rembrandt and Frans Hals, Raphael and the Caracci. When his father died in 1675, Godfrey and his brother, John Zachary, decided to return to Italy by way of London. Thereafter England was their home.

Godfrey's rise was rapid. He painted a portrait of the secretary of the Duke of Monmouth, illegitimate son of Charles II, which led to a portrait of the duke and then one of the King. It won him the position of leading court painter.

As a foreigner, Kneller eschewed politics, but he closely watched trends and trimmed his sails accordingly. He died wealthy and with the distinction of being the first painter in England to be created a baronet.

As a man, he loved flattery and the good things of life. He was something of a "character." He was handsome, and Mrs. Voss, the mistress he bought from her Quaker husband, was a beauty.

If there is a criticism to be made of Killanin's book, it is that the picture of Kneller the man tantalizes the reader. One would like further exploration of his character and relationship with others.

Kneller's long career extended to the reign of George I, and in addition to royalty he painted everyone of importance in closely knit English society, many in two series of portraits, the Hampton Court beauties and the members of the Kit Kat Club. He also painted such figures as Samuel Pepys and John Evelyn, Isaac Newton, Dryden, Congreve, Pope and John Gay.

Killanin's fine book brings out Kneller in relation to the life of his time and to English art. He includes a discussion of costume and contemporary painters and mezzotint artists. "Sir Godfrey Kneller" is a satisfying book, scholarly yet pleasantly readable.

A Blueprint for 1949-52

Prosiac Truman Talk Has Peculiar Power

THE TRUMAN PROGRAM. by Harry S. Truman. Public Affairs Press. 261 pp. $2.95.

NOW THAT a second term for Harry S. Truman is assured, it behooves Americans of all political parties to read critically his speeches and pronunciamentos.

Taken together, they make an almost completely rounded program for political action, particularly on the domestic level.

Truman's style is what might be called passionately prosaic. It lacks entirely the warmth and humor and brilliance of FDR. It has none of the Shakespearian grandeur of Churchill at his best, none of the philosophical insight of a Jefferson or the humble majesty of a Lincoln.

Instead it has a quality which probably helped Truman win his surprising victory in November. It is composed from the Vulgate of grass roots America. It is full of monosyllabic horse sense—hard-hitting, graceless, forthright prose. Completely lacking in classical allusions, whimsy or forensic magic, it is, nevertheless, not without a certain power. Its very artlessness carries conviction.

From these unlettered pages emerges a man who is more truly dedicated to gradual social reform than one might imagine. Here is a citizen stubborn, persistent and too often bitter against his enemies, who can be counted upon consistently to back his own convictions against hell, high water, Communists, Republicans and Dixiecrats.

The Road Ahead

WHAT CAN we expect from the future after reading this book?

That Truman will continue to sponsor his civil rights program with the same disregard for political expediency that he showed during the campaign.

That he will continue to fight for price curbs, an excess profits tax, and other measures which he believes may alleviate inflation.

That he will seek to raise the minimum wage level, extend social security and fight for additional funds for education, public housing and other social benefits.

That, like Wilson and FDR, he will continue to try to keep us out of war while giving all-out aid to our allies.

That he will back his loyalty probe and FBI checkups on the Communists but will continue to heckle publicity-seeking congressional committees of the Thomas stripe.

That he will continue to try to balance the budget and whittle down the debt, if necessary, at the expense of the taxpayer.

That he will give at least lip service to trust-busting.

That he will satisfy his labor backers by continuing to attack the Taft-Hartley Act while awaiting new labor legislation.

That he will satisfy his agricultural backers by continuing to support farm prices, the commodity credit program, rural electrification, rural housing and the cooperatives, while keeping a weather eye on soil conservation and the endangered national parks and forests.

That he will seek to soothe business by proclaiming his friendly interest in full production if not his whole-hearted joy in zooming profits.

That, in short, he will seek to revive partially the spirit of the New Deal within the framework of the modified capitalism we now enjoy.

Nothing 'Dangerous'

WHILE IT is not certain that the new Congress, even with its additional Democrats, will rubber stamp all of Truman's legislative proposals, we can probably expect some new curbs and new taxes. Not to be expected are brilliant improvisations, "dangerous" innovations or excessive socialization.

Whether you voted for Harry S. Truman or not, you owe it to your own future to examine coolly and carefully this blueprint he has drawn for our future. It is the only road map we have for that dim highway 1949-52.—S. N.

Balancing the Books

By Lee Grove

GEORGE KORSON, who in addition to editing the official Red Cross magazine here pursues folklore as an avocation, is reading galley proofs on his seventh book, "Pennsylvania Songs and Legends," which the University of Pennsylvania Press is publishing, probably in March.

The book comprises 13 chapters, each by a different author, with Korson as general editor. Korson had to reduce the book from 700 to 500 pages, but still found room to include 100 songs with music, including some Pennsylvania Dutch ones hitherto unpublished.

Korson has been interested in folklore for 23 years and founded the Bucknell University folk festival. Among his other books are "Minstrels of the Mine Patch," containing folklore of the Pennsylvania anthracite miners, and "Coal Dust on the Fiddle," folklore of the bituminous coal miners which Korson gathered in various parts of the country.

Southern Bonanza

SPEAKING of folklorists, Ben Botkin, editor of "A Treasury of American Folklore" and more recently of "A Treasury of New England Folklore," is in town until Christmas working on "A Treasury of Southern Folklore." Eventually he hopes to finish anthologies covering all the regions.

"The South is much richer in material than other sections," he says, "partly because it has been more thoroughly explored and partly because there is such a variety of subregions, and also because of the contributions of the Negro."

Typical American resourcefulness played its part in Botkin's becoming a preeminent folklorist. He was teaching at the University of Oklahoma, had a background in anthropology and wanted to do his Ph.D. dissertation in the field of English on an American subject. The resourcefulness came into the picture when, realizing that he was remote from adequate libraries, he decided to choose a folklore subject and included a collection of Oklahoma texts and tunes.

SMITHSONIAN HISTORY—Henry Schuman, Inc., will publish on January 13, "Sons of Science, the Story of the Smithsonian Institution and its Leaders." The author is Paul H. Oehser, since 1931 editor of the Smithsonian's National Museum and also assistant chief of the institution's editorial division.

THE Walters Art Gallery's manuscript show, to be held at the Baltimore Museum of Art from January 23 to March 13, is probably the most extensive exhibit of early manuscripts ever to be held in the United States, and a several-million-dollar show, according to Frederick R. Goff, chief of the Library of Congress' rare book division.

Manuscripts being lent by the Morgan Library, New York City, will probably total a million dollars in value; the New York Public Library's loan another million; the Library of Congress' loan about a hundred thousand dollars and the loan from the Rosenwald collection another hundred thousand. In addition, there are the manuscripts being lent by other institutions, to say nothing of those in the Baltimore collections.

ODD JOTS—Dieter Cunz, associate professor of German at the University of Maryland, is the author of "The Maryland Germans," a history just published by Princeton University Press . . . Robert Penn Warren recently passed through town en route from Italy to his teaching post at the University of Minnesota, and to work on another book . . . Hirst Milhollen, coauthor with Milton Kaplan of "Presidents on Parade," is leaving town January 20 with his wife for a motor trip of some 1500 miles down the Pan American Highway. Yes, a picture book is expected to result, with Mrs. Milhollen doing the story . . . The London Times praised the Folger Shakespeare Library's plan to develop a research program in sixteenth and seventeenth century English civilization as a background for study of American culture, as "likely to be of the highest value."

China's Past Superimposed

CHANGING CHINA. By Harrison Forman. Crown. 337 pp. $4.

HARRISON Forman, China correspondent for NBC and the New York Times, attempts to extract "from the past only what it contributes to the picture of China today." Yet surprisingly little is said about contemporary politics and what Forman calls "the continuing civil war." While the maps and tables included are helpful, it is unfortunate that the numerous photographs are so cramped.

However, the book's shortcomings result primarily from the swift march of contemporary events rather than from any flaws in the presentation of the material. A very competent observer, Forman vividly describes the geographic regions of China and the socio-economic life of the Chinese.

He prefixes his thoroughly readable book with Chinese history in capsule form; and concludes with a summary of China's postwar aspects and of drawing board plans for China's tenuous future.

'Confession' Enhances Connolly

By Sterling North

ENEMIES OF PROMISE. By Cyril Connolly. Macmillan. 265 pp. $5.

ENGLISH criticism, which is almost as tottering these days as English finances or Empire politics, has at least one jewel in its crown.

CONNOLLY

Cyril Connolly, editor and founder of Horizon, the advance guard English literary monthly, continues to turn out his bitter, brilliant, egotistical essays on his contemporaries which would be readable even if they were not also eminently sound and erudite.

Ten years ago on the eve of Munich, "Enemies of Promise" first appeared. Slightly revised, it has weathered the decade—a test Connolly demands of any good book.

It has survived principally, I think, because it is essentially nonpolitical. Because it integrates modern writers with the whole stream of English and American literature. And finally because it contains a tantalizing fragment of autobiography as honest as anything by Rousseau, Samuel Butler or H. G. Wells in the same self-revealing vein. In all English literature, Eton has never taken such a beating from an "old boy."

CONNOLLY should, of course, have prefaced his book with the surprising confessional with which it closes. Perhaps, however, he shrewdly deduced that his violent self-hatred would prejudice the reader against his critical conclusions in the other two sections of the volume.

Actually, such autobiographical data helps explain all of Connolly's well-curbed prejudices and highlights his values. Here is the arch-typical product of Eton and Balliol College, the young English intellectual, well schooled in the classics, enraged by the Tories yet somewhat skeptical of the Communists, weary of the word-lapidaries, yet not completely convinced by the plain-spoken Hemingway and his disciples, an admirer of Auden, Spender and Isherwood, who is, however, blind to none of their faults.

Connolly advances the perhaps too neat and simple theory that modern literature is the product of two strongly opposing forces. One is the "Mandarin" school of writing, which at its best produced the diction of Donne, Browne, Addison, Johnson, Gibbon, de Quincey, Landor, Carlyle and Ruskin.

Long sentences, quotations, allusions, metaphors, Latin terminology and conceits are the hallmarks of this brand of distinguished letters which gave us Pater and Henry James in one generation and the Sitwells in another. But the pace of these "Mandarins" always presupposes an audience with a level of income, education and leisure commensurate with the time consumed in contemplative reading.

The great modern counter force, according to Connolly, is the stripped simplicity of Hemingway and his imitators, who insist that good writing is architecture, not interior decoration. Both approaches have their flaws and virtues. But great writing of the future will draw upon the merits of each.

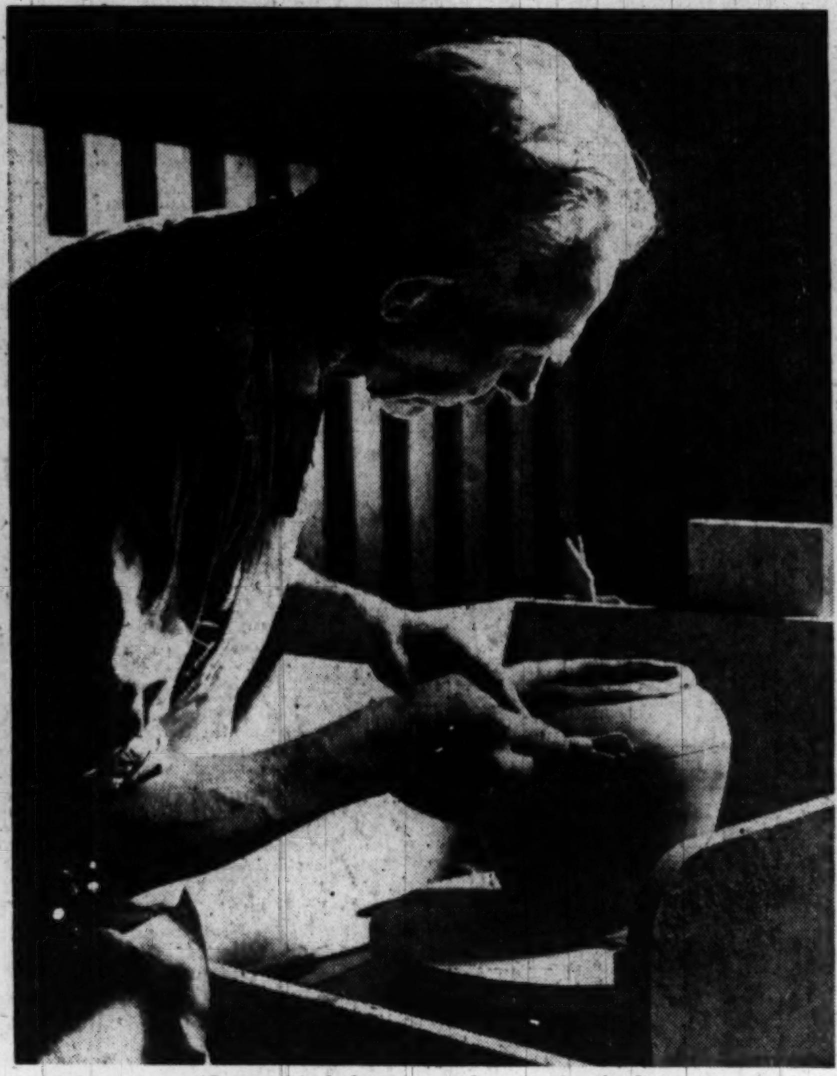
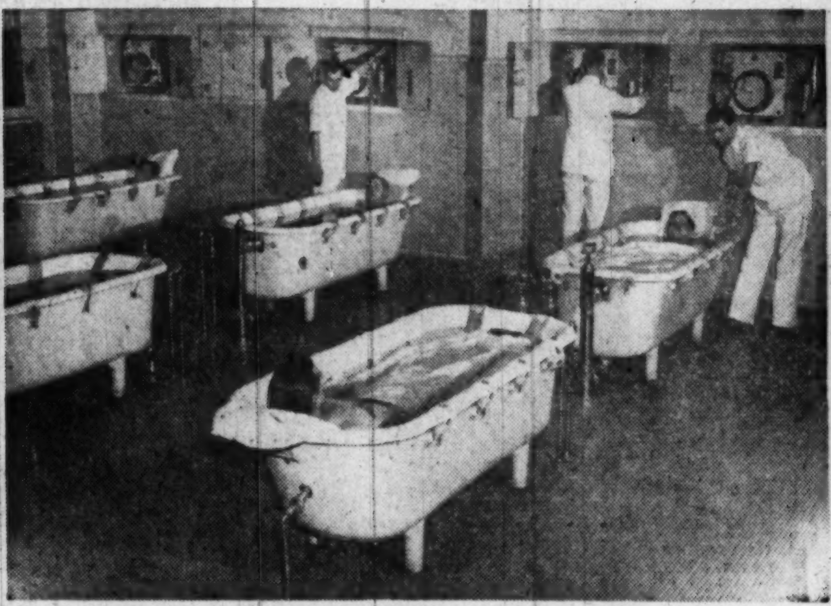
Voluntary Patients Regaining Mental Health at St. Elizabeths

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

The operating room at St. Elizabeths



Occupational therapy, at the potter's wheel



Hydrotherapy, with movements restricted

The healing rays of ultraviolet light

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

THAT helpless fear of losing one's mind without a chance to fight back is no longer valid for District residents.

Already, 20 District residents fearing insanity have applied for treatment and have been admitted to St. Elizabeths Hospital here under the new voluntary admissions law, the records show.

Another 35 residents have been admitted under a companion measure that permits direct admission on true petitions of responsible citizens concerned over the mental state of relatives and friends.

Congress authorized the benevolent laws at its last session and the machinery to carry them out went into operation at the Federal mental institution last summer.

Last week the hospital disclosed the response to those laws and gave an inside picture of what awaits the mentally ill.

It wasn't altogether a pretty picture, but neither is mental disease, even at its best.

Rigors Are Necessary

NOTHING apparently was hidden. The patient in seclusion, grimacing wretchedly on the twisted mattress of his cell solitaire, was revealed just as freely as the happy, hopeful patients already enjoying liberties and looking forward to going home.

Pool tables, card tables, movie equipment, gymnasium facilities, sun decks and all the other niceties that go into efforts to erase the gloom of institutional life were there.

So were the more fearsome things, like the electric shock device that sends convulsive spasms in bone-breaking proportion through a patient's body. And malaria fever therapy, in which the spirochete is literally burned out of neurospyhilitics by 105-degree fever bouts every 3 days for 45 days.

Then there were the wet packs, welcomed by most patients though wrongly feared by others; hot and cold hose water therapy, called Scotch douches by both patients and attendants; insulin sub-shock therapy; surgical brain repair; barred windows and locked doors, iron fences and stone walls.

Yes, some of the treatments are rugged, but they wouldn't be used if they hadn't already been shown as valuable adjuncts to mental health repair. For St. Elizabeths is no pest house, no snake pit, but is one of the Nation's leading treatment centers for the mentally ill.

Created for Services —

HOUSING some 6700 patients on its 350 acres in Anacostia, it operates as a perpetuating tribute to the original land charter made to John Charmes "in the name of St. Elizabeth of Hungary, patron saint of the lepers and the insane."

The institution was created by act of Congress in 1855 for the "humane care and enlightened curative treatment" of persons developing mental or nervous disability while in the service of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. Its official title was the Government Hospital for the Insane until 1916, when Congress bowed to local usage and renamed it St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The reputation it built up through the years as the most up-to-date institution of its kind in the United States has done much to banish the public dread of mental hospitals. The change has been most evidenced in recent years by growing pleas to open its doors to preventive treatment as well as corrective.

So, with congressional authority, St. Elizabeths opened those doors to voluntary admissions on August 23.

Eight men and 12 women have since willingly asked and received hospitalization, and eight of the 20 are back in their homes. The average stay of those admitted and then discharged was 23 days, hospital records show.

The persons who sought and gained admission were generally in those older age brackets where mental confusions creep in. Of the males, one was 29, two were 36 and the remainder followed upward, 49, 51, 58 and the two oldest were 64.

The females admitted included one Negro woman, aged 40, and white women ranging between 24 and 75 years old.

Age Range Significant

HAVING come in voluntarily, their degree of mental derangement was less serious than that of the bulk of patients admitted by court orders and transfers from Gallinger Hospital's psychiatric ward, said Dr. Addison M. Duval, first assistant physician at St. Elizabeths. But their age range, he added, was "comparable" to the general span of mental hospital patients.

In fact, Dr. Duval emphasized mental ills are increasing in direct proportion to medical advances made in prolonging life, and geriatrics, the study of ailments of old age, is becoming increasingly important at St. Elizabeths.

Those who seek voluntary admission to St. Elizabeths, the law states, must do so in writing. Moreover, and herein lies the restriction that denies some immediate entry, they must be found "mentally competent to make such application."

Intent of the restrictions was protective and valid, hospital authorities said, but too frequently they delay admission of the mentally ill who seek to bypass Gallinger Hospital, where facilities are inadequate.

What happens, however, to those who are accepted at St. Elizabeths?

Begins With Cleanliness

THE great majority, it was shown, will spend their entire stay, be it less than a week or nearly a year, in the receiving home. A few, however, may become long-time patients, with transfer to the continued treatment wards after failure to respond to known therapies.

Incoming patients are received at the admission suite of the receiving service. Here, their valuables are checked in and their clothing itemized. And cleanliness, the prevailing attribute at St. Elizabeths, enters the picture.

Each incoming patient must take a bath or be bathed by attendants. Clothing is inspected and even fumigated when necessary. The patient then gets a complete physical examination by a hospital physician and the case study of his physical and mental condition is begun.

If helpless in his own confusion, he is aided by trained attendants who accustom him to the institutional life he has voluntarily entered. The job requires sympathy, but also firm direction.

The physical examination completed, the patient is sent to an appropriate ward. As nearly as possible, he is placed among other patients of comparable mental state. And it is here that he gets the feel of mental hospital life at its start.

Interview Might Work

WHAT happens from then on depends largely on the findings of his condition by the Commission on Mental Health, which examines him, and the psychiatrists who supervise his care.

He is given the standard psychiatric examinations and is more closely classified for the treatments that will follow. Perhaps some interviews with the psychiatrist will straighten out his "kinks," and he's already on his way to "privileges" and discharge.

Nothing, however, is hurried about the treatment at St. Elizabeths. Even the ward attendants move about the patients unhurriedly, lest quick movements, a fast approach, ruffle the nerves.

Hydrotherapy is most generally prescribed for those patients classified as acutely disturbed. For some, this means wet packs; for others, continuous flow tepid baths, or hose showers under moderate pressure, or, the most rarely employed, steam cabinet therapy.

Wet packs are administered for sedative effect by attendants who wrap the patients in sheets cold-wet with ordinary tap water. The single sheets are folded over and under the arms, to prevent skin touching skin and to restrict movement and the patient is fold-wrapped in a wool blanket. He rests in this position for one to two hours.

From here, he may go to the shower stalls, where shower heads play needlepoint sprays over his entire body. He may also get the "Scotch douche," to stimulate hot and cold thresholds.

In the latter, an attendant alternately directs two pressure streams over the patient standing in the shower stall. The streams, one hot and the other cold, are strangely welcomed by many of the patients.

Continuous flow tepid baths are generally given those patients to whom wet packs only increase their mental agitation. These patients relax in the tubs or, where necessary, are cradled in canvas webbing to allow some, but not unrestricted movement.

Shocks Increase Weight

PSYCHIATRISTS, the medical specialists trained for the profession, prescribe all psychiatric treatments. These include the "drastic" ones, insulin sub-shock, electric shock and malaria fever therapy.

Insulin sub-shock therapy consists of artifically inducing the systemic shock of severe diabetics up to but not including actual coma. Then the patient is resuscitated with orange juice or intravenous injections of glucose.

The treatment is based on past observations that many mental patients who suffer convulsive shocks show mental improvement after the convulsions. It led to the more severe electric shock therapy. Patients under insulin sub-shock therapy often gain as much as 15 pounds in one month, making it especially desirable for emaciated depressives, it was said.

Electric shock also is for severely depressed patients. At St. Elizabeths, as in most good mental institutions, the therapy is used sparingly, and then only with the consent of the patient's relatives or guardians.

The electro shock machine actually produces a state of unconsciousness by passing a current of electricity through the brain. A trained psychiatrist manipulates the controls, a nurse aids with the therapy and three or four trained attendants hold the patient to cushion the violent muscular spasms during unconsciousness.

Properly administered, said St. Elizabeths psychiatrists, there is little danger to the patient. And to lessen the greatest hazard, the chipping of bones in the vertebral column, the patient's back is arched over a hump in the adjustable bed.

The electric current passes through the brain between two electrodes pasted to the patient's head and held securely by a rubber headband. One of its harmful psychological effects, at least some psychiatrists say, is that some patients, generally those suffering guilt and persecution complexes, fear they are being electrocuted.

Group Therapy Doubled

FORTUNATELY, the extreme treatments are not in the books for the vast majority of patients who have sought hospital treatment, St. Elizabeths authorities said. Less seriously disturbed, perhaps only mildly depressed, anxious or confused by domestic troubles, they respond readily to psychoanalysis, occupational and group therapy and physiological therapy.

Group therapy, by which patients learn to get along with other persons, is being recognized more and more as a treatment of choice in mental institutions. At St. Elizabeths, the program has recently been expanded. Now 14 groups, totaling more than 250 patients, are organized or scheduled to start soon.

The classes are unobtrusively led by a psychiatrist or therapist skilled in channeling idea expressions. Most mental hospital patients resent obvious guidance, group therapists say. But, in proper hands, a group of them can be brought out of their twisted and confused thinking, psychiatrists agree.

One of the main purposes of group therapy is to attract those patients who sit for hours in apathy, staring at the room radiator, neglecting to go to the toilet, showing no interest in anything, even food.

It's aimed, too, at others who show no regard for their fellow patients, and the aggressive types who try to dominate others. In fact, group therapy is aimed at every class of mental patient that might be "reached" in communion with others.

Help With the Chores

OCCUPATIONAL therapy, including willingness of patients to perform routine chores, has long been recognized as a cure hastener in mental institutions. Patients permitted to work gain confidence in themselves, psychiatrists say.

At St. Elizabeths, patients operate a shoe repair shop, they get out their own newspapers, they work at basketry weaving, ceramics making, metalcrafts and woodwork, art classes and many other tasks that interest them. They may also help in the farming, work in the kitchens or of the thousand and one safe chores that go into running a community as large as St. Elizabeths.

Psychodrama, in which patients take to the stage to portray other characters in their personal lives, is being used with some success at St. Elizabeths, the authorities said. By this vehicle, it was explained, the patient portraying others often sees himself in a truer light and the recovery process has begun.

There are other morale builders. For recreation, there are movies, dances, games and other entertainment. Daytime, overnight, weekend and extended leaves home are progressively given patients showing marked progress.

What does all this mean to the patients? Most importantly, say the hospital authorities, it means eventual discharge for more than 50 per cent of those admitted for treatment. For the others, it lightens the dread of institution life.

Fat Offers Refused

ST. ELIZABETHS HOSPITAL, with its 170-odd buildings and shops, was once the largest mental hospital in the country. Today there are bigger ones, but none rated better in the category of public institutions. And relatively few private sanitariums offer better care.

Attracting some of the best psychiatrists, nurses, physicians, therapists and attendants in the country, the institution has built up a staff tradition of loyalty and service. That spirit today is standing the test of attempts to lure the employes away from St. Elizabeths with far more lucrative offers than the Government pay schedules can meet.

Personnel training programs at every level are constantly in progress at the Federal institution. The classes include those for social workers, dieticians, attendants, student nurses, affiliate nurses, postgraduate nurses, occupational therapists, psychologists and the psychiatrists themselves.

All three Washington medical schools send their students to St. Elizabeths for instruction in psychiatry. The hospital superintendent, Dr. Winfred Overholser, himself serves as professor of psychiatry at George Washington Medical School.

Slowly, step by step over the years, the methods of St. Elizabeths, and men and women trained at St. Elizabeths, have spread over the country, and a new picture of care for the mentally ill is presented.

It wasn't unusual, in the days of the founding of St. Elizabeths, that mental cases were chained to their beds. Today such practice has disappeared more from the country's mental hospitals than it has from the pens of fiction writers.

Today residents of the District of Columbia even volunteer for treatment at St. Elizabeths.

The 'Foster Money' Shouldn't Count

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

THE little boy sat on a chair, his short legs pumping up and down, inches from the floor.

He was a thin little boy, and there was a worried frown on his face.

An old man came into the room, and in a blustery voice said, "Boy! What's your name?"

The child looked up. "Arthur," he piped.

"Well, Arthur," said the man, "if you want anything around here, just ask for it, and my daughter will get it for you."

The worried frown went off Arthur's face, and he smiled, at first timidly and then broadly.

This happened 20 years ago. Arthur was the first "foster" child assigned to Mrs. Annie E. Boteler by the District Board of Public Welfare.

Since then, more than 40 boys have been assigned to Mrs. Boteler for foster care. A few years ago her husband, who had helped as a foster father, died, but Mrs. Boteler continued to accept foster children until an arthritic condition forced her to abandon her role as a foster mother.

She has sold the big house at 529 14th st. ne., which was "home" for so many years to motherless-fatherless boys, and moved in with a daughter at 2832 Buena Vista Terrace ne.

"But if my arthritis got better, I'd ask for some more boys," she said yesterday. "There isn't anything that makes you feel better than to watch them grow up and know you are giving them the affection they need so badly."

Younger Ones Favored

DISTRICT Public Welfare officials have a particularly warm spot in their hearts for Mrs. Boteler. For during the time she was a "foster" mother, she took care of that group of welfare wards which is most difficult to place—the school-age boy.

Many persons who are willing to be foster parents will state flatly that they are interested only in children of preschool age. Yet there is a growing number of youngsters, past 6, who are left homeless and without a legal guardian and who, unless a foster home can be found for them, must be put in a "protective" institution until they are old enough to be out on their own.

For Mrs. Boteler, her "boys" were no trouble. "I didn't make my boys drudge," she said, "but I did insist that they keep their clothes picked up and put away."

She also sent them to the church of their choice each Sunday, and had an arrangement with the Boys Club of Washington to admit them to membership, without charge, while they stayed in her home.

Through the years, she has kept track of most of her charges, many of whom were in the service in World War II. Now that she has changed her address, she said, they no longer come back to visit her. "I guess they just don't know where I am," she said.

"But one thing you have to understand," she said. "I never took the children to make money. You've got to be some kind of a mother to want to look after other people's children. I clothed and fed them for $5 a week—that was what the rate used to be—and I enjoyed every minute of it."

Case of Johnny Doe

ANOTHER foster mother who has recently retired from the service of the Public Welfare Department is Mrs. Ethel McCollum of 4014 34th st., Mount Rainier, Md.

Mrs. McCollum was a foster parent—along with her husband Robert—for 15 years before ill health forced her to abandon the work.

Mrs. McCollum will smile if you ask her what she considers the highlight of her foster parent career.

Mrs. McCollum, who likes children, and "the younger the better," took Johnny Doe nine years ago when the infant was found abandoned in the 600 block of Independence ave. nw.

During the months that Mrs. McCollum cared for the child at the request of welfare officials, a thorough search was made for the child's mother. Mrs. McCollum said that literally hundreds of women came to her home to look at the baby boy, but none identified it as her own.

"A lot of them, I know, came out of curiosity," she said. "But there was one woman—she came twice—I am sure she was the boy's mother."

The child eventually was placed for adoption and found a good home, Mrs. McCollum said. Where, she does not know.

For most foster parents, giving up a child they have cared for and fed and clothed is a heart-breaking proposition. Welfare officials select persons for foster parents who they feel will have the ability to surrender a child when a suitable permanent home is found for him.

A Window Opens

MRS. McCOLLUM agrees with Mrs. Boteler: "A foster mother should never apply for a child just for money. She should love children. If she does, a child will make her life happier."

The greatest happiness, Mrs. McCollum said, sometimes comes from the saddest beginnings.

One of her foster children was a small, "quite delicate" boy. He seemed to be getting along all right until an examination showed that he had a cataract on one eye.

An operation was performed, and the child's "good eye" was bandaged to make him use the impaired eye, even though the doctor was not sure there was any sight in the eye.

Mrs. McCollum said that one of the thrills of her life came one day when she was looking through the newspapers, and the small child, looking out of his "bad" eye, said, "Look at the man, Mommy."

"It was a wonderful feeling to know he had sight," she said.

The Welfare Department, which regards Mrs. Boteler and Mrs. McCollum as two of its own particular kind of "star mothers," wishes more people had their conception of what "foster" parenthood is.

The Foster Philosophy

TO PERSONS who prefer children when they are "cute" and before they have reached the sproutlike school age, welfare officials would like to point out, with Mrs. Boteler:

"Now, everybody knows boys are going to be boys. You can't stop them, but they always minded me, and I gave them as much love and affection as if they were my own."

And to those people who don't want to care for a child at all, unless they can have it "for keeps," the welfare people would like to say, with Mrs. McCollum:

"It's hard to give them up, but when you think what would have happened if somebody hadn't looked after them when they were babies, you're glad you helped them—even if you have to lose them."

Faced with a growing shortage of foster parents in the Washington area, and with the fact, also, that out-of-joint social conditions are throwing more and more children on the mercy of public welfare, welfare officials hope to find more Mrs. Botelers and Mrs. McCollums who, by giving something of themselves to help children, are actually enriching their own lives.

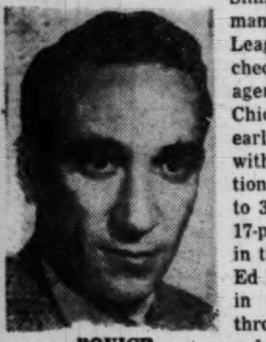
Truce Reportedly Will End Pro Football Squabble Today; Boston Yanks Shift to New York; Eagles Rumored for Sale

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

THREE WEEKS AGO the Washington club drafted Outfielder John Simmons from the Brooklyn-owned Montreal club for $10,000. The other day at the Chicago meetings of the club owners, Brooklyn President Branch Rickey offered the Nats $30,000 for Simmons . . . When Bucky Harris signed to manage the San Diego club of the Coast League for $22,500, he gained a bigger paycheck than three American League managers, two in the National League . . . The Chicago Cardinals, rated 6-point favorites earlier in the week for their game today with the Philadelphia Eagles for the National Football League title, have dropped to 3 points . . . The Cleveland Browns are 17-point favorites to beat the Buffalo Bills in the AAC playoff . . . Mickey Vernon and Ed Robinson, the first basemen who figured in the Washington-Cleveland deal, went through boot camp together in the Navy, and both played on the Norfolk Naval Training Base team in 1943. Robinson won the regular job, and Vernon was transferred . . . Major league club owners are trembling lest their television activities be construed as interstate commerce, thus leaving baseball vulnerable to antitrust charges . . . Tom Dowd, one of the ablest referees in the National Football League, didn't get an assignment this season despite being on the weekly payroll. He was non grata with the Redskins' management.



POVICH

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS fluffed its All-Eastern football selections, tabbing Halfback Billy Conn of Georgetown for honorable mention as an end, a position he never played . . . As any good Marine knows, the Corps likes to do the thing the hard way. So instead of tossing the ball on the field for the opening of the Quantico-San Diego game the other day, they brought it in by helicopter that made a 50-yard line landing . . . When the Washington Caps were introduced to President Truman at the White House the other day, Owner Mike Uline was so nervous that he introduced Coach Red Auerbach to the President as "our captain" and then introduced Bones McKinney, who is neither coach nor captain, as "our coach" . . . Fight Promoter Gabe Menendez, elated by being tipped on four winners at Charles Town the other day, told his benefactor, "I'm going to do something nice for you. I'll give you two winners on tonight's wrestling show at Turner's Arena" . . . Professor Jake Early of the Nats has signed as an instructor at the Jack Rossiter Baseball School that starts January 10, at Cocoa, Fla. The Nats have first call on the school's prospects . . . The supposedly money-mad St. Louis Browns turned down Detroit's offer of two players and $150,000 for Second Baseman Gerry Priddy, whom they bought from the Nats for $25,000 the year before . . . The majors are wary of all Southern League batting sensations in view of that circuit's rocket ball.

WILLIE PEP was a 4-1 favorite when he was knocked out a month ago by Sandy Saddler, the new featheweight champ, in four rounds. They've been rematched for February and Pep is still the betting favorite at 7-5 . . . Pauline Betz, prettiest of the tennis champs and bride-to-be of Bob Addie, has blossomed as an author. Her tome on tennis, written but as yet untitled, has been bought by an English publishing house which will resell the American rights . . . In this space November 28: "Bill Veeck heightened his chances of making a trade with Washington when he obtained Joe Haynes, Clark Griffith's favorite son-in-law, from the White Sox. He will use Haynes as trade bait at the Chicago meetings" . . . Much of the smugness of the Red Sox, who failed to make a deal of any kind, is traceable to their high esteem for Walter Dropo, the giant rookie first baseman who is being called up from their Birmingham farm. Dropo is being acclaimed as "another Hank Greenberg" . . . At the finish of the Ezzard Charles-Joe Baksi fight in the Garden, opinion was still unanimous that Jersey Joe Walcott is the best of the heavyweight challengers. Charles is too small and probably wouldn't get past Billy Conn . . . The Baltimore Colts' cry-baby act against the decision of Head Linesman Tom Whelan is making them no friends. And the AAC will show a lack of spunk if it fails to reassign Whelan, a top official, to games in Baltimore.

THOSE NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE owners who made money and are against a truce with the All-America Conference, aren't speaking for the eight clubs in the league that didn't make money . . . The $100,000 that Joe Louis netted from his recent exhibition tour, before taxes, didn't offset his golf losses since June . . . Michigan has supplanted Notre Dame as college football's greatest drawing card with an average of 70,165 for its six home games . . . The hand injury that will keep Paul Christman out of the Cardinals' line-up against the Eagles today in Philadelphia is no great blow to the Cardinals, who have moved best this season when Ray Mallouf did the quarter-backing. Against the Eagles, the Cardinals will be meeting up with a better line than the Bears had, but neither team has a defensive star to match the Bears' Johnny Lujack. Lex Thompson, owner of the Eagles, who has been clipped for $82,000 in losses in two seasons, suffered another clip-job the other day. He lost his appendix . . . Georgia is finding the Bowl business profitable. It is getting a $75,000 guarantee for its Orange Bowl appearance against Texas on January 1, the sixth time Georgia has been in a Bowl game in eight years. The school has now taken $385,000 out of Bowl games . . . When Buddy Lewis comes out of retirement, he will still be the highest-salaried member of the Nats. With Mickey Vernon and Early Wynn traded, Ray Scarborough will be No. 2 on the salary list. George Holstrom, Washington realtor, has been honored again by being selected by the All-American Conference for the second straight year to officiate in its championship game today.

Operation Successful

'Doc' Finds Bone Fragments In Stanky's Injured Ankle

Mobile, Ala., Dec. 18 (AP).—Stout-hearted Eddie Stanky underwent an apparently successful operation here today to correct an ankle injury which the Boston Braves' secondsacker suffered last July.

It took a surgeon's knife to prove just what a scrapper the National League champs have on their roster.

The Mobile bone specialist who operated said he found two fragments of bone in Stanky's crippled right ankle. One was lying in the ankle joint, causing constant pressure and pain.

With his ankle in that condition, Stanky played in the World Series, sprinting for first base as hard as the next batter.

The surgeon said Stanky will "have a good leg" as the result of removal of the fragments. The operation took about 40 minutes. It was performed under a general anesthetic.

Fulks Scores 47, Ties Loop Mark

Providence, R. I., Dec. 18 (AP).—Joe Fulks tied the Basketball Association of America scoring record of 47 points as the Philadelphia Warriors edged the Providence Steam Rollers, 94-90.

The record is also held by Carl Braun of the New York Knickerbockers and George Mikan of the Minneapolis Lakers.

Ted Collins Works Out Agreement With Giants

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—Ed Hogan, publicity man for the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League, said tonight that "it seems pretty definite that the Eagles will be sold."

The prospective sale may not be consummated immediately, however, because Owner Alexis Thompson is ill and in a hospital in New York.

[The Associated Press reported Eagles' General Manager Charley Ewart as saying that "several syndicates have been interested" in purchasing the Eagles, but he denied flatly that any deal has been completed or is nearing completion.

[He said that four or five groups have at various times within the past eight months made inquiries about the club. He declined to name any individuals or to state a likely purchase price but in reply to a question he did say that the club would not bring one million dollars.]

BILL BURNETT

Philadelphia, Dec. 18 (AP)—Ted Collins announced his Boston Yanks will play their National Football League games next season at New York.

The owner of the money-losing NFL entry said he has worked out an agreement with the New York Giants which will make possible the shift in sites.

Collins refused, however, to say whether the Yanks would play their games at the Polo grounds or the Yankee Stadium.

Collins pointed out that league approval is necessary for the shift. He said he expects the clubowners to sanction the move at the annual NFL meeting here Monday.

Not Bolting National

The Giants play their home games at the Polo Grounds. Yankee Stadium is used by the New York Yankees of the rival All-America Conference.

The fact that Collins declined to say where in New York his Yanks would play added some credence to the rumors which are rampant in town that the All-America Conference might be on the verge of merging into the NFL with the Yanks of the NFL and the Yankees of the AAC joining forces.

Collins, however, spiked an earlier report that the Yanks would bolt the NFL and replace the Yankees in the All-America Conference.

Hasn't Talked With Topping

The Boston Yanks' owner, discussing the Yankee Stadium proposition, pointed out he hasn't "seen or talked to" Dan Topping, president-owner of the AAC Yankees for two years.

"If the Yankee Stadium didn't have a team," said Collins, "I'm sure Topping would welcome us as tenants."

Collins had a word to say in support of Boston fandom.

"Our experience in Boston," he said, "has not proved that it is a poor sports city. Last year, for example, we won five games, but only one at home. We haven't given the fans there much to cheer about.

"But when one loses about three quarters of a million dollars there, as I have, it's about time to move out."

He added that the largest paid gate in Boston this year was little more than 8000.

"I can sell that many tickets by myself in New York," said Collins.

(The United Press reported that Collins said his team would carry a New York name but he did not say what it would be.

(Collins said that Maurie (Clipper) Smith was not coming back as his coach next year. Collins said Smith who handled the Yanks the past two years, did not want to return. He had no idea who would coach his club in 1949.

(If his club is granted permission to play in New York and is allotted the Polo Grounds, Collins said it would play home games on dates when the Giants are away.)

ANXIETY—Unguarded Matt Zunic, GW's contribution to the Caps, lets go a graceful field goal attempt that causes mingled emotions—apprehension by the Boston Celtics and high hopes by the Caps—in last night's game at Uline Arena which the Caps won, 69-60. Just behind Zunic is Tom Kelley of the Celtics and equally helpless are Teammates Melvin Riebe (left) and Charlie Halbert (11), facing Zunic. Marines Hand 82d Airborne 40-7 Licking

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

There was nothing mythical about Quantico's victory over the Eighty-Second Airborne Division for the mythical service championship yesterday at College Park.

The powerful Marines awed a predominantly uniformed crowd of 8477 with an impressive 40-7 triumph—their twenty-fifth in a row—that shattered the nine-game winning streak of the Army boys from Fort Bragg, N. C.

Held to a 7-0 first period score, Quantico began rolling in the second quarter, adding two more touchdowns. The outweighed Eighty-Second outfit, though, refused to be outfought and retaliated for a tally that made it 20-7 at half.

Ambrogi Runs Wild

But the Marines took the situation well in hand early in the third quarter with three quick touchdowns and then coasted home.

Dick Ambrogi, former Naval Academy player, who was named the game's outstanding player, had a 62-yard punt return nullified at the outset but went on to secure two legitimately, including a 53-yard punt return.

Joe Bartos, the 210-pound lad the Redskins covet, shared the starring role with Ambrogi, finally scoring the last Quantico touchdown. Bartos also was a big man at Navy.

After Ambrogi's first thrilling run was recalled, Quantico marched 61 yards for its first tally. Bartos accounted for half the

Buffalo Conceded Outside Chance At Cleveland

By Fritz Howell
Associated Press Sports Writer

Cleveland, Dec. 18 (AP).—Cleveland's twice-champon Browns go after the third leg on the All-America Football Conference title cup tomorrow.

The baffling Brownies, who have swept through 14 straight games this year for the new loop's only all-winning campaign, meet Buffalo's Eastern Division winners.

The game starts at 1:30 p. m. (EST) and the Browns are almost prohibitive favorites over the New Yorkers, who have lost 7 of 15. In fact, should Buffalo win this one it probably would go into the record books as "the miracle of the Bills" and erase the Army-Navy and Notre Dame-Southern Cal results from consideration as the surprises of the year.

The Browns have throttled the Bills three times this year, once in an exhibition and twice in title games. The Clevelanders have piled up 73 points to Buffalo's 27 in the two title games. That's the Browns' best scoring punch against any club, and the victory margin is the greatest.

On offense for the season the two clubs are only a point apart, the Browns having scored 389 to Buffalos 388. On defense it's all Cleveland, the Browns allowing 190 points while Buffalo foes piled up 375.

A crowd of about 35,000 is expected to less than half fill the Lakefront Stadium, and some of

NFL Title Game On Radio, Television

Today's National Football League championship game between the Chicago Cards and Philadelphia at Philadelphia will be broadcast and televised locally by the American Broadcasting Co. Radio discription will begin on WMAL (630 kc.) at 1:30 p. m. Television will begin on WMAL-TV (Channel 7) at 1:15 p. m. The All-American Conference championship game in Cleveland will not be broadcast or televised here.

Eagles Primed For Upset of Champs in Philly

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—For the second straight year the champion Chicago Cardinals and Philadelphia Eagles, a couple of Johnny-come-latelys in championship play, come to grips tomorrow with the National Football League title at stake.

A capacity crowd of approximately 40,000 is expected to brave a forecast of rain and snow to witness the 1948 playoff of Eastern and Western division titlists at Shibe Park.

For the Chicago forces it's a chance to win their second straight crown after being out of the picture since 1925. Their better record, marred by only one defeat this year, has installed them a 3½-point favorite.

Philadelphia has never won the championship in 16 years of trying. Last year was the first time it reached as far as the playoff.

Although never yet used, the sudden death system again will be in effect tomorrow. In case of a tied score at the end of regulation play, there will be a rest and a regular kickoff will start a fifth period. That will go on until one team scores.

The Eagles, under Coach Greasy Neale, have suffered five straight setbacks at the hands of Coach Jim Conzelman's Cards. All were close ones, however, witness the Windy City team's 21-14 victory in the only meeting of the teams this year, and Chicago's 28-21 margin

Wildcats Rout Navy, 68-43

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Northwestern trounced the previously unbeaten Navy basketball team here tonight, 68-43. The Middies, triumphant against Penn Military, Harvard and Virginia, were outclassed from the start in their first game in the Midwest in years.

Caps Take 19th, 69-60, Over Boston

Chalk up another one for the Washington Caps.

The Boston Celtics threw last night's party, yielding, but not easily, 69-60, to enable the locals to hang up their eleventh straight success on the Uline Arena court. It was also the nineteenth time the Caps have won in their 21 Basketball Association of America games this season.

The third-place Bostonians made quite a ball game of it. They overcame a 10-point first-quarter deficit to own a 30-28 half-time lead. And even when there were less than three minutes to play the visitors were behind by only three points.

Caps Freeze Ball

The pace-setting Caps, however, saw to it that the Celts would do no more scoring by freezing the ball for over two of the last three minues.

When the Celtics fouled trying to gain possession, the Caps calmly dunked in five free throws. When the Boston defense was napping, the locals added two more field goals to secure their victory and send 2540 fans away happy about the whole thing.

Bones McKinney was high man once again. He rammed in 21 points, but he wasn't the show all by himself. Fellow named Leo Katkaveck, a rookie from N. C. State, was the kid who started Washington's patented third period comeback.

Kid Katkaveck intercepted three Boston passes, stole the ball once and was directly responsible for the four straight baskets Washington made during that third period flareup.

Celtics Close Gap

The Celtics pursued the Caps all the way and their close guarding is reflected in the fact that the 69 points Washington amassed was its lowest this season.

The Celts were hounded pretty much themselves. Gene Stump, their 15-point per game man, was

Bell Slated As Czar of Both Loops; Ingram Out

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—The National Football League and the All-America Conference have agreed to some type of truce, the Associated Press learned tonight. An announcement is expected tomorrow.

All-America Conference officials are in Cleveland for their annual meeting. National League officials are in Philadelphia for a session Monday.

No details of the settlement were learned. The report came shortly after Ted Collins, owner of the Boston franchise of the National League, announced from Philadelphia that he was moving his team to New York.

The first official step in such a peace probably would be the resignation of Admiral Jonas Ingram as commissioner of the AAC and the elevation of Bert Bell of the National League to commissioner of all pro football.

Bell Denies Truce

Philadelphia, Dec. 18 (AP).—Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League declared tonight "on the record and off the record there has been no truce" between the NFL and the rival All-America Conference.

The commisisoner said, in reply to a question, that it was possible the NFL would consider applications from AAC members to join the senior professional football league if they so desire. He said, however, that he had no information that this wolud come to pass.

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—George Halas, owner of the National Football Leagues Chicago Bears, said today he believed the two conferences could sit down together and work out a "sensible solution now."

He also disclosed that he had talked at length with Dan Topping of the New York Yankees, and Ben Lindheimer, owner of the Los Angeles Dons, both of the All-America Conference.

"As individuals, we had a meeting of the minds on the subject," Halas said, adding quickly, however, "but nothing can be done until the (NFL) league officially takes up a discussion of the matter."

Earlier, Alexis Thompson, owner of the Philadelphia Eagles who is hospitalized for an appendectomy, had said he would "feel out" his NFL colleagues on making peace and coming to a sensible agreement with the AAC.

Thompson had gone on record as saying that he would plump for a common draft and a cooperative plan at Monday's meeting of the National League here.

The Associated Press polled the rest of the NFL teams and received the following reactions:

Ted Collins, Boston: "I'm only interested in the National Football League.

George Marshall, Washington: "I'm not interested in the All-America Conference. The National Football League can get along without them."

Tim Mara, New York: "Absolutely no. What could we gain?"

Art Rooney, Pittsburgh: "I'm in favor of any sensible solution to the pro football problem."

Ray Bennigson, Chicago Cardinals: "I don't see any practical purpose in getting together with the AAC. The AAC has only proved that it is a failure. I don't think that the Chicago Rockets have taken one customer from my ball club."

Alvin (Bo) McMillin, Detroit: "I'm new in the league and will go along with whatever the majority decides. These other men have been in pro football a lot longer than I have and they should know what the score is."

Curly Lambeau, Green Bay: "I'm in favor of any sensible solution, but definitely not a merger. I am not in favor of a common draft."

Clark Shaughnessy, coach and general manager of the Los Angeles Rams, declined to give an answer. He said he would leave the decision to the Rams' management.

Neither Bennigson nor Collins gave uncompromising negative verdicts. As did most of the other officials, they left loopholes in their words for a possible change of course when the meeting opens Monday.

"You know Monday's meeting is primarily to draft players, and it takes a unanimous vote to bring up any other matter. I would say the subject should come up for discussion, but then again some owner may blackball the idea on the fist vote," Halas told the Associated Press.

A member of the official New York Giants who said he did not wish to be quoted said he felt sure the Boston Yanks would have to find a new home.

The New York official was cold to any agreement with the AAC.

Super Coach Barclay Is Real Fireman—and Still Unbeaten

Basketball, Hockey and Baseball—They All Come Easy to George

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporters

HE DOESN'T know the difference between a zone defense and a technical foul, but his basketball teams have never been beaten.

Barclay

"Inside Baseball" is a book that John Guenther wrote as far as he's concerned, but the baseball team he coached won all of its games.

A goal counts one point and that constitutes his knowledge of hockey, but his skaters didn't know what it felt like to be whipped.

That's George Barclay, a triple-threat coach with a 1.000 per cent average.

George is line coach of Maryland's football team, but he doesn't feel offended if you don't mention football after what happened to the Terps in their last four games.

BUT TALK about freshman basketball hockey or baseball and Barclay whips up a smile which enables one and all to see where his two front teeth WERE before last Tuesday's basketball practice. That's when he got in the way of a basketball. Now he stresses the Split-Teeth formation on the court.

George got his start as a basketball and hockey coach at Dartmouth five years ago. Dartmouth's freshman court mentor was ill and Barclay all of a sudden-like became coach pro tem.

He was a sizzling success. Under his guidance the team won 14 in a row. Maryland looked around for a freshman basketball coach, found none and bingo, Barclay was tabbed again. The unbeaten Terp yearlings made it three in a row Saturday.

"My success is easily explained," he said modestly the other night. "I tell the boys that if they score more points than the other team they'll win. Wonderful system and so far it's worked."

A BARCLAY half-time basketball pep talk is something that not even Knute Rockne could approach. Last Thursday his frosh led Bullis Prep, 22-11, at halftime. "If you maintain that 11-point lead," he told the perspiring athletes during intermission, "they can't beat you.

George's logic was perfect. His team won again.

As soon as he was named substitute varsity hockey coach at Dartmouth he huddled with a zoology prof, of all persons. The zoologist read the hockey rules to Barclay and Barclay took over.

"They showed me where they kept the pucks and that's all I did," he said. "I brought out the pucks, found the warmest spot in the arena, sat back and watched my superbly coached skaters go to it. They used the old Barclay system—outscore 'em—and we won nine in a row."

Surprised Terps Ordered to Pull Triple Play to Save His Record

Last summer Burt Shipley, Maryland's veteran baseball coach, was ill and Barclay was pressed into service without warmup. The Terps made George's debut a howling success by trouncing Kings Point, but they almost ruined his streak the next day against Army at West Point.

BARCLAY, however, pulled 'em through, and he did it in a manner that would put to shame John McGraw, Connie Mack, Joe McCarthy or any of the other strategists. He ordered his team to make a triple play.

Here was the situation:

Maryland led 4-3, in the last of the eighth. Army had runners on second and third and no outs. The Army batter flied to right field for out No. 1. The runner on third tried to score and he was doubled at the plate. The runner on second tried to advance to third and he was rubbed out to complete the triple play.

"And we didn't practice that play," the immortal Barclay boasted.

That's Mr. Barclay, Genius George Barclay, if you please.

restricted to 10. But Tom Kelly, another frosh in the pro league, took up a little of the slack by sneakinng in a dozen points for the losers.

Eddie Ehlers and Mel Riebe, two more Boston high scorers, could get but 11 between them, so close was the Cap guarding.

With the Caps eight points ahead and only three minutes to go, Bob Doll scored on a layup, Eddie Stump followed and Chick Halbert tossed in a charity shot and the Washington margin was suddenly whittled down to only three points.

Any victory ideas the Celts were enteraining, however, were quickly extinguished when Sonny Hertzberg threw in a long set shot to break oup the Boston comeback and salt another one away for the home side.—MORRIS SIEGEL.

Grid Yankees Sign Okla. Tackle

Oklahoma City, Dec. 18 (AP).—Hank Kalver, 225-pound Oklahoma City University tackle, announced today signing of a professional football contract with the New York Yankees of the All-American Conference.

Kalver will be graduated in June, although he has another year of eligibility. With the Yankees he joins Marion Shirley, a former Oklahoma City University star tackle.

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Manhattan College won its third straight Metropolitan AAU junior indoor track and field championship today with 51 points.

Tigers Are Blanked for 9 Minutes

In a complete form reversal, Maryland closed out its pre-Christmas season with a glittering 74-50 triumph over Clemson last night at College Park.

The Terps surprised some 1500 loyal students by zooming into a 24-2 lead. Banks McFadden's Clemson club took all of 9½ minutes to register a field goal, Len Riddle finally breaking the monotony.

By that time, with Flucie Stewart's boys playing some basketball for a change, it didn't matter. Clemson did put a slight scare into Maryland after intermission by coming within nine points, 41-32.

However, Maryland again pulled away to notch its second victory in six starts. Happily for the Terps, both victories were scored against Southern Conference foes and they still can boast a 2-1 league record.

Clemson, losing its fifth game in six starts, slipped to 0-3 in the conference. The South Carolinians never did warm up and missed 16 of 28 foul tries.

George Barclay, coach of the Maryland frosh, continued his undefeated streak as a head mentor when Eastern High was brushed aside in the preliminary, 46-34. Andy MacDonald and Dick Koffenberger each had 12 points to lead the Yearlings. JACK WALSH.

He said a common draft was out of the question. In fact, the official said, it might be illegal. The U. S. attorney's office already has questioned the NFL-operated draft as a possible anti-trust law violation.

Meanwhile, in Cleveland, the All-America Conference moguls gave all their eight clubs a financial bill of health, including the Chicago Rockets.

However, Lindheimer, chairman of the conference executive committee, admitted that if the Rockets failed to post the stipulated $200,000 guarantee on February 5 along with the rest of the clubs at the league meeting in New York, another city was willing to take over the club.

Although he refused to identify the city, indications were that he meant Dallas, Tex.

Corridon Follows Harris To Coast as Coach

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 18 (AP).—John (Red) Corridon, recently employed under Bucky Harris with the New York Yankees, will be a San Diego Padre coach next season, Bill Starr, San Diego baseball club president, announced today.

Harris, named Padre manager last Tuesday, will bring Corridon along as his assistant. Jimmy Reese, Padre coach last season also will be retained on the coaching lines for the Padres.

Eagles Out To Upset Cards Today

in last year's championship game.

The past season's statistics also prove tomorrow's game may be a tight one, possibly even ending in a tie.

As one of the greatest offensive teams ever collected, the Cards ground out 2560 yards running compared to 2376 for the Eagles. On the other hand the Eagles picked up 2241 yards passing to 2136 through the air for Chicago.

The Cards scored 395 points to 374 for the Eagles but Philadelphia allowed its foes only 156 points to 226 for Chicago.

Toughest of the Cardinals for the Eagles to stop will probably be Charley Trippi, Elmer Angsman and Pat Harder, all of whom contributed to the Cards' championship victory last year. Harder won the '48 N. F. L. scoring championship with teammate Mal Kutner, a pass-catching master, running second. Jerry Davis was second in both kickoff returns and punt returns. Trippi, Harder and Angsman were among the league's top six ground gainers.

On the Eagles' side, Tommy Thompson, league leading passer, should keep Cardinal pass defenders hopping all afternoon. Then there's a fellow named Steve Van Buren who is only the best ground-gainer in the league. And finally the Eagles boast a rugged line, a brilliant breakaway runner in Bosh Pritchard, and the league's outstanding punter in Joe Muha.

On one player—Van Buren—will probably hinge the outcome of tomorrow's scrap. If he's able to sift through Cardinal defenses with any kind of regularity the Eagles should win handily. His runs, when successful, help to make Thompson's passes click and Pritchard's lightning dashes more effective.

Van Buren has a lot of competition in the line-smashing department, however. And much of it will be furnished by Cardinal ball carriers.

Alexandria Florist Can Fill Bill

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

A quiet-mannered Alexandria florist smiled yesterday at the story of the Phillies' $100,000 price tag on their second-string first baseman, Dick Sisler.

"The shortage of good major league first basemen must be worse than I thought," he said. "With a little persuasion—much less than $100,000 worth—I might be coaxed into coming back. I know I can play that bag better than most of the guys up there now."

His name is George McQuinn, and he's one of the few Washington area athletes to make the grade in the big league.

After 12 years of big league campaigning, the fancy fielding George was unconditionally released by the Yankees last summer. His batting had faded to a .248 level, and he was slowing up.

"But I know that I'm still better than most of the first basemen up there. I'd like another crack at the big league. No, I'd never go back to the minors. I'll stay here and operate my flower and sporting goods shop in Alexandria and Arlington rather than go down to the bushes.

"I'd like best to play with Washington, though I doubt if they'll take me now that they have Eddie Robinson. When I was a kid at Washington-Lee High, I always pictured myself in the majors with the Nats. They never looked at me though."

McQuinn's in pretty good shape. He never had much trouble in that respect.

He weighs 165 pounds. That's what he weighed 19 years ago when he and Lem Owen, another Ballston, Va., sandlotter, went off to try out with the New Haven club, training at Annapolis. George hit only .108 in eight games there and was released.

He was immediately signed by Gene McCann, a Yankee scout, but had to wait 17 years before donning a Yankee uniform.

He was being groomed to succeed the durable Lou Gehrig until 1936, when he was drafted by Cincinnati. After 38 games with the Reds, he was bought by the Browns, and came to the big leagues to stay in 1938.

He was a .300 hitter twice with St. Louis. He was the Browns' batting star in the 1944 World Series, with a torrid .438 average. He was traded to the Athletics in 1946 and released as "washed up" at the end of that season.

He's Been Major Leaguer 12 Years

Bucky Harris, sorely in need of a first baseman for his Yanks, rescued George from the scrap heap, and the aging McQuinn reciprocated by hitting a surprising .304 in 144 games and helping the New Yorkers to the championship.

He played only 94 games last season, and the Yanks discarded him in favor of new blood.

George is looking for another "Bucky Harris." "I know I can help somebody either as a first baseman or pinch-hitter," he says. "So what if I am 38. How old was Methuselah?"

Fordham Books 'Big Time' Games

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Fordham University took another step back toward football's big time today with the announcement that the Rams will play Syracuse next October 22 at the Polo Grounds.

Next year the Rose Hill warriors will Meet Army and Yale, in addition to Syracuse, and they are reported angling for still more games of similar caliber.

yardage but it was Ray Scheutt who plunged over from the 1.

The Leathernecks capitalized on alert play to increase their margin. Charles Abrahams, big tackle from Simpson, Iowa, College, who played a terrific game throughout, came in to block a punt by Joe Stange from the Army's 43.

End Ed Leach fell on the loose ball on the 21 and Roy Russell promptly passed to Ben Moore to the 5. Two plays later, Moore scampered through a huge hole. Tony Messina, later hurt and forced to leave the game, made his second conversion.

Roger Mendivil's lateral went astray a short time later and End Bob Smith recovered for the Marines on the Army 43. A 5-yard penalty put the ball on the 38 and Rudy Flores threw a short pass that Joe Bartos took on the 30 and carried 28 yards before he was forced down. This time the Marines repaid End Smith for being on the ball and Flores tossed him a 2-yard touchdown pass.

Then the light Eighty-second backs went into action. Hal Davidson, the Army's best passer and a hard runner, took, the Quantico kickoff to his 27. Little Johnny Meyer went 12 for a first down and Bob Schreiner broke into the secondary and traveled 41 yards before he was pushed out by Bartos on the Marines' 20.

Fred Bell, classy little Negro back, made 5 and then got on the scoring end of a pass from Davidson. Chester Oden converted and it looked like the Eighty-second was in the game.

But Bartos and Ambrogi quickly dispelled its hopes after intermission. First, Bartos passed to End Ray Pfeifer for a 27-yard gain. Then Joe became a receiver, taking a pass from Flores for 45 yards to the Eighty-second's 25.

Two plays later, Ambrogi raced over from the 5.

Ambrogi personally insisted upon turning the game into a rout when he took an Army punt a few minutes later. Dick caught it on the dead run and scampered down the sideline 53 yards without being touched.

Unnecessary as it was, Joe Bartos accounted for Quantico's sixth touchdown. Big Joe took a shovel pass from Rudy Flores annd bulled his way 21 yards through the middle for the final score.

Cowboys Win Shrine Bowl Game, 40-12

Little Rock, Dec. 18 (AP).—Favored Hardin-Simmons University came from behind with 34 points in the second half to wallop the Ouachita Tigers 40-12 in the inaugural Shrine Bowl game in Arkansas War Memorial Stadium today.

The Cowboys, outplayed and outscored, 12-6 in the first two quarters, mixed straight power and razzle-dazzle to turn the game into a route after the intermission.

A disappointing crowd of 5000—which was below the advance ticket sale probably because of the damp weather—watched a reserve fullback, 216-pound Raymond Troutman, provide the spark that carried the Abilene, Tex., crew to victory. Seemingly unstoppable, Troutman scored only one touchdown but ripped the Arkadelphia, Ark., team's line to shreds in playing an important role in every other drive.

Johnny Ford, the quarterback in Hardin-Simmons' winged T formation, passed to Jack Boles, reserve end for two touchdowns and Slippery Pat Bailey added two more in the last half scoring parade.

Proceeds of the game go to the Shrine Crippled Children's Hospital at Shreveport, La.

Knicks Turn Back Bombers By 88 to 79

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—The New York Knickerbockers broke loose with a furious attack in the second half today to sink the St. Louis Bombers, 88-79, in a Basketball Association of America game before 14,647 at Madison Square Garden.

Paced by Carl Braun and Lee Knorek, the New Yorkers blasted the Bomber defense wide open in the final period for 25 points.

Braun led both clubs with 26 markers, while Knorek, using his height to good advantage, netted 19.

John Logan and Ariel Maugham, the Bombers' leading scorers, hit for 18 points apiece.

The victory was the New Yorkers' fourth straight at home. The loss was the Bombers' sixth in their last eight starts.

Georgia Takes Seventh Straight

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 18 (AP).—The University of Georgia ran its victory string to seven games tonight with a 56-51 decision over the University of Buffalo in the first game of a Memorial Auditorium basketball double-header. Canisius met Iowa State in the second game.

In Sugar Bowl

Tar Heels 1½ Points Over Sooners

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Based on odds laid down two weeks before the postseason football deluge, the closest of the January 1 bowl games will be played at New Orleans between North Carolina and Oklahoma.

Charlie Justice and his Tar Heel running mates are rated a thin 1½ points over Oklahoma's Big Seven champions in the Sugar Bowl.

In most of the other games, you have to give or take a touchdown—depending on your choice. None of the big bowl principals is more than a 1-point favorite, however.

In the Rose Bowl, for instance, twice-beaten Northwestern is rated 6½ points better than California's Golden Bears, Pacific Coast Conference champions who breezed through their campaign without a slipup.

That's the same margin by which the holder of the other half of the Pacific crown, Oregon, is figured to lose to Doak Walker and the Southern Methodist crew in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas.

Georgia Picked Over Texas

Georgia, the Southeastern Conference title winner, is given a 7-point bulge over Texas in the Orange Bowl at Miami.

Other games:

Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla.—Missouri 7 points over unbeaten, untied Clemson.

Delta Bowl at Memphis—William and Mary over Oklahoma A. and M.

Dixie Bowl at Birmingham—Baylor 6 points over Wake Forest.

Harbor Bowl at San Diego—Nevada 3 points over Villanova.

These are the only struggles on which the Broadway slide-rule specialists are willing to quote odds so far in advance.

Besides offering the game that stacks up as the day's tightest, the Sugar Bowl is bragging about matching the highest ranking combination of bowl eligibles.

Justice All-Time Triple Threat

North Carolina, tied by William and Mary in a season that otherwise was all-conquering, was listed third in the final Associated Press poll, right behind Michigan and Notre Dame. Oklahoma was fifth, behind California.

The Tar Heels will be led by Justice, the All-America halfback who was proclaimed in National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics last week as the outstanding triple-threat performer of all time.

In individual rival for the afternoon will be Jack Mitchell, wheelhorse of the Sooners' tricky split-T and one of the most versatile backs in the country.

Individual duels will add zest to other New Year's Day extravaganzas.

The Rose Bowl, papa of them all, will feature California's Jackie Jensen, an outstanding ball carrier, against Art Murakowski, Northwestern's All-American fullback. Both are terrific runners.

The Cotton Bowl at Dallas sends the great Walker, two-time All-America and winner of this year's Heisman Trophy as the Nation's outstanding college gridder, against Norman Van Brocklin, the Webfoots' aerial wizard.

Justice's Booming Boots May Backfire in Bowl

Champion Kicker Choo-choo Faces Champion Returners

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—What happens when the Nation's record-breaking collegiate punter spirals one at the country's record-breaking punt runbcak combination?

It'll be settled New Year's Day at New Orleans when All-America Charlie Justice of North Carolina aims his distance-producing foot at the Oklahoma Sooners.

National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics released today show that Oklahoma set an all-time team standard of 22.4 yards per runback on 43 enemy punts this year.

A few days ago the bureau disclosed that Justice won the National punting championship with a 44-yard average per kick for 62 punts.

This means that unless he's sticking them out of bounds his net distance is going to be halved by the Sooners.

Oklahoma has a safety tandem of Jack Mitchell, who averaged 23.4 yards on 22 returns, and Darrell Royal, who averaged 30.2 yards on nine runbacks. Between them they hustled five punts back for touchdowns during the season. Mitchell ranked second and Royall fourteenth nationally in punt runbacks. Justice, incidentally, was the eighth ranking safetyman.

However, the bureau statistics also reveal what might be Oklahoma's Achilles heel. The Sooners lost the ball four times on fumbles in their losing opener against Santa Clara and then proceeded to set an unsavory record of fumbling the ball away 35 times for the season.

Baylor finished second in punt returns with a 20.5 yard average, better than the 1947 high of Florida at 19.7 and the 1946 high of Columbia, 16.8.

Toughest team against which to return punts was Michigan, No. 1 in the AP poll. The Wolverines gave up only 5.1 yards per enemy return. Delta Bowl bound William and Mary yielded 5.8.

Wyoming average 27.4 yards on 24 kickoff returns to lead that classification, while Nevada, Washington State and Southern California all did better than 24 yards per kickoff runback.

The Citadel, Navy, Northwestern Iowa State and Mississippi held rivals to fewer than 13 yards per kickoff runback.

The State of Utah apparently was the poorest place to try a pass. Utah intercepted 17.8 per cent of enemy tosses and Utah State snagged 17.4.

Northwestern boasted an effective pass defense, running back 20 interceptions for 375 yards. The bureau figured that inasmuch as Wildcat opponents got 487 yards on 42 pass completions in 129 attempts, this left the foe a net of only 112 yards, or less than a full yard (.87 of net gain per throw.)

Michigan had eight passes intercepted, but limited the runbacks to only 11 yards. Cornell gave up only 36 yards on six thefts.

It was the year of the whistle in the penalty department, with four records being set.

Everybody was watching Notre Dame this year, including the officials, who assessed more penalties for greater distance than anything recorded thus far. The Irish were set down 97 times for 843 yards. Oklahoma's 86 penalties also passed the old mark of 85 set by California last year.

St. Louis lost 772 yards on penalties also higher than the former 740-yard peak called against Texas Tech in 1941, but the Bilikins still wound up ahead of the game. They gained 840 yards on 85 infractions called on their opposition. The old records wer 84 and 835 yards favoring Kansas State in 1947.

Those Ivy League gentlemen from Harvard and Princeton were penalized the fewest times, 21 each. Montana State and Southern Methodist drew the fewest penalty yards, 191 and 197, respectively. Best behaved team apparently was Washington, nicked only 25 times in 10 games, or 2½ times per contest. Harvard and Princeton averaged 2.6 in eight games each.

Mitchell, Royal Have Scored 5 Times on Kick Runbacks

The final figures:

PUNT RETURNS—(1), Oklahoma, 22.4 yards average per return; (2), Baylor, 20.5; (3), Wichita, 19.4; (4), Mississippi, 18.7; (5), Arkansas, 18.1; (6), Harvard, 18.1; (7), Notre Dame, 18; (8), Hardin-Simmons, 17.8; (9), Arizona, 17.6; (10), Colorado A&M, 17.1.

PUNT RETURN DEFENSE—(1), Michigan, 5.1 yards yielded per return; (2), William and Mary, 5.8; (3), Fordham, 6-4; (4), Mississippi, 7.5; (5), Wake Forest, 7.0; (6), Chattanooga, 7.3; (7), Detroit, 7.4; (8), Georgia Tech, 7.7; (9), Stanford, 8.1; (10), New Mexico, 8.3.

KICKOFF RETURNS—(1), Wyoming, 27.4 yards average per return; (2), Nevada, 24.6; (3), Washington State, 24.5; (4), Southern California, 24.3; (5), Utah, 23.9.

KICKOFF RETURN DEFENSE—(1), The Citadel, 12.0 allowed per return; (2), Northwestern, 12.5; (3), Navy, 12.5; (4), Iowa State, 12.6; (5), Mississippi, 12.7.

Hickman Given 5-Year Contract

"Player of Year"

Touchdown Club Honors Justice Jan. 8

Charlie Justice, North Carolina's All-America halfback, has been selected the Washington Touchdown Club's college player of the year and will receive the Walter Camp Memorial Trophy at the club's annual banquet at the Statler January 8.

Chuck Bednarik, Penn's great center, is the club's lineman of the year and will receive the Knute Rockne Memorial Trophy at the same affair. Bednarik received the same honor last year.

Coach of the year is Benny Oosterbaan, football coach of Michigan's unbeaten, untied and uninvited Wolverines.

Steve Van Buren of the Philadelphia Eagles is the National Football League's player of the year and Otto Graham of the Cleveland Browns was tabbed as the All-America Conference's Mr. Big.

Jimmy Pantos, Central High quarterback, is the high school player of the year, while Bill Haley of Gonzaga is the prep school's man of the hour. Sandlotter Jack Baumgartner of Car Credit is the club's choice for the outstanding sandlot performer.

Tommy Whelan is general chairman of the Touchdown dinner.

Kenwood Elects Officers

E. F. Ragland has been reelected chairman of the board of governors of Kenwood Golf and Country Club. E. F. Ragland is the new vice chairman and Herb Hunt was renamed secretary.

New members of the board include Carter Gibson E. F. Ragland, C. Alphonso Smith and D. J. Ward.

Whitfield Runs Here

Mel Whitfield of the United States Olympic team, will compete in the Evening Star games at the Armory, January 15.

Whitfield, an Army sergeant, set a new Olympic record in the 800 meter run. He is now taking special courses at Ohio State and will represent the Buckeyes in the Star games. He is expected to compete in the Touchdown Club 1000.

Reservists Win

To the 2238th Air Reserve Training Center's football team went the Andrews Air Force Base grid trophy. The winners captured all six league games and only one team was able to score against them.

Pvt. Fred Zimlinghaus led the club by scoring 42 of its 103 points. He romped over for three touchdowns in one game.

Sunday Soccer Slate

Sugar Radio, first-half champions of the Washington Suburban Soccer League, meets French Embassy, a new entry, as plays starts in the second half this afternoon. It's a two o'clock game at Rosedale Playground.

Columbia Sports Club, another added starter, makes its league debut against the Italian booters at 24th and Constitution ave. Other games today find Maryland Sports Club playing Pan American at 7100 Walker Mill rd.; Glasva vs. Marlboro at Marlboro; Charles County vs. Indianhead at Indianhead; and Martin's Baker vs. Rockville at Gonzaga Field.

Court League Opens

Play in the D. C. National Guard Basketball League starts at the Armory this afternoon with a four-game slate. The schedule:

Batt. B. (380th) vs. Batt. A. (360th); Andrews Field vs. 171st M. P. Batt; 163rd M. P. Batt. vs. 113th A. C. W. Group; Batt. D. (380th) vs. Headquarters (340th).

Michigan State Defeats Iowa

East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 18 (AP). Michigan State won its first game against a Big Nine team since being welcomed into the Western Conference by upsetting unbeaten Iowa, 49 to 43, to delight 5069 Spartan fans tonight.

Although the score won't count in the Big Nine record books, the upset was all the more tsartling because the Spartans previously hab bowed to Michigan, 66-43, and to Indiana, 48-36.

Mann Versatile

Detroit, Dec. 8 (AP).—Bob Mann, rangy Detroit Lions end will join Jesse Owens' Olympians professional basketball team in Cleveland tomorrow night.

Yale Tears Up Old Pact in Rewarding Him

By Lou Black

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 18 (AP). Yale today tore up Herman Hickman's three-year appointment as head football coach and handed him one for five years. The 300-pound poet laureate of the Smoky Mountains who took over only this year offered no objection.

The action was not expected. Neither was it unprecedented.

Said Athletic Director Bob Kiphuth:

"The announcement speaks for itself. Herman Hickman has created a definite place for himself in the Yale family. I am certain that both Yale and non-Yale people are most gratified at the new appointment and wish Herman every success."

Hickman is at Miami, Fla., where he is preparing a team of Northern stars to oppose a Southern array in a Shrine-sponsored charity game on Christmas night.

Factually, Kiphuth's announcement came as a vote of confidence. The past season's Yale 11 won only four of nine, the worst record here since 1943. Two of the losses were to the Blue's traditional "Big Three" rivals, Princeton and Harvard. Last time that happened was in 1941.

Everybody connected with Yale agrees, however, that Hickman got the most out of the material. They agree, too, that he turned out a scrappy, smart and willing team. And that the happy warrier, in his first season here, did more good for a losing college than can most coaches in winning.

Hickman, who came to Yale last spring from Army, was an outstanding guard at the University of Tennessee, and played professional football for some time after graduation. He has also coached at Wake Forest and North Carolina State.

Kentucky, LIU Win in Garden

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Proving their defense is just as devastating as their famed offense, Kentucky's mighty Wildcats rolled to their sixth straight victory tonight, turning back St. John's University of Brooklyn, 57-30.

The season's largest Madison Square Garden attendance—18,451—watched Long Island University overcome an 11-point deficit late in the second half, to nip Kansas State, 63-60, in the first half of the College Masketball doubleheader.

OUT OF MY WAY, BUD—Tom Kennedy, 100-pound back of the Philadelphia Palumbo Clickets, might have been saying that a second before he was stopped by two tacklers of the Durham (N. C.) Civics in yesterday's Santa Claus bowl game for the National 105-pound championship at Philadelphia. The Clickets won the title them are looking for an upset. The Bills, over the season, have outgained the Browns 5421 yards to 5366, with a rushing edge of 2738 yards to 257. Cleveland paced the passing, 2809 yards to 2683.

While Buffalo had the edge in statistics, automatic Otto Graham, the Browns' pass tosser and wizard of T-formation legerdemain, was expected to provide the difference on the field. The former Northwestern All-America has completed 173 of 333 passes for 2713 yards and 25 touchdowns, while George (The Kid) Ratterman, Buffalo's aerial artist, has pitched 16 touchdown tosses as he connected on 168 of 335 heaves for 2577 yards.

Chet Mutryn, the Cleveland boy who spearheads the Buffalo ground forces, has carried the ball 147 times for 823 yards, but big Marion Motley, the line-ripping Brown fullback, has toted the pigskin 964 yards in 157 tries.

The Browns have dominated the western division of the All-America for three straight years, winning 40 games; losing three and tying one over the long stretch, while Buffalo, twice runner-up for the eastern division laurels and now the winner, is making its first bid for the overall laurels.

Cleveland has the opportunity to become the first professional club in history to win its league title three years in a row, and also to become the first modern club to win all its games. The Chicago Bears, in the last 15 years, have twice won all regular season contests, but each time lost the title playoff.

The Browns have been installed as 13-point favorites, and the weatherman says "snow and cold."

Parker Placed Third

Dick Gonzales Ranked No. 1 In Tennis; Schroeder Second

By Gayle Talbot

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Dick Gonzales, the tall hombre from Los Angeles who swept through the national championships at Forest Hills, has very properly been ranked the country's No. 1 tennis player for 1948.

The only player who might have halted the Coast terror's march to the title—Ted Schroeder of La Crescent, Calif.—has been awarded the No. 2 spot by the selection committee.

Schroeder did not play in the championships, but he displayed all his old-time brilliance in helping quash Australia for the Davis Cup.

Frankie Parker, veteran two-time former national champion from Los Angeles, was ranked third; Billy Talbert of New York City, fourth, and Bob Falkenburg of Beverly Hills, fifth. Falkenburg won the Wimbledon crown, most glittering of them all, but couldn't beat anybody after that.

Completing the first 10 are Earl Cochell, San Francisco, No. 6; E. Victor Seixas, jr., Philadelphia, No. 7; Gardnar Mulloy, Miami, Fla., No. 8; Herbert Flam, Beverly Hills, Calif., No. 9, and Harry Likas, jr., San Francisco, No. 10.

The rankings will not become official until they are approved at the annual meeting of the U. S. L. T. A. here on January 22. This usually is a formality, though now and then there is a ruckus when some player thinks he, or she, has been given a raw deal.

Talbert and Mulloy, who won the national doubles title for the umpteenth time and then helped shut out the Aussies in the Davis Cup fiasco, took the No. 1 spot in their specialty without a dissenting vote. Parker and Schroeder were judged No. 2.

The remaining singles rankings:

11, Sam Match, Los Angeles; 12, Arthur Larsen, San Francisco; 13, Edward Moylan, San Francisco; 14, Budge Patty, Los Angeles; 15, William Vogt, Philadelphia; 16, Herbert Behrens, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; 17, Clarence Carter, San Francisco; 18, Tom Brown, jr., San Francisco; 19, Jack Tuero, New Orleans; 20, Bernard Bartzen, San Angelo, Tex.

21, Irvin Dorfman, New York City; 22, Fred Kovaleski, Detroit; 23, Gardner Larned, Chicago; 24, James Brink, Seattle; 25, Charles Oliver, Perth Amboy, N. J.; 26, Richard Savitt, East Orange, N. J.; 27, Eugene Garrett, San Diego; 28, Francis X. Shields, New York City; 29, Arnold Saul, Los Angeles; 30, Sidney B. Wood, jr., New York City; 31, Straight Clark, Los Angeles; 32, Leonard Steiner, New York City; 33, Gilbert Shea, Los Angeles.

Tom Brown and Irvin Dorfman were ranked No. 3 in doubles, followed by Sam Match and Victor Seixas, No. 4; Budge Patty and Sidney Wood, jr., No. 5; James Brink and Dick Gonzales, No. 6; Fred Kovaleski and Jack Tuero, No. 7, and Herbert Flam and Eugene Garrett, No. 8.

Armstrong Tech Wins by 55 to 51

Rockymount, N. C., Dec. 18 — Armstrong Tech of Washington, D. C. boosted its basketball record to three wins out of four as they defeated Booker T. Washington High School 55-51 in the last two minutes of play here today.

High-scoring Alphonso Stone contributed two of his 24 points to break the 51-51 knot at the end of the eventful fourth period, and Gene Lawrence added the final field goal of the evening to put the game on ice for the Techmen.

Jones, Cooper Headline Card Monday Night

Jimmy Cooper and Herbie Jones, two local gladiators who scored knockouts on last week's Turner's Arena card, are back again Monday night when Matchmaker Gabe Menendez presents another "all-star" program, his final offering of the 1948 season.

Jones, southpawing youngster who has deserted the featherweight ranks to fight as a lightweight, tackles Jimmy Green, a New Yorker. Jones Flattened one Freddie Smith in three rounds last week. He and Green are down for an eight-rounder.

Cooper, three-round knockout victor over Tim Healy last Monday, trades punches with Tony Longo of Baltimore, in another tiff set for eight rounds. Cooper already holds a vict ry over one of the fighting Longos, Johnny, brother of Tony.

In the third eight-rounder, Sonny Bunn, another Washingtonian, tees off against Leslie Harris, Baltimore. The fourth eight pits Red Gaddis against Burt Wicks. These two local welterweights fought a sizzling draw last week. Two weeks before, Gaddis won a split decision.

Jackie Ford, Washington middleweight, opens the show against Roy Wirt of Roanoke, in a five.

Lynchburg Wins Without Scoring

Santa Claus Bowl Decided on First Downs After Tie

Philadelphia, Dec. 18 (AP).—Mighty Mites of Lynchburg, Va., won the national 100-pounders football trophy today without scoring a point in the championship match.

The Mighty Mites received the Frank Palumbo trophy after battling to a scoreless tie with the Philadelphia Clickets, sponsored in the Santa Claus Bowl game by Palumbo, Philadelphia night club owner.

Lynchburg was awarded the trophy because it rolled up four first downs to only one for the Clickets in the title game which went four periods of five minutes duration each.

The Mighty Mites beat the Omaha Pure Paks, 27-6, and the Clickets turned back the Durham (N. C.) Civics, 13-0, in the semi-finals of the bowl tournament played at Frankford Memorial Stadium.

In the championship game, the Clickets recorded their only first down immediately after the kickoff, but neither team could get an offense going for the rest of the half which found the Clickets ahead in first down, 1 to 0.

Lynchburg snapped back in the late moments of the third quarter and beginning of the final period, racking up three straight first downs on line smashes by Bill Ellis and Ronnie Vaughan. The drive ended on the Clicket's 27-yard line.

Philadelphia's entry nearly came through in the last period as Tom Kennedy gathered in a punt and spurted 48 yards to the Lynchburg 22 before he was halted.

More Honors For Murakowski

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Fullback Art Murakowski of Rose Bowl-bound Northwestern today was named the Big Nine's most valuable player for the 1948 season by the Chicago Tribune.

An All-America selection, Murakowski was picked the league's best by a board composed of the nine coaches, officials, Commissioner K. L. (Tug) Wilson, and Sports Editor Arch Ward and Football Writer Wilfrid Smith Highlight on today's bowling calendar is the annual Hi-Skor Handicap Tournament due to attract more than 100 duckpinners. First prize is $100. Entry fee is $6.50, with handicap three fifths and scratch 128. Competition will begin at 2 p. m.

With 24 victories and 12 defeats, Veterans Administration is leading the Men's Federal Bowling League at King Pin. Fire Department is two games behind. Best average is boasted by Paul Perkins of RFC, who has 126. Top set and game honors go to Ches Wegznek of Veterans with 432 and Bill Ferris with 174.

Rex Simone posted a 186 in the Hi-Skor Business Men's League.

Biggs and Kirchner whipped Seafire in three games to go into a three-way tie for the lead in the tight Connecticut Avenue Business Men's League at Chevy Chase Ice Palace. Horace Ballard, with 1133-371, was high for Biggs. Also tied for the lead is the Marx team led by Lorraine Gulli. Seafare is the other triple holder of first place.

Personnel, with 42 victories, 14 setbacks, is topping the Veterans Administration League at Lafayette alleys. High individual scorer with 118 is Rafael Sistoz, while Dick Peck is second with 117.

Slam Bid Wins Last Feature Of Charles Town Meeting

Filly Leads All the Way; Bullhead 2d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, Dec. 18.—Mrs. Newell Ward, jr's., Slam Bid took the biggest trick of the successful 18-day meeting here today. The 4-year-old filly turned on the heat and led all the way in the Waterford Purse, feature event of the closing day program.

By a margin of two lengths, Slam Bid came to the finish line ahead of K. Wheeler's Bullhead. Third money went to H. G. Bedwell's Leamour, three-time winner here with Apprentice Willie Downs up. Downs, however, rode two winners on the card to bring his total to 35.

Leamour Favored

Young Peter Sheridan rode Slam Bid the mile and an eighth in time of 1:58 2/5 over a track that was muddy with a slightly frozen bottom. With a crowd of 7000 making Leamour an odds-on favorite, backers of Slam Bid collected at the rate of $13 for each $2 invested.

As the horsemen say, "Slam Bid had a license to win." The filly, a winner at Bowie during the fall meeting, whipped Let'em Wander in her previous outing. It was her sixth win of the year in 26 tries and upped her earnings for the year to $7450.

Leamour was not without excuse in the race. Downs was making his usual bid on the outside in the stretch as Gay Rocket began to quit. Jockey Charlie Richmond, aboard the latter, swung his whip and Leamour shied. The Bedwell gelding failed to resume stride thereafter, hanging as the front trio went into the wire.

Bullhead also had a slight mishap, stumbling going into the backstretch but recovering to close willingly.

Blue Falcon Noses Home

D. G. Smith's Blue Falcon was a neck winner in the seventh race, the day's second best offering J. D. Price's Carlotta was second, barely failing to last. J. L. Stern's Ariel Nymph was third in the field of eight going about seven furlongs. The winner, an expensive horse, paid $3.60, and was clocked in 1.31 2-5.

Apprentice Downs rode his thirty-fourth winner of the meeting in the first race. He brought J. K. Wynkoop's New Hour home under clever handling and to the tune of a $10.20 mutuel. The second race went to R. A. Rippin's Parade Ground, a $3.80 favorite, ridden by Jockey Willie Billington. The daily double on the 2 and 2 combination paid $22.

Downs closed the meeting with a victory aboard Russell Downes' Ataman, a $6 shot in the eighth race.

Gordon May Be an Owner

Joe Gordon and Mel Harder of the Cleveland Indians may become baseball executives this summer as co-owners of the Wichita, Kans., club.

Senator Ed Johnson (D., Colo.), president of the Western League, said here yesterday that Gordon and Harder have asked and received his permission to investigate entering a Wichita team in the Class A League.

The Western loop consists of six teams, but is considering expansion to eight. Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is under consideration as a seventh team. Harder and Gordon have been given until January 15 to decide whether they'll operate a new Wichita club.

If the two Tribesmen decided to form a team, Harder, coach with Cleveland, will actively direct in Wichita. Gordon, still one of the best second basemen in the majors, will remain with Cleveland until his playing days are ended.

Wichita hasn't had a Western League franchise for many years. Senator Johnson said that years ago Hank Greenberg was interested in reorganizing a team in Wichita.

Clippers Meet Richmond Today

Lenny Ford, former end for the University of Michigan football team, is being sought as a fifth regular for the Washington Professional Basketball Clippers who make their debut against the Richmond Skaters at 3 p. m. today at Turner's Arena.

The Clippers, transplanted from Atlanta, Ga., are coached by Tommy Tomblestone, former Tuskegee Institute star. Among the former Washington Bears who'll start for the Clippers are Sugar Cain and Bill Hall. The two other definite starters are Bill Brown and Calvin George.

Probe Reveals New Method Of Financing

By The Associated Press

A Senate-House Economic Committee piled up evidence yesterday that a new "revolution" is taking place in the American business world.

It is the growing practice among corporations of using more and more of their profits to pay for new plants, new equipment and other expansion costs.

Less and less, experts argue, is business depending on stock and bond sales to finance its growth. The consumer is footing a major part of the bill of the multi-billion-dollar postwar expansion. Stockholders are getting a slice of the profits—but not the big slice.

One report given to the committee estimated that business borrowed $4,200,000,000 this year. The Securities and Exchange Commission says business has spent $18,800,000,000 this year for new plants and equipment.

"Undoubtedly," said Prof. Seymour E. Harris, Harvard economist, "a revolution has occurred in financing methods."

Arguments, Pro And Con

Whether this use of profits is right or wrong is a matter of debate.

Labor union spokesmen say it is wrong. But business leaders say they are using the only sound way to meet the demands of the people and the Government for more production.

Whatever the merits of the argument, there is agreement that industry is plowing its profits back into business on a larger scale than ever before in history.

This evidence of a postwar change in business' methods of financing has been given to the Senate-House Committee in its two weeks study of 'business' record-breaking profits.

Prof. Sumner H. Slichter, another Harvard economist, believes business has been forced into this method of financing by a timid investing public, uncertain of the future.

"Corporations have had only indifferent success in raising money from the outside," he said, "and have had to rely to an abnormal extent upon plowing back profits."

Examples of Expansion

Here are a few examples of the use of profits for expansion:

The Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation is engaging in a $25,000,000 improvement and expansion program made possible by better profits.

President H. T. Batcheller told the committee his company has more than doubled its investment in the steel plant since the war. Since 1940, the company has held out $16,000,000 of its earnings while paying "moderate dividends" to stockholders. During this time, net profits increased from $3,823,000 to $6,003,000.

Eugene Holman, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, said the use of profits for expansion is a "practice rooted in the nature of our business."

He argued that much of the oil company's operations are speculative and "not suited to borrowing." He added: "We prefer to finance new ventures without recourse to the capital market."

In 1940 the company set aside 125 million dollars for "replacements and added facilities." The total this year, Holman estimated, will be 551 million dollars.

Other Examples

The Studebaker Corporation increased its net plant investment by 23 million dollars from January 1, 1945, to September 30, 1948. President H. S. Vance said the company has reinvested $20,865,000 from profits.

Robert G. Dunlop, president of Sun Oil Co., said his company kept 61 per cent of the profits in 1940, 70 per cent in 1941, 82 per cent in 1946 and 1947, and 88 per cent in the first six months of this year.

Labor union spokesmen take a dim view of business plowing back a high percentage of profits instead of cutting prices or raising wages.

Nelson H. Cruikshank, AFL economist, estimates business is depending on profits to furnish 70 per cent of its new capital.

Stanley H. Ruttenberg, CIO economist, believes the use of profits for expasiion is a "dangerous monopolistic practice." He argued that in effect a limited number of people are controlling more and more of the business operations as a result of this method of financing.

Homicide Hearing Scheduled Thursday

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence yesterday set December 23 as the date for a hearing on Mrs. Alice Booker, 33, 2635 I st. nw., charged with the homicide of Simpson Wilson, 52, of the same address.

According to police, Wilson was slain with a butcher knife outside 1419 Hopkins pl. nw., Thursday night.

Oldsmobile's New Models Now on Display

MANY ADVANCES—Another line of 1949 models—Oldsmobile's new "98" and "76" series—went on display yesterday. The four-door sedan (pictured) is from the "Futuramic" Series 98 line and features a new power plant, improved styling and numerous other advances. Oldsmobile has discontinued its smallest line, the "66" and "68" models. Some time after January 1, the company states, a new "88" series will be brought out (priced between the present "98" and "76" units)

World Headed for Surpluses Of Food, 2 Economists Assert

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—The world is headed toward food surpluses and from a food standpoint is "coming back to normal, and fast," according to two internationally known economists.

Dr. Julius Hirsch and his wife, Edith, have prepared a report on the world food situation that takes issue with recent reports of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization. FAO has maintained consistently that the world as a whole has not enough food. This premise, the Hirsches say, is based on outdated figures.

Wheat is spearheading the leveling-off process and already the wheat supply outstrips demand, says the report, based on a compilation of records of the United States Department of Agriculture.

American food prices have passed their peak, the report says, and despite a probable interim rise, will fall next autumn below the price level of this fall.

A former German university professor, Hirsch was secretary for commerce and industry in the Weimar Republic after World War I. He and his wife later came to the United States and during World War II Hirsch was chief consultant to the OPA. They now are consulting economists, serving Government and private industry.

The Hirsch report says world production of six of the seven main foods already equals or exceeds prewar production. Wheat production is 105 per cent over the 1935-1939 average, corn is 125 per cent, potatoes 105 per cent, oats 100 per cent, fats and oils 100 per cent and sugar 105 per cent.

(After the Hirsch report was drafted, the United States Department of Agriculture reported Friday that the total volume of all American crops is 37 per cent higher than the 1923-1932 base and 11 points higher than the previous record, set in 1946.)

Rice production is 98 per cent of the prewar output but the exporting countries — the United States, Burma and Siam—are asking for dollars and are experiencing "increasing difficulty in moving the exportable surplus."

Food shortages that do exist in the various countries are caused chiefly by their lack of dollars to pay for imports, the Hirsches say.

Noting that the world population has increased by 10 per cent since 1939, the report says European countries have upped the extraction rate for wheat flour to 85 per cent, as compared with the American rate of 72 per cent. This would give a 10 per cent greater supply of bread from the same amount of wheat.

In commenting on recent FAO reports on the world food situation, the Hirsches say, for instance, that the FAO's estimates of the world's exportable bread grains are too low and its estimates of world bread grain requirements are too high.

"It is easy enough to construe theoretical shortages if artificially high standards of nutrition never before attained are made the yardstick," they say. "Our theoretical present-day 'requirements' of calories, and especially protective foods, are much higher than were the actual nutritional standards of any nation outside the United States, even in boom periods and even for their high-income groups."

Food Buyers Get Good News From Two Fronts

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Some preholiday cheer for the person who has to buy food came from two fronts today.

First, various food authorities predicted increased supplies and slightly lower prices for next year. Their comments were contained in the annual food industry review issue of the National Grocers Bulletin, a publication of the National Association of Retail Grocers.

Second, various indexes of wholesale prices show the food price level has been declining. Along the important meat sector, the Agriculture Department said that slaughter steers average prices at Chicago sank this week to the lowest level since early last March.

In the Grocers Bulletin, Agriculture Secretary Brannan said the United States had "entered the door of the era of plenty."

This, he added, had brought up "the greatest agricultural problem—the marketing of the abundance produced" by America's farms.

Food retailers said that prices, besides declining slightly, will be more stable in 1949 than they have been in the postwar years.

Ohio Concern Gives Average $3392 Bonus

Cleveland, Dec. 18 (AP).—Employes at the Lincoln Electric Co. went Christmas shopping today with annual incentive payment checks averaging $3392 per worker.

The company handed out a total of $3,821,973 to its 1097 workers. It was the largest amount paid since the company started the unique plan back in 1934 and doubled the employes' 1948 earnings.

Under the program, a Lincoln spokesman explained, all company proceeds are put into an incentive kitty after deductions for taxes, expenses, wages, dividends and reserve funds.

Workers' shares in the kitty are determined by ratings made three times annually on a basis of quantity and quality of work performed and skill and cooperation shown.

Incentive bonuses last year totaled $3,800,000 for 1155 workers.

J. F. Lincoln, president of the company, said the plan "has not only increased wages, but also has reduced the selling price of company products to less than half that of comparable products on the market."

The average product output per worker this year was $29,748, compared with $6895 for employes of three other large electrical manufacturers, he said.

"If all industtry should adopt a comparable incentive system," Lincoln added, "and it was as successful as in the case of our company, the standard of living of all people would be quadrupled.

"All friction between so-called labor and management would disappear. The threat of communism . . . would be entirely removed and the satisfaction of all workers would be greatly enhanced."

Lofstrand to Discuss Maryland Legislation

Bills that will come up before Maryland's General Assembly, which convenes in January, will be discussed by Delegate Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., before the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring, Md., Monday at 8 p. m. in the Liquor Control Board Building.

Delegates from 20 affiliated civic associations will also have an opportunity to meet with State Senator Roy Tasco Davis and other members of the Montgomery County delegation to Annapolis.

Md. to Boost Property Taxes By Using '44 Values as Base

Baltimore, Dec. 18 (AP).—Maryland tax assessors will use full cash values of 1944, instead of those of 1941-42, as a yardstick in making property assessments next year, Joseph H. A. Rogan, chairman of the State Tax Commission, reported today.

This means, he said, that the properties outside of Baltimore to be resurveyed next year for 1950 tax purposes will be valued generally at about 8 per cent more.

Rogan stressed, however, that the percentages would not necessarily apply to individual assessments.

He said the change was made after a survey showed the 1944 level represented normal values.

The change will coincide with the beginning of another cycle of the State's five-year continuous assessment plan.

Under the plan, each county is divided into five districts and one district is reassessed each year in rotation.

Therefore, the new assessment base will apply only to one fifth of the total property in the counties next year. As the turn of each succeeding district comes up, the 1944 yardstick will be applied to it, Rogan said.

The ruling has no practical effect in Baltimore City, where properties are assessed at "full value," and all have been assessed at or above those of 1944.

Teachers Rebel Over Board Rule On Student Gifts

Norwalk, Conn., Dec. 18 (AP).—The Norwalk Teachers Association today, just a week before Christmas, was in revolt against the Board of Education.

The association has protested a board rule prohibiting teachers receiving gifts from students. The rule was adopted, a board member said, last September to save some children embarrassment at their inability to give their teachers presents.

Asserting there was more involved in the protest than the "receiving of a few handkerchiefs for Christmas, an association spokesman termed the rule an infringement of the rights of both the teachers and the children.

Junior Police Gather 1000 Toys for Needy

The Washington Junior Police and Citizens' Corps announced a drive yesterday to gather toys for needy children of the city.

So far, more than a thousand toys have been collected, according to Police Pvt. Oliver A. Cowan, director. Toys will be distributed Christmas Eve through 20 community centers operated and managed by the youths themselves.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Yule Season Laden With Doubts

Punch, British humor magazine, indicates that British merchants are having Christmas troubles too. It quotes a British housewife. "There was a knock on the back door and to my amazement I found four tradesmen canvassing for orders." Then comes the Punch line: "The first order she gave was to form a queue."

Livingston

Apparently Britain's Father Christmas and America's Santa Claus have brought housewives identical gifts—a buyer's market. Perhaps the British housewife, tired of queues, rationing, and terribly short supply, will welcome the change with less apprehension than her American counterpart. In this country the Christmas season is laden with doubts, layoffs, some lag in sales, and fears of a recesion or depression.

Till now, we've been able to sum up the American economy in six words: "Hard goods hard, soft goods soft." But even the hard-goods manufacturers are going in for retrenchment. Because of increased efficiency and a catching up to demand, Western Electric has cut employment from 133,000 at the end of 1947 to about 108,000. Thor, manufacturer of washing machines, has laid off workers "because of a seasonal decline in orders"; a competitor, Easy Washing Machine, for inventory-taking. Heretofore, most manufacturers of washers could not produce fast enough.

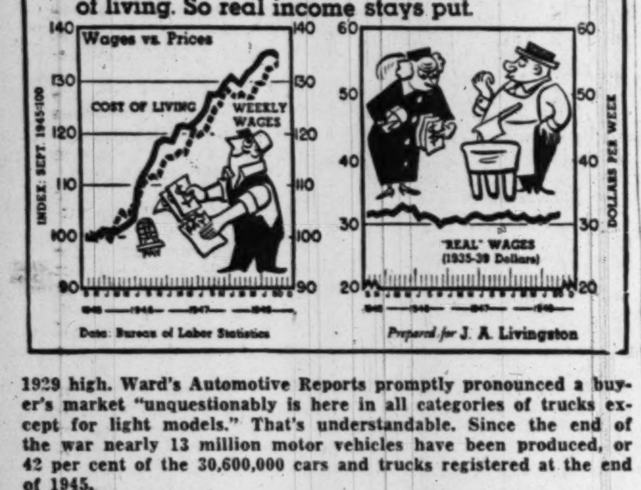
Layoffs Plentiful

Other companies to announce layoffs include Foote-Burt, Cleveland machine tool manufacturer; Westinghouse Electric's small motors division at Lima, Ohio; General Time Instrument (Seth-Thomas clocks); National Carbon, a Union Carbide & Carbon subsidiary. And numerous shoe, textile, and clothing manufacturers, instead of layoffs, have reduced the work-week.

In the same temper, Johns-Manville Corp. warned dealers that a period of stiff competition lies ahead. The Armstrong Cork Co. indicated that the supply of linoleum will catch up to demand by spring. And automobile production reached 125,000 a week—a rate of better than six million cars and trucks a year and equal to the 1929 high. Ward's Automotive Reports promptly pronounced a buyer's market "unquestionably is here in all categories of trucks except for light models." That's understandable. Since the end of the war nearly 13 million motor vehicles have been produced, or 42 per cent of the 30,600,000 cars and trucks registered at the end of 1945.

PHANTOM WAGE BOOSTS

Postwar pay is up almost 35%. Ditto the cost of living. So real income stays put.



Data: Bureau of Labor Statistics

Prepared for J. A. Livingston

A dramatic example of the supply-demand shift is oil. A year ago, consumption of gasoline, kerosene, fuel oil, and heavy residual oils were exceeding supply by about five million barrels a week. The cry was: More oil. Today supply and consumption balance and the Texas Railroad Commission has ordered a cut in production. Explanation: "Too much oil—crude and refined products—in storage and above the ground." Here are the statistics:

Week ended	Millions of barrels on hand* 1948	1948	Year-to-year increase in stocks
Nov. 27	292	226	66
Dec. 4	292	220	72
Dec. 11	291	214	77

*Gasoline, kerosene, fuel oil, and residuals.

Management and Labor

The emergence of a buyer's market is a net economic gain. It imposes restraint on both labor and management. In the first place, management won't be able to pass along wage boosts in the form of higher prices. The market—competition—won't permit it. In the second place, union leaders will recognize that employers will be readier to stand strikes if the mails are not brimming over with new orders. So they'll be more temperate in their demands.

By the same token, future wage increases will be more meaningful. The first three rounds of wage increases since the end of the war went poof—into higher prices. Goods were scarce. Demand was insistent. So producers all along the line could raise prices as the pay envelope fattened. Result: Real income of workers did not increase (see chart).

But the buyer's market introduces doubts: Will inflation turn into deflation? Will the increase in layoffs, will the decrease in employment in certain industries, and the resultant decline in payrolls cumulate into a major readjustment?

Last-Minute Rush

The behavior of people at the department stores in the final Christmas rush will be an important clew to sentiment. The results for the week ended December 11 we're encouraging—off only 1 per cent from a year ago as against a 5 per cent decline in the weeks ended December 4 and November 27, and 6 per cent in the week ended November 20. The New York Federal Reserve District, off 6 per cent, was a major factor in the drop.

Apparently, sales are gathering more than seasonal momentum as we approach December 25. And this must be borne in mind. We're comparing the week of the 11th this year with the week of the 13th last year. Last year's sales had a statistical advantage: They were two days closer to Christmas.

Hunter to Be Partner in Merrill, Lynch

Francis C. Hunter, manager of the Washington office of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane since June, 1947, will become a general partner of that firm the first of the year. He will continue as principal executive of the Washington office. Hunter has spent most of his adult life in the investment and brokerage field. Born in Savannah, Ga., February 15, 1906, he was educated at Episcopal High School in Alexandria and the Universities of Virginia and Georgia. Twenty years ago he entered the brokerage business in Savannah, later taking over the Atlanta, Richmond and Oklahoma City offices of the Merrill, Lynch firm.

Hunter

In his year-and-a-half residence in Washington, Hunter has become closely identified with civic affairs. He is a member of the Bond Club, University of Virginia Alumni Association and other local organizations. He and his family live at 3021 45th st., nw.

RETAIL TRADE: Sales in Washington department stores in the week ended December 11 were 6 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of 1947, the Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday. This was contrary to the trend in most other cities for which the board compiles figures, and one of the highest individual gains in the Nation. The trend for the country as a whole was 1 per cent less than a year previously. The Richmond Federal Reserve District showed a gain of 3 per cent over last year.

ODD LOTS: The December meeting of the District of Columbia Control, Controllers Institute of America, will be held at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Carlton Hotel . . . American Airlines will erect an ultramodern school for stewardesses in its new hanger at Chicago Municipal Airport . . . Edward A. Dougherty, assistant director of the actuarial service of the Veterans' Administration, has been elected assistant actuary of the Union Central Life Insurance Co. of Cincinnati.

TAX PROBLEMS: Federal tax problems affecting life insurance policyholders were discussed at the meeting of the D. C. Life Insurance Trust Council at the Mayflower Hotel Friday evening by Eugene Thore, general counsel of the Life Insurance Association of America. He commented upon the 1948 revenue act and the proposed regulations dealing with the estate and gift tax marital deduction. He was formerly general counsel of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

LIQUOR UNIT ELECTS: The Washington Retail Liquor Dealers Association, Inc., has elected the following officers: Bernard C. Oser, president; Ely J. Treger, vice president; Max L. Dorfman, treasurer; Philip W. Deckelbaum, recording secretary; and Pascal Della Badia, financial secretary.

Tucker Dealers Quit Protective Committee

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Sixty Minnesota Tucker dealers and the distributor for that State announced today they were withdrawing from a national committee formed to protest interests of the firm's agents during the Tucker financial crisis.

Harry S. Stearns, jr., of St. Paul, attorney for the group, said the Minnesota bloc feels that the "Tucker dealers and distributors protective committee has lost its impartial status through backing its own plan."

Stearns said the withdrawal was "without prejudice" and that the committee's plan for refinancing the auto company is a good one.

Stock Prices Hold Steady in Dull Trading

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—The stock market lost a little ground this week after a two-week rise.

The average decline was small, though, and some groups advanced. It was a week of adjustment rather than broad price swings.

Saturday's 2-hour session contributed little to the week. Most quotations varied only by minor fractions and many key issues ended unchanged. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged.

Highlight of the week's business was a sudden flare-up of demand for gold stocks. Motion picture shares were also given a brief whirl.

An obvious reason for buying interest in both groups was the fact that amusement and gold issues have suffered from neglect for some time while other sections of the market attracted investment and speculative support.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Declines	240	377
Advances	264	389
Unchanged	279	292
Total issues	783	1058

The song of the gold-standard boys has been steadily growing in volume. Lately the chorus has gained almost weekly some lusty voice in business.

A return to the gold standard, presumably, would call for a free market in gold. Considering the general rise in prices of all goods (while gold has been pinned down to $35 an ounce), and the high price of gold bullion in Far and Middle Eastern markets, the dollar value of gold would shoot up 10 minutes after restoration of a domestic and international gold standard. This argument ignores, or minimizes, the profound changes in the national and world economy which a return to gold would involve.

Another involved gold mining production costs. One analyst said there had been downward tendencies in the price of mining equipment. The supply of mining labor, in addition, is not so tight as it has been. The cost of producing gold, in other words, is declining.

Short Interest In Stocks Rises

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—The short interest in stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange increased 95,091 shares in the month ended December 15, the exchange announced today.

The total on that date was 1,027,494 shares compared with 932,403 shares on November 15. Stocks in which the short interest rose rather sharply included Farnsworth Radio to 20,728 shares on December 15 against 4100 on November 15; International Paper, 15,529 against 8994, and Radio Corporation of America, 29,850 against 19,580.

The short interest in American Foreign Power declined to 9300 shares from 21,000; that in Bethlehem Steel dropped to 7960 from 14,429, and that in General Cable stood at 6250 against 13,270 last month.

U. S. Firm Gets Big Jap Contract for Coal

Tokyo, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Japanese Board of Trade announced today award of a contract to G. H. Sprague & Sons, Inc., of New York, to supply 400,000 long tons of coking coal at $24.14 a ton laid down in Japanese ports.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Cotton futures today closed 10 to 25 cents a bale higher at the best levels of the day.

A burst of trade buying was attracted in late dealings and erased declines of as much as 45 cents a bale. The demand, which centered in the March and May contracts, came through spot houses, and brokers reported that it represented price fixing against export sales.

Business in the futures market was estimated to be in excess of 10,000 bales.

The range follows:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—An Agriculture Department final estimate that 1948 crops were the largest on record caused a decline in grains, soybeans and lard on the Board of Trade today. Soybeans had losses running to 5 cents.

The department summary simply nailed down what everyone had known all along, but it was not the kind of news to cause anyone to rush into the market and buy. Only important change from a month earlier was an increase of 10 million bushels in the soybean estimate.

Wheat closed ⅞ to 1¾ lower, corn was ⅜ to 1⅜ lower, oats were ⅜ to ¾ lower, rye was ½ to 1½ lower, soybeans were 2½ to 5 cents lower and lard was 20 to 35 cents a hundred pounds lower.

About the only contract to show any strength during the session was December oats, which held to a small fractional gain during early dealings. Later, it slipped with everything else.

Selling in wheat came mainly from the Southwest, but was not particularly heavy. Monday the Agriculture Department will issue a report on the amount of winter wheat acreage. This is awaited with much interest by the trade.

Although the department has called for a reduction in wheat acreage next year, many traders doubt if that will occur.

An item which didn't help either soybeans or lard was a report the State Department intended to negotiate a reduction in the American tariff on imports of Danish butter.

Decision Awaited On Alarm Boxes

The District Commissioners are expected to reopen the question of which type of fire alarm boxes to install in the public schools this week.

Last week the Board of Education decided to take no position on the controversy over whether to install street-type boxes recommended by Fire Chief Clement Murphy or remote control master boxes suggested by Superintendent of Communications Herbert A. Friede.

As a result, the Commissioners' decision favoring the master boxes is once again up for reconsideration. Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, in moving adoption of the master boxes in schools, said this decision should be subject to the approval of the Board of Education.

General Young and Commissioner Guy Mason outvoted John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, who favored the street type boxes.

Meanwhile, Fire Chief Murphy, who had made plans for installation of the remote control boxes in all schools, said he has gone no further pending "official notice" on the Commissioners' action.

Commissioner Mason said the matter would probably be raised at the Commissioners' meeting after a communication is received from the Board of Education on its decision not to take a stand on the fire alarm box controversy.

Forester to Speak

Alaskan Forest Plans To Be Told

Plans for the use and development of the forests of Alaska will be outlined before a meeting of the Society of American Foresters Wednesday by Frank B. Heintzleman, regional forester for the U. S. Forest Service in Juneau, Alaska.

In his talk, Heintzleman will describe recent measures designed to establish permanent industries and communities centered around logging and pulp manufacture. The society meets at 6:30 p. m. in the Y. W. C. A. building, 17th and K sts. nw.

Other scientific meetings scheduled for the week include the following:

MONDAY

Instrument Society of America meets at 8 p. m. in the Pepco auditorium, 10th and E sts. nw. to hear three representatives of the American Instrument Co. measuring moisture and use vapor indicators.

Society of American Military Engineers will hold a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. in the Burlington Hotel. Col. E. Russel Lyons will describe tht construction of the first tactical bridges across the Rhine.

TUESDAY

Anthropological Society of Washington meets at 8:15 in the National Museum to hear Dr. Henry Lee Smith, Foreign Service Institute, Department of State, outline theories of correlation between a nation's language and its culture.

Probe Urged Of Justice In Germany

By The Associated Press

An investigation of American justice in Germany by the Senate Judiciary Committee was demanded yesterday by the National Council for the Prevention of War.

An American judge, E. Leroy Van Roden of Media, Pa., has reported tortures were used to get some war crimes confessions, the council said. It added that any United States investigators "who abused the powers of victory and prostituted justice to vengeance should be exposed in a public process, preferably in the United States."

The organization drew upon a report which it said Judge Van Roden had made to Secretary of the Army Royall. The secretary is now on a European trip and available War Department officials last night said they did not know of the report.

The Council for Prevention of War quoted Judge Van Roden as saying the following methods were used to obtain confessions from Germans at the United States Court in Dachau:

Beatings and brutal kickings, knocking out teeth and breaking jaws, mock trials, solitary confinement, torture with burning splinters, posturing as priests, semi-starvation, family reprisal threats and false promises of freedom.

It added, however, that Van Roden said, "We found no general conspiracy to obtain evidence improperly."

The council identified Van Roden as a member of a two-man commission appointed by Royall to investigate complaints of third-degree methods in Germany. It said he and his fellow investigator, Justice Gordon Simpson of the Texas Supreme Court, recommended a permanent clemency program in all war crimes cases.

Fr. Wareing Requiem Mass Is Sung Here

A solemn requiem mass for the Rev. Joseph F. Wareing, S.S.J., who died Wednesday, was offered yesterday at St. Cyprian's Church, where he was assistant pastor.

Following celebration of the mass by the Very Rev. Thomas J. McNamara, superior of the Society of St. Joseph, the Rev. Thomas V. Cantwell, S.S.J., preached the sermon.

Father Wareing, who was 75, was graduated from a minor seminary in his native England at the age of 12, and received a rigorous apprenticeship of six years as a mason, his father's trade, Father Cantwell said. At 20, he became a missionary and came to the United States in 1900 following completion of his philosophical studies in Holland.

Never Robust

Never very robust, his many missions between 1903 and 1917 reduced his health so that he was told he had little time to live. He returned to England, where he wished to die, and his ship was torpedoed in the Atlantic.

Forced into a lifeboat over his protests, Father Cantwell said, he gave general absolution to those left on the ship and the last rites to a mother and daughter injured in the lifeboat.

After reaching his home, his health returned and he came back to the United States. Turned down for Army service, he served as a chaplain with the Red Cross. Father Cantwell said Father Wareing became the 16th member of the Josephites "in the days when even the most courageous man hesitated to do so, and it meant going into the deep South with a crucifix, the blessing of his superiors and little else."

Established Church

Father Waring established the St. Joan of Arc Church in New Orleans to fulfill a vow made in the lifeboat before he was rescued with his companions the day after the torpedoing. He served also in Richmond, San Antonio, Wilmington, N. C., as well as Baltimore and Washington. Prior to his three-year work at St. Cyprians, he was assigned to St. Vincent's Church here.

He is survived by a sister, Sister Mary Fischer whom he hoped to see next spring, when she will celebrate her fiftieth anniversary with the Sisters of the Good Shepherd in Surrey, England.

Woods Cites Law In Wilmington 14% Rent Boost

Tighe Woods, housing expediter, last night said he is "only carrying out the instructions of Congress" in approving a 14 per cent ceiling increase for Wilmington, Del.

After notice of approval of the increase, Leo Goodman, a director of the CIO housing committee, said the Woods action "proves the CIO's contention that he should be replaced by an able and fearless administrator."

Woods, commenting on Goodman's statement, told a reporter:

"The last Congress put down certain things in the (rent control) law. As an administrator, I don't feel I have any right to change legislation by Congress."

The local rent board in Wilmington recommended a 20 per cent increase. Woods said "the facts substantiated" a 14 per cent boost.

Woods' ruling goes to the Emergency Court of Rent Appeals. The law provides that all such cases go to this court when recommendations of a local board are denied in whole or in part.

Irish-Israeli Trade Talks Being Held

Dublin, Eire, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Dr. Josef Fisch, Israeli trade representative, met with Irish officials today to discuss the opening of trade relations between Eire and the new Jewish state.

Canada Orders Rights Congress Official Deported

Toronto, Dec. 18 (AP).—William L. Patterson, executive secretary of the Civil Rights Congress of America, today was ordered deported from Canada.

The deportation order was issued by a three-man board of inquiry of the Canadian Immigration Department. It said:

"He believes in and advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the government of Canada and of constituted law and authority, and he disbelieves in and is opposed to organized government and advocates and teaches the unlawful destruction of property."

Patterson said he would leave Toronto tonight for the United States.

"I have been accused of being a member of a subversive organization in the United States," he said.

"The organization is not subversive and has never been proved so in a court of law. I have been accused by a Canadian board of inquiry that I am a member of the Communist Party of Illinois. I categorically deny that."

MEN

READ CAREFULLY

I want to talk to 12 men who are really desirious of securing a position that will give them steady employment the year round. There are no laying-off periods; consistent income is the income that really counts.

It does not matter what your past employment has been. All we ask is that you be willing to study and learn to show our electrical device as we teach you our work.

Our profit-sharing remuneration makes earnings immediately available while learning to show our new electrical device.

You must also be willing to give the names of 3 people who will vouch for your honesty and integrity.

We prefer men who are married or men who have some sort of responsibility. I would also like to talk with a few men who are mechanically inclined and who know a good thing when they see it.

Therefore, if you are honest and of good character, a willing worker and of neat appearance, come in and talk with me Monday between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. Ask for Mr. Sillings.

2-FAMILY HOUSES

HOME AND INVESTMENT

"A Penny Saved, Is a Penny Earned"

Here is luxury, grace, excellence and common sense blended in perfect harmony. Here you live in one of these beautiful apartments and collect rent each month from the other. It is for the particular people that these Tiffey-built homes were planned and erected, where a family can live in absolute privacy in a refined neighborhood . . . and yet add to income, and in this way provide not only a quick and easy method of paying for a home, but also insuring a definite income when age and incapacity necessitate retirement from active business.

FURS—Cold weather in July is bad for bathing suits; warm weather in December did us no good. Overstock forces me to make the most sensational reductions on every fine fur coat, fur scarf and cape in stock. Sunday is going to be clearance and a day to be remembered at Baskin. For example, fine moutons, formerly priced at $195, will go for $88; Hollander blended northern back muskrats, originally $499, will be sold at $288, and so on down the line. Anything in the line of furs will be sold this Sunday at actually less than wholesale cost. Every fur piece in stock is of 1948-49 styling; we are not attempting to sell outmoded garments. Store open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Baskin Furs, corner 8th and G sts. nw.

Six Whopping Days More Ere Yuletide Debut Parties End

By Marie McNair

ONLY SIX more days—debut days that is—till Christmas. But from tomorrow through Friday the days are packed with parties for the young.

Yesterday from Washington's cave-dweller clan two debutantes made their bows.

MISS SUZANNE WALSH, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Robert Walsh, was presented to society at a tea at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Eberhart Haynes entertained at the Sulgrave Club at the same hour to introduce their daughter, Frances, following that party with a dinner for young people at the Chevy Chase Club.

SUZANNE WALSH is down from Lenox, Mass. where she's a student at Foxhallow School. Last year she was in Germany where her father served as chief of intelligence on General Clay's staff. She did some traveling on the continent and revisited Paris where she was born 18 years ago. General Walsh was then Air Attache at our embassy there.

NOTHING'S MORE FUN than skiing, Suzanne believes, unless it's riding, which she adores. Now that she's back home again she hopes to join one of the hunts next year

For her party yesterday the debutante wore an apricot colored taffeta frock wide of skirt and made with a square neckline, and tiny sleeves. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of forget-me-nots and violets. Mrs. Walsh's gown was of royal blue crepe with long sleeves and a high neck.

MRS. WALSH'S FRIENDS who took their turn at the candlelit tea table yesterday were Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, Mrs. Lauris Norstad, Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, Mrs. David Edward Finley, and Mrs. Conger Pratt. Here for the party and prepared to enjoy his Christmas holiday from school is the Walshes' son, Robert, a student at the Rensselaer Polytech.

Miss Haynes' Blond Beauty Enhanced By Old Jewels

TALL and blond Frances Gore Haynes, a ninth generation Washingtonian, wore, with her bouffant white brocaded taffeta frock, an antique necklace of amethysts and pearls, made more than a century ago, with a matching bracelet and earrings executed in India more recently. Her white rose bouquet was tied with the same ribbons that held her mother's and grandmother's flowers at their debuts. Her grandmother, Mrs. Albert Gore, made her debut as Miss Nellie Lyman Larner.

MR. AND MRS. HAYNES stood with their pretty daughter yesterday to welcome the guests, Mrs. Haynes in a sapphire blue crepe gown fashioned with short sleeves and square neck and a winged drapery of taffeta at the hip. She had pinned a spray of white orchids to her shoulder.

Sidney and his orchestra played from a recess in the wide hallway, and the young folk got together in groups at little tables set up around the buffet in the dining room, with Mr. and Mrs. Haynes' friends gathering in the ballroom.

The red lilies, called anthurium, on the buffet table were flown by friends from Hawaii, for this very special day.

Joan Churchill of Rochester, N. Y., who rooms with Frances at Ogontz Junior College, is here for the weekend and was among those assisting. Debutantes of this season asked to assist were Ruth Saul, Helen and Amie Willard, Betsie Bassett, Rebecca White and Florence Walker.

FOUR DEBUTANTES of two seasons ago, who are close friends of this year's deb and who also were among the assistants were Agnes Dunn, Edmonia Kearney, Ethel Van Devanter and Monica Gaillard. In the group also was Miss Nancy Weld Greeff of Mawah, N. J.

MRS. GILBERT GROSVENOR, Mrs. Copley Amory and Mrs. Walter G. Dunlop were among those assisting Mrs. Haynes. Others included Mrs. Chambers Oliphant, Mrs. Alexander Wotherspoon, Mrs. Philip Larner Gore and Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, both of whom are aunts of the debutante; Mrs. E. K. Morris, Mrs. Charles Elmore Croppley, Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, Mrs. Detlow Marthinson, Mrs. John Clifford Folger, Mrs. John F. Whiteley, Mrs. Charles Gray Cooper and Miss Cecil Lester Jones.

Two Guests Recall Another Festive Day

MRS. WILLIAM B. WILLARD and Mrs. Douglas B. Smith could remember the day Mrs. Haynes made her debut, for they were among her assistants, and were happy to perform the same pleasant duty yesterday.

Others included Mrs. Richard Cutts, Mrs. Albert E. Bassett, Mrs. Ernest Greene, Mrs. John Price Wetherill 3d and Mrs. Charles F. Baker.

No, the debutante's day didn't end with the tea. There was a dinner last night at the Chevy Chase Club given by Miss

Cupid's Bow Steals Show On the Row

By Elizabeth Maguire

SANTA HAS been outdone by Cupid this week in diplomatic circles. Miss Tilda de Kauffmann, daughter of the Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffmann, will become the bride of Albert J. Redway 3d, in a ceremony this afternoon at St. John's Church on Lafayette Square, and at the same time Miss Agnela M. Jurdak, cultural attache of the Lebanese Legation, will be married in St. Mary's Chapel at National Cathedral to Shukry Khoury.

On the engagement list is Peter Paul de Sousa Pernes, former attache of the Portuguese Embassy, whose bride-elect is Miss Barbara Hazleton of St. Louis, Mo. Mr. de Sousa Pernes is now doing newspaper work in Switzerland.

SCANDINAVIAN countries gave a joint Christmas party last Friday in the Louis XVI room of the Shoreham Hotel. Diplomatic representatives of Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, and Iceland were invited, from the highest to the youngest. Dinner was at 8, complete with akavit and cold dishes, and dancing began at 10.

THERE is strong rumor circulating, and it's not the first time, that the next Ambassador from India may be Mme. Vijaylakshmi Pandit, beautiful sister of Pandit Nehru, Prime Minister of India. Her first name translated means "Victory to the Goddess of Wealth." Mme. Pandit now represents her country as Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and when the U. N. is in session she leads the Indian delegation.

Keith Berendsen, son of the New Zealand Ambassador and Lady Berendsen, became a full-fledged doctor last Monday when he was graduated from the University of Otago in Dunedin, New Zealand.

Congratulations are being received by the Minister of Saudi-Arabia and Mme. Asad Al-Faqih on the birth of a son, their seventh child. According to custom of Arab countries, Mme. Al-Faqih does not appear at large official functions. Those who have met her at small gatherings describe her as a charming, attractive person.

Williams Has the Colonel in a Stew

Army Author of Pumpkin Paper, Perturbed by Puckish Parade of Pies, Pales at Playfully Packed Pastry

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

A PAL from Carlisle Barracks, Pa., tells us that Col. Frank Dorn is bravely endeavoring to weather a major domestic crisis. The Colonel, now Assistant Commander of the Armed Forces Information School, authored the first pumpkin microfilm document released for publication. It was dispatched from Tsingtao in Navy code and, according to the Colonel's statement printed in December 12th's Washington Post, could have been used as codebreaking key. Since then Dorn has been subject to considerable twitting and, naturally, is now known as Col. Pumpkin. The Colonel is owned by a cook-butler named Williams who not only runs his life but also, due to extraordinary culinary prowess, has made Dorn a much-sought-after host.

UNFORTUNATELY, publicity's glare developed Williams' latent sense of humor to exaggerated degree. He eats up limelight and, to keep it flickering around his boss, dreamed up the delirious idea of serving pumpkin pie at every meal since the startling disclosure. "I'll have to get rid of Williams," mourned the Colonel, hitherto a slaphappy eater. "That last pie was definitely filled with microfilm!"

More Than Faces Turn Red in Diplomatic Duel

LAST week two of our diplomats were banished from Bucharest. At the same time, though not coincidentally, two Romanian Legation officials, including Charge d'Affaires Grigoire Preoteasa, were declared undesirable by the State Department, ordered from the country. Meanwhile the Romanian Legation, a handsome building on fashionable Sheridan Circle, has been transformed into a little bit of red-red Russia. As counter measure to capitalist contamination, all staff members now live in the legation. To squeeze them in, dormitories have been set up in some of the large, formal reception rooms.

THIS SELECT GROUP of Sheridan Circle "Commies" is kept up-to-date on U. S. "warmongering and imperialistic tendencies" via weekly meetings. All domestic as well as diplomatic staff members assemble at these cultural get-togethers. Everyone from kitchen maid to Counselor has a say. It's fun to think of them taking cracks at the Marshall Plan or discussing the finer nuances of lynching!

Mrs. Donaldson Joins Hospitality Group

MRS. Jesse Donaldson, wife of the Postmaster General, is the newest member of the Inaugural Hospitality Committee. Mixing Mrs. Donaldson, Christmas and the Inaugural is a good idea. Her husband admonishes everyone to "mail early" while the inaugural ladies want everyone to apply early, either for occupying or offering rooms during the January celebration.

HELEN NIXON, just back from three years as American Military Government Advisor to the Women's Bureau in Korea, says that Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, President of the Federation of Women's Clubs, was a wow in Seoul. Sporty Mrs. Buck nipped into Korea from Japan, spent a week, addressed Korean clubwomen on the second anniversary of their admission to the federation. Their country for decades occupied by Japs, Korean women leap at every chance for Western freedom, have become very club-minded.

THREE AND A HALF MILLION belong to clubs, and, out of a total population of thirty million, some four million voted in the first election recently. Mrs. Nixon estimates only 20 per cent were literate at the war's end. Now 80 per cent can read. Quite a bunch of energetic females south of the 38th parallel!

Pocketbook Directory Out in New York

THE first, "Your Handbag Directory," the New York issue, is hot off the press, while the Washington issue is still in the works. This is the compact, pocket-size, green-backed address book which busy women and out-of-towners will find so handy. The New York issue was assembled by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and Signora Aileen Flannery Branca; the Washington edition by Mrs. Robert McKay and Mrs. W. Jasper Dubose. The directory lists every kind of address (and telephone number) from Air Conditioners to Zoos. Some of the more intriguing items included are Proxy Parents (Children love them; parents trust them), Pearl Consultants and a Devil Crab Shop! The directories will be on sale at newsstands and will be mailed to upper income bracket ladies.

Service Set Kept 'on the Double' Attending Many Yule Parties

By Norma Lanum

'TIS the Sunday before Christmas and all through the town members of the service set are trying to figure out how to attend all the many parties that fill their social datebooks.

Guests at today's two large cocktail parties will meet one another coming and going. Both parties are taking place at Fort McNair.

* * * *

MAJ. GEN. HOBART GAY, commanding general of the Military District of Washington, and Mrs. Gay have invited about 200 to their cocktail party at the Fort McNair Officers Club. And at Vice Admiral and Mrs. Harry W. Hill's quarters there's planned a gay Christmas eggnog party.

Honor guests at the Hills' today will be their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Stockett Hill, who has just returned from London, and their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John C. Hill 2d, just back from Cuba.

Commander Hill, his wife and two little daughters will leave later this week to spend Christmas with Mrs. Hill's parents in Washington, N. C.

* * * *

LATER THIS EVENING Col. and Mrs. Walter T. O'Reilly will have about 30 guests for buffet supper. Those who will be there include Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Albert C. Wedemeyer, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Anthony C. McAuliffe, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Henry S. Aurand, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Alfred W. Gruenther, and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Daniel Noce.

MRS. FRIKOEFFER STEELE and her son, Capt. Gordon Steele, U. S. A. F., and her daughter, Miss Cynthea Steele, also are entertaining at an "at home" today. Captain Steele, incidentally, will leave sometime next month for Belgium, where he will be assistant Air Attache at the American Embassy.

Several hundred officers of the Plans and Operations Division of the Army and their wives attended the cocktail party Friday at the Fort McNair Officers Club given in honor of their former division chief, Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer and Mrs. Wedemeyer.

Maj. Gen. Ray Maddocks, new chief of the "P. and O." Division, and Mrs. Maddocks, shared honors with the Wedemeyers.

Most World-Touring Lawmakers Coming Home for Christmas

By Genevieve Reynolds

MOST OF THE peripatetic congressional contingent timed their overseas junkets so as to holiday in their home States or in the Nation's Capital. Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft sailed in from Europe Friday, debarked in New York City, dashed down to Washington and now are debating whether to greet Santa Claus with their family in Ohio or here. Nevada's Senator and Mrs. George Malone are scheduled to arrive in Cairo today from India. And if present plans don't go awry, they'll observe Christmas in the sunny climes of Egypt.

MORE THAN half of the large Texas delegation will celebrate the Yuletide in their respective households here, as will a sprinkling of other lawmakers and their families. Lone Star Staters who will hang up the traditional stocking—or fill it for their youngsters—in the city on Christmas Eve will be Senator-elect and Mrs. Lynden B. Johnson, Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas, Representative and Mrs. Ed Gossett, Representative and Mrs. Tom Pickett, Representative and Mrs. John E. Lyle, Representative and Mrs. George H. Mahon, Representative and Mrs. Paul J. Kilday, Representative and Mrs. Olin Teague.

Odds are 10 to 1 that the Texans will all get together for a whoop-it-up celebration during the stretch between December 24 and January 1, despite the fact no party as been set for the nonce.

REPRESENTATIVE B. CHIPERFIELD of Illinois, who headed a group of his colleagues on a tour of 12 Latin-American capitals, winged his way to the National Airport Wednesday, took a quick look-see at Hill duties and departed for a Christmas turkey feed with the family in the Prairie State. In the House Foreign Affairs Committee group visiting South-of-the-Border nations were Representatives Bartlet Jonkman of Michigan, Lawrence H. Smith of Wisconsin, Pete Jarman of Alabama, Thomas S. Gordon of Illinois and Mike Mansfield of Montana. Representative Michael Feighan of Ohio, member of the Judiciary Committee, also accompanied the flying lawmakers on their month's tour.

MIKE MANSFIELD will spend Christmas with his family here, but Representative and Mrs. Smith will head for Wisconsin over the weekend. Where to spend the holidays remains a question with several others of the committee members who made sure that they would be on United States soil for the occasion. Not that they failed to enjoy their visits in Lima, Bogota, Panama City, Guatemala City, Montevideo. All praise Latin-American hospitality. Still, Christmas is a time for gathering the family around the hearthside.

JUST BACK from a vacation voyage to Panama are California's Representative and Mrs. Leroy Johnson, Representative and Mrs. Otis Bland of Virginia, Representative and Mrs. Frank J. Sundstrom of New Jersey. The Johnsons will eggnog at their home here,

Divorced Mother of Two Grown Sons Plans To Wed Divorced Man Whose Daughter, 20, Is Morally Lax; Sons Protest the Union

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in my early forties, divorced 12 years, have two sons aged 24 and 22, and now I am happy in my engagement to marry a very fine man, 52, who also has been divorced for some years.

We are compatible in every way, including social and religious backgrounds, and Paul has a wonderful easy disposition. We have known each other for several years, are much in love and feel that ours will be a perfect marriage; but a problem has arisen concerning his daughter, 20.

Joyce is a pleasant, pretty girl and I am very fond of her; but due to her mother's example and negligence, her morals are shabby and she lacks the refinement which characterizes Paul's family and mine. In fact, the mother's traits (transmitted to the child) were the initiating cause of Paul's divorce.

Girl Rejects Boy's Brotherly Advice

ALTHOUGH long aware of Joyce's shortcomings, I had felt that she would improve in time, especially as she is now living with Paul and subject to his guidance; but my sons are very critical and frequently complain that she has embarrassed them publicly when in their company. One son ventured to give her brotherly advice, to no avail; and although Paul is trying to straighten her out, he doesn't know how lax her morals are.

My sons argue that if I marry Paul and Joyce shares our home, her moral laxity and social vulgarities will bring me grief; yet I love Paul very much and feel that her shortcomings shouldn't interfere with our happiness. Also, I venture to hope that she won't live with us always, and I feel that my sons' views might be animated somewhat by jealousy. What do you think? And are there ways I might help Paul correct her character? Please advise. E. S.

Girl Is Opposed to Marriage, Too

DEAR E. S.: As I see the picture, Joyce and your sons, in different ways, are registering equally vehement opposition to the marriage you contemplate.

Joyce, it seems, is exerting herself to scandalize your camp into renouncing the idea, which suggests that, in addition to being a problem-personality per se, she is determined to be aggressively offensive in relation to you, in the event you wed her dad. And that doesn't give you much of an "in" for trying to help him correct her character.

In her present frame of mind, definitely she poses a serious obstacle to married happiness if she is to live with you. At her age, unless she were cordially receptive to moral and social reeducation, there's little chance of her changing for the better, regardless of sentimental eagerness on your part to refine her behavior, by example and coaching.

In all probability, her aim in defiantly flouting your sons' sensibilities was to get your goat, too, trading on the guess that the incidents would reach you by grapevine; and as you say, Paul doesn't know the extent of her lax vulgarity,—which shows how she operates: "Divide and rule."

Are Adults Capable of Fine Objectivity?

THIS AFFORDS implications of what you'd be up against in family relationship to her and Paul, caught in the crossfire of what she goaded you to feel and know, that Paul could not accept as true, so that you couldn't work with him, in a spirt of unity, in trying to bring the "problem" under mutually acceptable control.

Being in love and engaged to marry, with hunger for congenial, matehood greatly stimulated, naturally you're in no mood to admit impediments; but wearing blinders of rose-colored glasses towards difficulties obviously centering in Joyce—as you tend to do—is not advisable.

Here's what I think: As much by "conditioning" as by design, Joyce is slated to become a sword between you and Paul, unless together you quarantine the threat by facing it eye-to-eye, not blinking anything, nor trying to fool oneself or the other, loyally resolved to support each other in any wretchedness she may incite. But is the easy-going Paul man enough for that? It requires superlative stamina and largeness of heart on both sides. M. H.

Pre-feeling Ornaments

To the young fry, the glittering ornaments on Christmas trees are a great temptation. They seem to call for touching, rubbing and squeezing. And yet most of us grown-ups don't like to have the youngsters "messing" around the tree.

One way of meeting the problem is to arrange to give the children their fill of exploring these delightful things. Under supervision and before the tree is decorated, they can turn on and turn off the Christmas tree lights, rub fingers over the shiny smoothness of the decorative balls and play with the angels that go high on the tree. A chance to make some simple ornaments from pieces of tinsel and colored paper also will make them feel that once the decorations are on the tree, they shouldn't be pulled and hauled around.

If this sort of opportunity is overlooked and the ornaments are hung without children having had a chance to feel them, one can lift them so that they can enjoy the sensations that come from touching things that you're "not supposed to."

Satisfactions coming from these approaches to "pre-feeling" are good insurance against later damage to the decorations.

IT'S ALMOST HERE, that wonderful season when fir trees bloom with sparkling lights and mistletoe grows on the chandelier.

It's almost here, with its fragrance of bayberry and pine, its whispered secrets, its carols and candlelight, stockings, turkey, fruit cake—and parties.

HOSPITALITY is part and parcel of the Yuletide spirit of giving. Christmas entertaining comes in as many different packages as do Christmas presents. Often the more informal it is, the more fun. Serving refreshments to a band of youthful carolers, for instance, or having friends in to help trim the tree, can add up to an occasion that will be long remembered.

HERE'S A BEVY of beverages that the teenagers—and other, too—will enjoy when they get together. Serve them with Christmas cokies, fruit cake, coconut or one of the other traditional cakes of the season.

CREAMY SPICED MILK PUNCH

1 quart milk
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 quart vanilla ice cream
½ pint whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 tablespoons grated orange rind

POUR MILK into cold punch bowl; mix in seasonings. Add ½ of the ice cream, stirring until partially melted. Whip cream until stiff and fold in vanilla. Place remaining ice cream and whipped cream on top of spiced milk. Sprinkle with grated orange rind. Serve in mugs with stick cinnamon stirrers. This recipe serves 10 to 12.

MULLED CIDER PUNCH

3 quarts cider
1 teaspoon whole cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1/3 cup sugar

COMBINE CIDER, cloves, nutmeg and sugar. Bring to boiling point and boil 5 minutes. Strain and serve hot. This recipe makes enough to serve 25. Nice way to serve it is in earthenware mugs.

A NUMBER OF DIPLOMATS are expected home this week from the U. N. sessions in Paris. Thor Thors, Minister of Iceland, is returning, and for his daughter, Miss Margret Thors, he is bringing some Paris creations. "Two of them," she says, explaning she is not an escapist.

ALL THE GUESTS were under 12 at the afternoon party given yesterday by the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Makin. Blissful youngsters were charmed with balloons and cakes, and a generous Santa had a gift for each child. Youngest to attend were Penelope Harry, age 3 months; Rosemary Austin, age 5 months, and Julie Magee, age 7 months. The others ranged from 1 to 12. A few of the staff helped to look after the children, and mothers and fathers were given a holiday. Honor guests at the fete were the daughters of the British Ambassador and Lady Franks, Caroline, age 9, and Alison, age 4.

NEW Second Secretary of the British Embassy is F. W. Marten. J. E. Chadwick, who was First Secretary at the embassy and personal assistant to Sir John Magowan, has gone to a new post in Caracas, Venezuela. A new Third Secretary at the Brtifish Embassy is K. G. Jamieson.

AS A FAREWELL to the Minister of India and Mme. Nehru, the Ambassador of India and Lady Rama Rau gave a dinner last evening at the embassy. It was black tie at 8 o'clock for about 35 guests.

Among those who attended were the Ambassador of Iran and Mme. Ala and the latter's mother, Mme. Naserolmolk; the Ambassador of Pakistan, M. A. H. Ispahani; the Ambassador of Turkey, Feridun C. Erkin, and the Minister of Syria and Mme. El-Khouri.

Others included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Satterthwaite, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hare, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sparks and Mr. Elbert Matthews, all of the State Department, and embassy officials and their wives.

MINISTER NEHRU and his wife are leaving today for New York whence they will sail on Tuesday to a new post in Sweden.

Yule Tradition Prevails At Ferguson Party

Christmas tradition prevailed at the party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Courtland D. Ferguson. More than 250 guests were received by the host and hostess at their house on Chamberlin ave., between 5 and 8 p. m.

Artistic decorations started with a spray of holly branches tacked on the door with a bright red pair of Santa Claus boots, and when the door opened there was a jingle of old Swiss sleigh bells. Silver pine cones and glistening magnolia leaves decorated the drawing room, and in the dining room a lavish buffet included roast turkey, spiced beef, ham baked in wine, dainty sandwiches and cakes and many other delicious foods.

Most popular gathering place of the evening was the large Mexican recreation room below, where huckleberry wreaths and candy canes graced the walls. Melodious music was furnished by the noted marimbist, Velasquez.

Among the guests who attended the fete were the Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffmann, Associate Justice Frank Murphy, Justice and Mrs. E. Barrett Prettyman, Gen. and Mrs. Wallace Graham, Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis, Gen. and Mrs. Guy V. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Marquis Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Blake Clark, the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Charles G. Ross and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Beall.

TOWN TOPICS:

NEXT MOVE on the Foreign Service checkerboard is likely to be the nomination of John Young as United States Ambassador to Guatemala, according to drawing-room gossip at Newport. Socialite and world traveler Mr. Young is a former Naval Attache at our embassy in Russia, and at one time held a post in the State Department.

Present Ambassador to Guatemala is Richard Patterson, who was Ambassador to Yugoslavia from 1944 to 1947. He's to be made Ambassador to Mexico, according to the grapevine.

Elizabeth Hall Is Engaged to S. E. Rockwell

The engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Poole Hall, to Stephen Ensign Rockwell has been announced by Col. and Mrs. Ernest James Hall of New Haven, Conn. Mr. Rockwell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ensign Rockwell of North Haven, Conn.

Miss Hall was graduated from Wellesley College, class of 1946. She has worked for Nelson A. Rockefeller on his private staff and for Yale University School of Medicine. She will leave soon to spend several months in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where her father is Cultural Attache in the Embassy of the United States.

Mr. Rockwell will graduate from the Washington and Lee University Law School in June, 1949. During the war, he served with the Thirty-fourth Infantry Division in the African and European theatres.

The wedding is planned for early fall.

Mrs. Burnhamer to Give Party for Welsh Club

Mrs. Louis Burnhamer will be hostess to the Women's Welsh Club of Washington at a Christmas party Monday, 8 p. m., at her home on Rhode Island ave. nw.

The Junior Club will furnish the entertainment for the evening and the entire group will pack a Christmas box for the Welsh Home in Cleveland, Ohio, which is supported by 40 women's clubs in the Eastern United States.

Walter Reed Nurses Plan Dance Tonight

The Service Set

Washington early in February for New York, where the general, now the Army's chief of public information, will take over as superintendent of West Point.

Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley will give a dinner Thursday in honor of the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet.

Other parties on the military datebook include the cocktail party Capt. and Mrs. William T. Easton have planned for Thursday, and Col. and Mrs. Richard Mayo's party on the 28th.

While service wives are frantically counting the shopping days before Christmas, the juniors are checking off the dancing nights before returning to college.

THE HOLIDAY social swirl for the younger set, already hitting a fairly rapid pace, will reach its clmax after Christmas.

"The Brats of '24," children of West Pointers who were graduated in 1924, have planned an old-fashioned progressive dinner for the night of the 26th and their Christmas cotillion will take place on the 27th at the Officers Club of Fort McNair.

Next night the service juniors will don their formal finery again for a Christmas dance at Fort Myer, sponsored by the Women's Club at the post.

* * * *

COL. and Mrs. Frederick Dau will have a dinner party before the Fort Myer dance for friends of their daughter, Susan. And several of Andrew Cole's friends have been invited to a dinner at the same time by his parents, Col. James V. Cole, commanding officer of Fort Myer, and Mrs. Cole.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Cortland V. R. Schuyler, Colonel and Mrs. Cole and Capt. and Mrs. W. K. Konze will be chaperons at the dance.

* * * *

MISS BAYNE EASTON has timed her Christmas party for the homecoming of the Annapolis boys. The Naval Academy students begin their holiday on Wednesday and that night Miss Bayne will have an open house at the home of her parents, Capt. and Mrs. William T. Easton.

Midshipman W. P. T. "Pete" Hill, jr., will be home from Annapolis with his parents, Maj. Gen. W. P. T. Hill, Quartermaster General of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Hill. William H. Arnold, jr., son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold, got back from Princeton Friday.

SOMETHING different in Christmas parties is promised for children at Fort McNair on Thursday at the Post Theater. Several of the youngsters have been working for weeks on a special Christmas play. The setting of the epic is to be a toy shop where a china doll with a cracked voice, a tin soldier with just one arm and a teddy bear with a twisted leg will be stellar performers.

The Capital's military set will be increased by six new members soon after the first of the year. That's when Col. Sidney D. (Rosy) Grubs, his wife, Jane, and his four children, Nancy, 12; Tom, 9; Jack, 8, and Don, 6 months, expect to be settled at their quarters at Bolling Air Force Base. This is the Grubbs' first assignment in Washington.

Colonel Grubbs, a veteran of 85 combat missions, took over his duties as commanding officer of Bolling Base Tuesday and the family will come up from Montgomery, Ala., around the last of this month. Colonel Grubbs was formerly commander of Maxwell Air Base in Montgomery.

California's Designers Specialize in Everything Under the Sun

Old Fashioned Cottons Mix With Latin Colors In Dramatic Costumes

By Peggy Preston

CALIFORNIA, land of fabulous fancies, is famous for a number of things. Not the least of these are its feminine forms divine, and the clothes with which they are adorned.

In the past decade California designers have risen to first place in the highly competitive field of play costumes. Using as models the most beautiful girls in the world, they have created swimsuits that are known from New York to Shanghai. And it was they who first lured the lowly cotton fabric from the kitchen and gave it prestige on the beach and in the ballroom.

There is a boast on the West Coast that outdoor living was invented in that sunny clime. Floridians may take issue on this point, but even they can hardly deny that California designers have developed a special knack with outdoor clothing. Fabric, cut and color are all aimed at pleasing the elements.

BATHING SUITS from the top-flight fashion houses of California are literally engineered to the figure, made to facilitate action as well as to complement the female form.

In the realm of fabric dyes and designs, the Californians have showed a marked genius. Borrowing from their Mexican neighbors to the south, they have tossed vivid colors around with studied abandon. To these Western fabric pioneers goes credit for new and vital combinations of colors that have now been accepted in other parts of the world. They gave us orange, thrown against brilliant red and yellow; deep blue against chartreuse; blue green against pink.

The Westerners were also the first to see the drama in old-fashioned ginghams, denims and chambrays. Plucking a flowered dimity frock from the trunk of '49er's bride of Gold Rush days, they fashioned a modern bathing suit—a two-piece one, at that. It made fashion news around the globe and set the pace for an avalanche of cotton clothes.

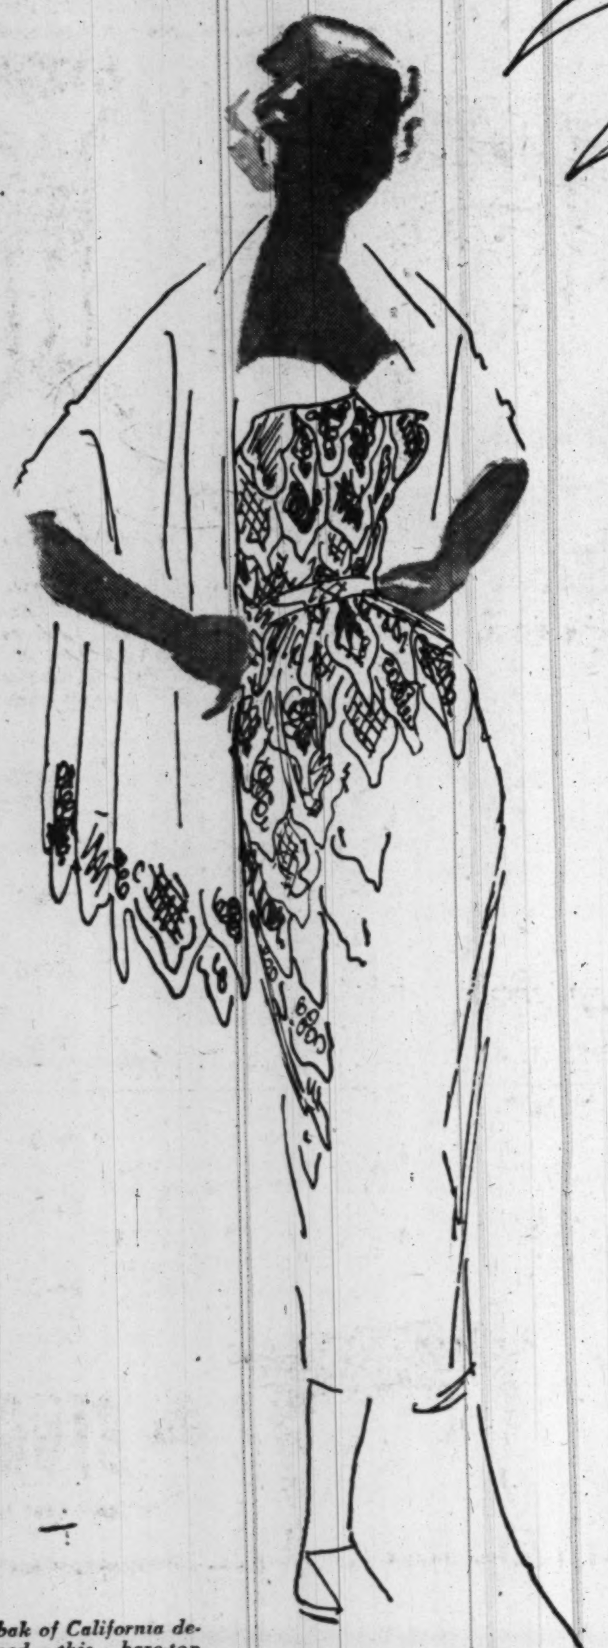
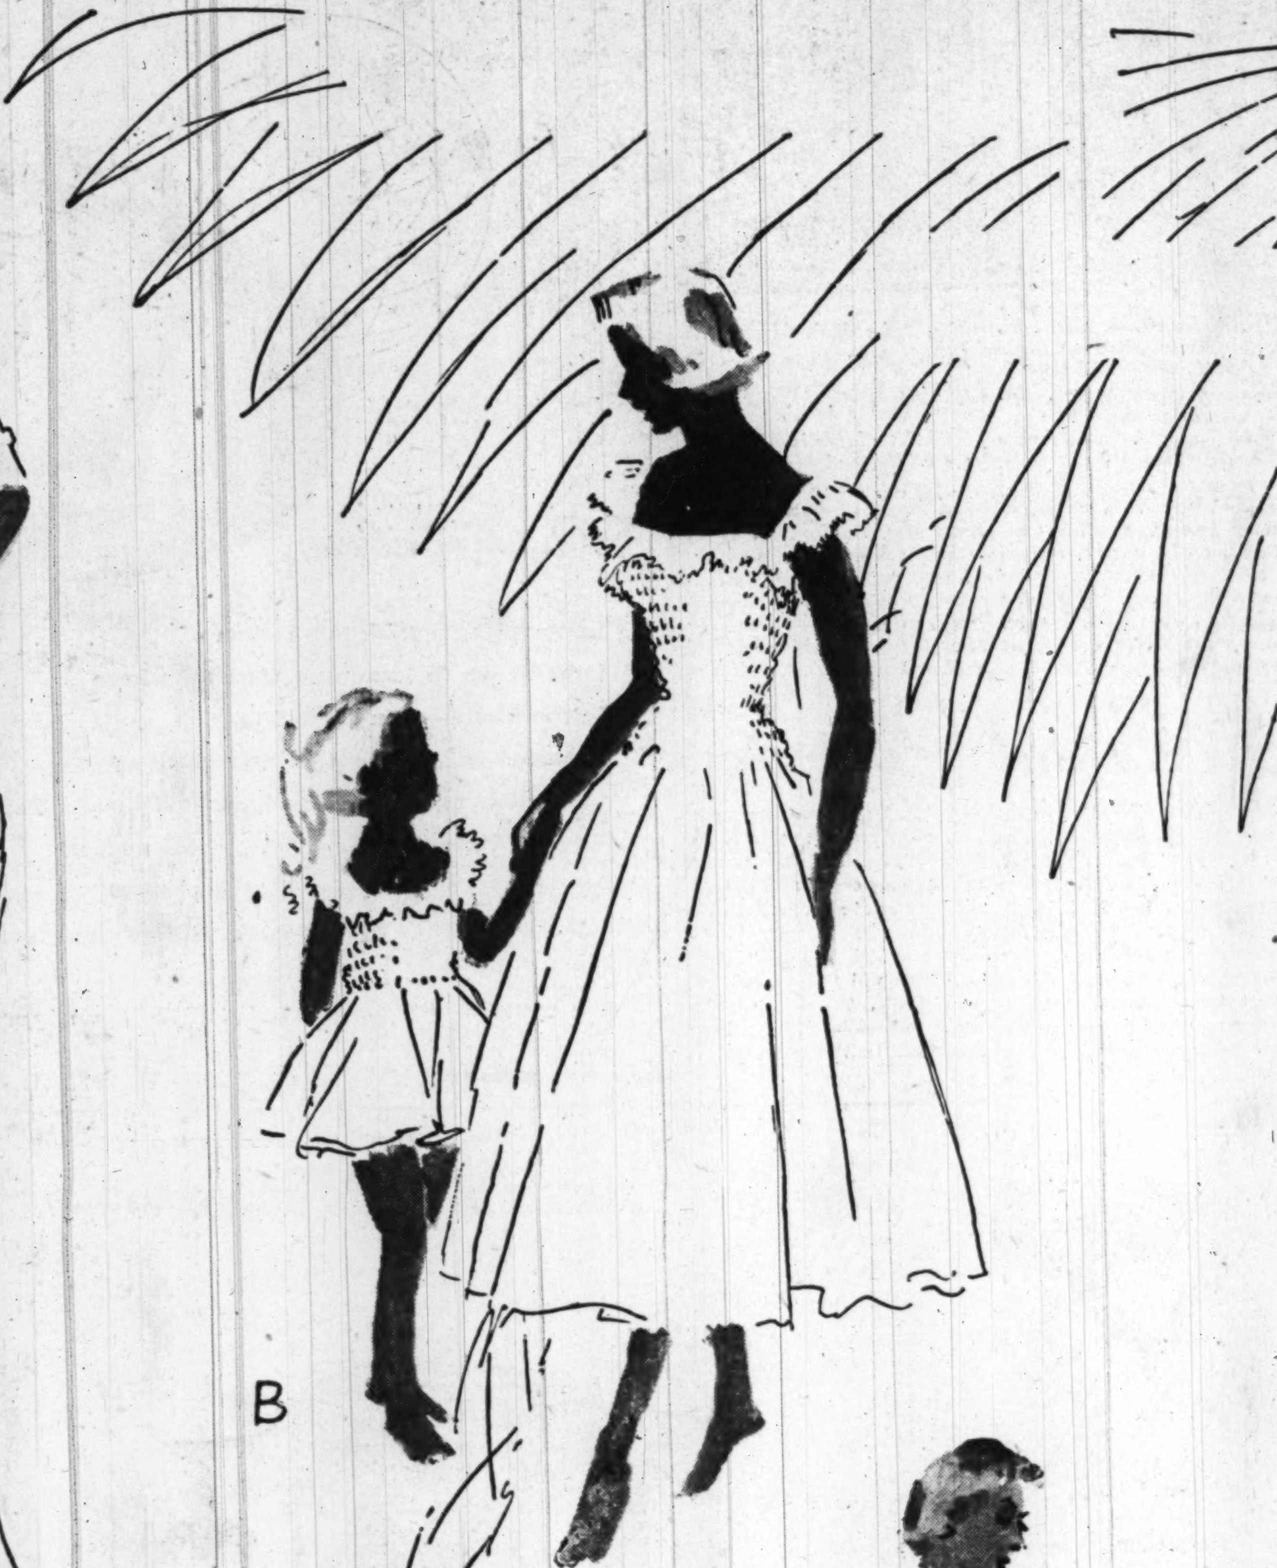
BECAUSE Californians are sun-worshipers and love to bare their skins to the direct rays of King Sol, they were among the first to give whole-hearted acceptance to the craze for bare shoulders and strapless tops. They have exploited the idea to its utmost via swimsuits, blouses, sunsuits, cocktail dresses and evening gowns.

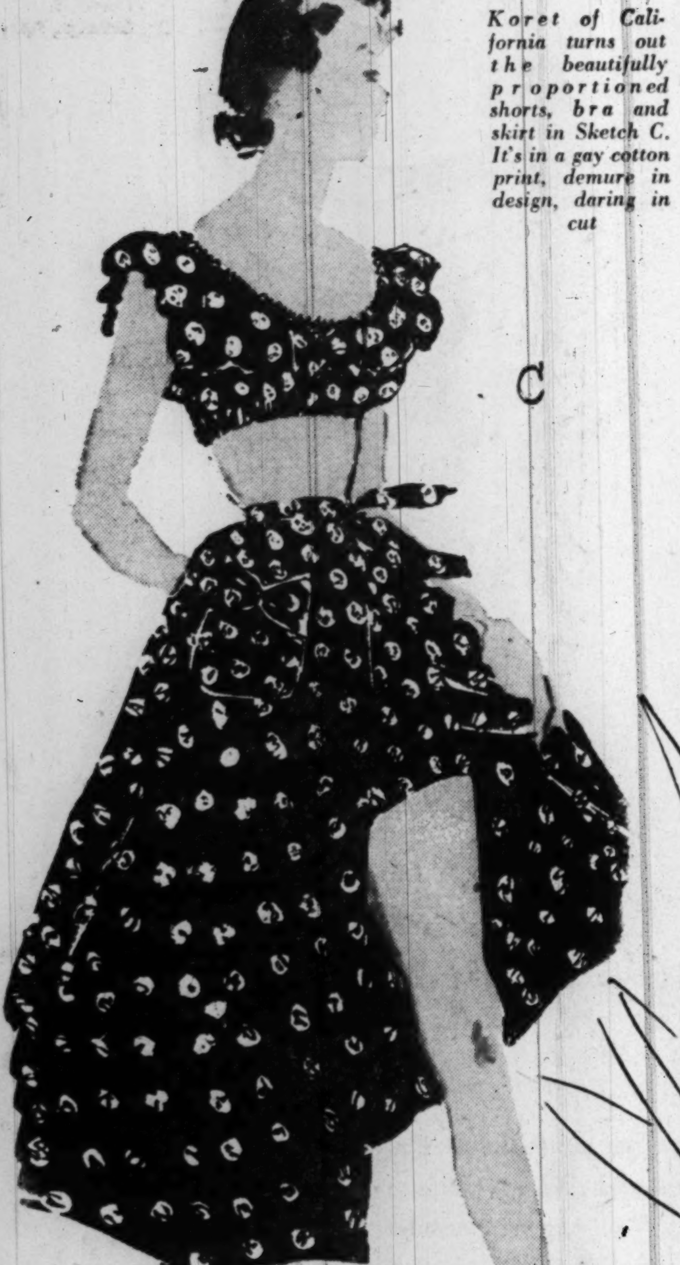
This season they went a step further—concocted the bare-neck coat. Jean Spadea, The Washington Post's fashion artist, sketches it for us in figure E. Designed by Pat Premo of W. J. Schminke, it gives us a new method of exposure. It is three quarter length with long sleeves, huge pockets. Underneath are bra top and shorts in matching shade of striped pique.



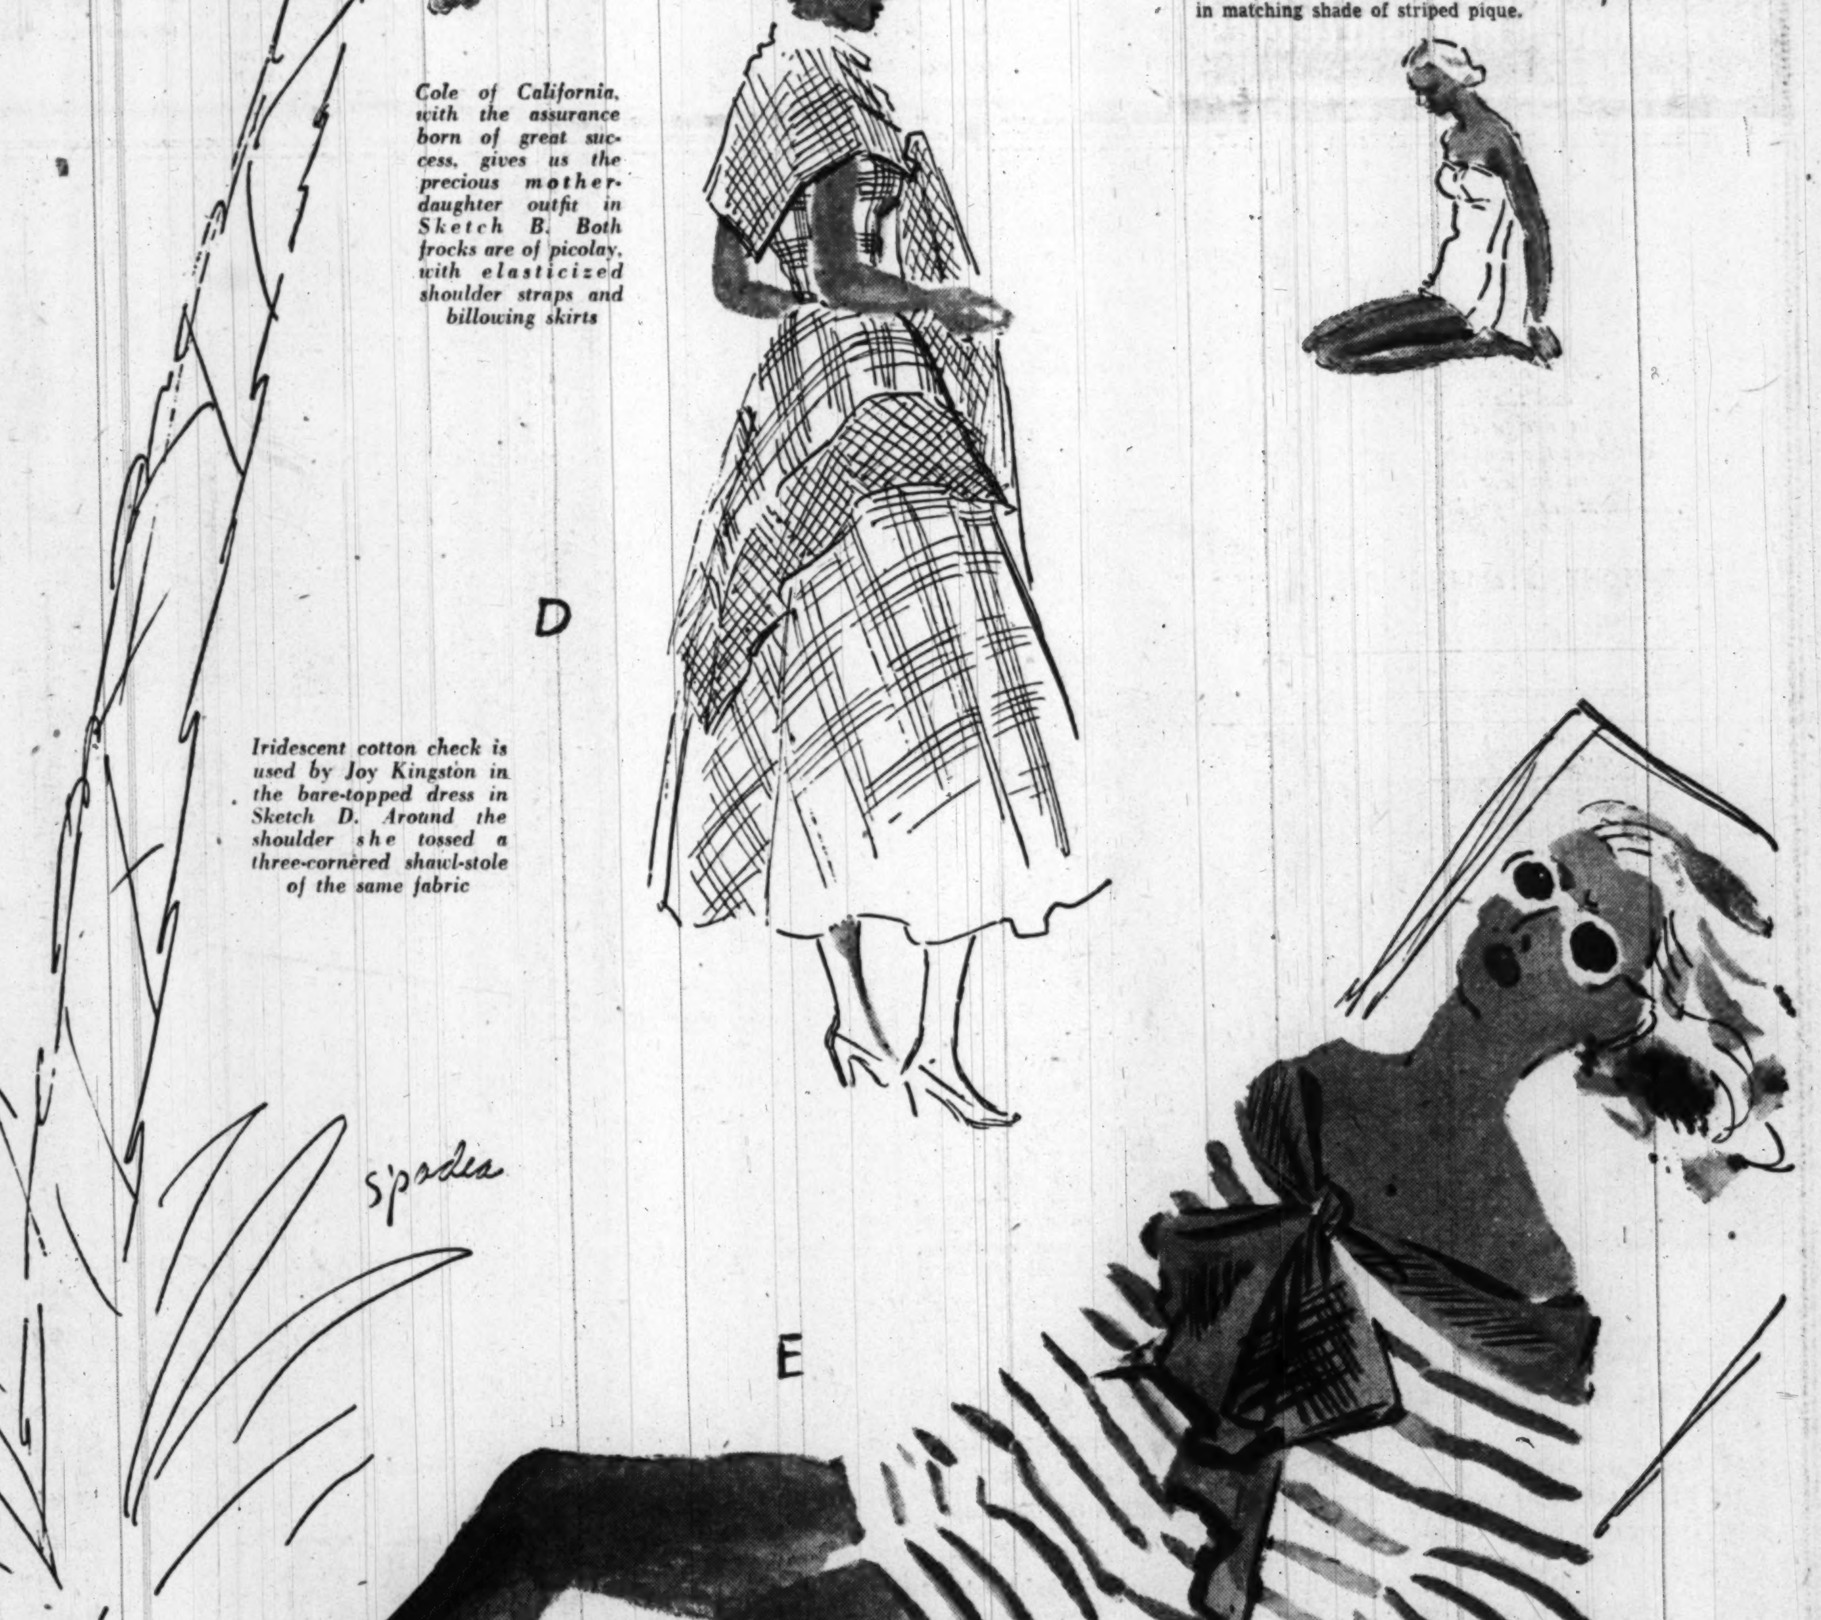
Tabak of California designed this bare-top cotton print that takes cover under a white sharkskin stole, bordered with the same print



Cole of California, with the assurance born of great success, gives us the precious mother-daughter outfit in Sketch B. Both frocks are of picolay, with elasticized shoulder straps and billowing skirts



Koret of California turns out the beautifully proportioned shorts, bra and skirt in Sketch C. It's in a gay cotton print, demure in design, daring in cut



Iridescent cotton check is used by Joy Kingston in the bare-topped dress in Sketch D. Around the shoulder she tossed a three-cornered shawl-stole of the same fabric

It's New in Washington

Store Offers Expert Food Plans as You Buy

NEW this Yuletide season is the catering service that one of Washington's old established grocery stores is offering its customers as a contribution toward easy entertaining. The firm will serve parties of 4 to 4000, deliver anything from a few sandwiches to a sumptuous buffet supper complete with linens, silver, china and servants.

There's a food consultant at their Connecticut ave. store now who'll take your order, help you plan your menu if you wish. And near her is one of the most tempting displays you ever saw of all the Christmas treats you can have on your party table—tiny individual fruit cakes topped with cherries, succulent baked turkeys and hams, petit fours with Christmas decorations, Marzipan in gaily-colored fruit shapes, and all sorts of fancy mints and hors d'oeuvres. Ice cream can be ordered in the shape of Santa Claus, bells, and other Christmas symbols, and a delicious egg nog is of course available too.

Have you ever eaten Singapore Mulligan? Arabian Chervah? Or Aztec bean soup? You can now, very easily, for they all are coming to Washington in cans as part of a line that recently went on sale here.

The soups are the handiwork of Zachary Gabel, who has settled down in Brooklyn after 20 years of traveling and writing. During his travels, Gabel developed a hobby of soup-eating and recipe-collecting, which he has now turned into a prosperous business. The Aztec bean soup, for instance, he discovered in a peon's hut in Mexico. The making starts with minced onions cooked until golden in rendered salt pork, plum tomatoes, chili pods, and cumin seeds. They're simmered together a long time, then cooked kidney beans and red wine are added.

Gule Arter, another of the soups, comes from Denmark and is made of yellow peas. There's a Bavarian mushroom barley soup from Vienna, too; a cucumber meat borscht from Odessa, Genoese minestrone, Ukraine cabbage, Andalusian tomato, Polish tart, Vichyssoise, and Basque onion soups. All are wine flavored.

PERFECT complement for your roast turkey this Christmas are the cranberry turkey ices recently introduced by a Washington ice cream company. These little red gobblers bring a cool, refreshing tartness to a rich holiday meal. Ices in the shape of Christmas bells are also being made by the same company. Best of all, these ices are so reasonably priced that they easily fit in the family food budget.

SPEAKING of Yuletide treats, here's an innovation brought out by a Washington baking company. It's a "pre-sliced" dark fruit cake. Though chockful of nuts and candied fruits, the pre-slicing treatment saves it from crumbling, says the company, makes for easy eating of the rich delicious dessert. The round cake comes sliced in three layers, so that you can cut and serve three perfect portions with only one sweep of a knife. The cake is made by an old-fashioned recipe, they say, and is extra spicy and good.

Especially for fruit salad is a wonderful new dressing that recently reached the Washington market. It's a French-type dressing, but quite a thick one, and combines the qualities of sweetness and tartness to the exact degree that suits fruit best. If you've been looking for a really good answer to the problem of properly dressing a fruit salad, you should find it here.

MAPLE FROSTING is the latest addition to a well-known line of ready-mixed cake icings. You simply add hot water to the contents of the package and stir well, and there you have a smooth, creamy frosting with a rich maple flavor. The mix can be used to make candy, too, as well as maple topping for ice cream, syrup for pancakes, and the frosting.

Mrs. Walter Orrin Allen, jr., is the former Miss Jean Marie Soden, daughter of Alford J. Soden of Silver Spring, Md. Her marriage took place yesterday in St. Andrew's Church, College Park. Mr. Allen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Allen, also of Silver Spring. For her wedding the bride wore a gown of white satin with lace yoke and a fingertip veil of illusion held by a lace poke bonnet. Her flowers were a crescent bouquet of gardenias

Moffett

Mrs. John Holt Myers, the former Miss Eleanor Yorke Brown, was married yesterday evening in Ann Arbor, Mich. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Brown, jr., of Ann Arbor. Mr. Myers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Myers of Chevy Chase, Md. After their honeymoon in the Laurentian Mountains the newlyweds will spend the New Year holiday in Washington and then return to Ann Arbor

In Bridal Procession

The wedding of Miss Virginia Lee Bonham and Robert H. Cowan took place yesterday in Lexington, Ky., at Maxwell Street Presbyterian Church, the Rev. W. A. Miles officiating. A reception followed at the Phoenix Hotel.

Mrs. Cowan is the daughter of Mrs. Robert T. Bonham of Greenbelt and the late Mr. Bonham. Mr. Cowan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude C. Cowan, of Nashville, Tenn.

Given in marriage by her brother, Robert T. Bonham of Chicago, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin brocade. Her veil of imported French illusion fell from a close-fitting cap of satin brocade and she carried a bouquet of white gardenias.

After motoring to Miami, Fla., the couple will make their home in Nashville, Tenn., where Mr. Cowan will continue his studies in Vanderbilt University School of Law.

Glogau

Mrs. William Katkish wore a white satin off-shoulder gown for her wedding yesterday in St. Jerome's Church, Hyattsville. She is the former Miss Rosalie Thornton Lyon, daughter of Henry Hyde Lyon of Hyattsville. Mr. Katkish is the son of John Katkish of Pittsburgh, Pa. A reception was held after the ceremony at Prince George's Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Katkish will make their future home in Pittsburgh

Annapolis Activities

ANNAPOLIS, MD., December 18. The superintendent of the Naval Academy, Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., and Mrs. Holloway entertained at dinner recently in honor of the Governor of Maryland, William Preston Lane, jr., and Mrs. Lane. The dinner preceded Governor Lane's lecture to midshipmen of the first class.

Additional guests who dined at the superintendent's quarters on this occasion were the Undersecretary of the Navy and Mrs. W. John Kenney, Capt. and Mrs. William W. Hargrave, Capt. and Mrs. Merle A. Sawyer, Capt. and Mrs. William R. Smedberg 3d, and Capt. and Mrs. William G. Cooper.

Dean Ford L. Wilkinson, jr., of the Naval Postgraduate School and Mrs. Wilkinson left Annapolis on Wednesday for Terre Haute, Ind., where Dean Wilkinson will take over the presidency of Rose Polytechnic School. The numerous farewell parties honoring the Wilkinsons have added greatly to the gaiety of the pre-holiday season here. On December 10, the joint civilian and Navy staff of the Postgraduate School were hosts at dinner at the North Severn Officers' Club, entertaining over 100 faculty members and wives, in honor of the popular couple. Prof. Allen E. Vivell, acting as toastmaster, presented the Wilkinsons with a silver Paul Revere bowl.

PRECEDING this dinner, Senior Prof. and Mrs. Paul J. Kiefer entertained at cocktails for the Wilkinsons at their Ferry Farm home. Guests of the Kiefers on this occasion were the administrative and curricular officers and the chairmen of the academic department of the school and their ladies.

Vice Admiral H. T. W. Grant, chief of staff of the Royal Canadian Navy, paid an official visit to the Naval Academy last Saturday morning, accompanied by Mrs. Grant and a party of Canadian and U. S. naval officers. A 15-gun salute touched off full military honors, including flourishes by the Marine Guard of Honor and the Naval Academy band. The party witnessed the midshipmen's noon meal formation in Bancroft Hall, and attended a luncheon in the superintendent's quarters as guests of Admiral and Mrs. James L. Holloway, jr.

Capt. S. K. Groseclose, USN (ret.) and Mrs. Groseclose entertained at cocktails Saturday evening, from 5 to 7 o'clock, at their home at Oak Point.

MRS. ELVIN C. OGLE, wife of Commander Ogle, of the executive department at the Naval Academy, received the midshipmen of the first, second and third classes and their guests at the regimental hop held Saturday night in Dahlgren Hall, the Naval Academy Armory. An "informal" also was held in the afternoon, from 4:30 to 6:15 o'clock, in Smoke Hall, for midshipmen of the three upper classes and their "drags."

A contest on Christmas decorations was featured at the meeting of the Naval Academy Garden Club, held at 3 p. m., on Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. Frank T. Ward, 14 Porter Road, Naval Academy. Four classes of decorations were judged, including sprays of swags, wreaths, medium sized table arrangements and Christmas packages.

Sunday afternoon was a gala one for the children of members of the Child Study Group of the Naval Academy Women's Club, because at 3:30 o'clock they were guests at a Christmas party at the Academy Nursery School. Mrs. Hawley C. Waterman, Mrs. Vining A. Sheman and Mrs. D. Kirvin were in charge of plans for the party. Mrs. Carter L. Wilson is chairman of the group.

AN ENGAGEMENT of great interest to Annapolis and naval society is that of Miss Julia Irene Leahy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew T. Leahy of Detroit, Mich., to Lieut. (j.g.) Donald Floyd Baumgartner, SC, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd H. Baumgartner of Pine Island, Minn.

Lieut. Baumgartner is disbursing officer at the Naval Academy and will bring his bride here to live after a February wedding in Detroit.

HOLIDAY time is dancing time for the young set. Especially so for the service juniors. Shown above (left to right) Ray Phillips, Miss Joan Phillips and James Moore pick out their favorite dance tunes for the Christmas party at Fort Myer on December 28. The Woman's Club of Fort Myer is sponsoring the formal dance and youngsters from all services are invited. Chaperons for the evening will be Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Cortland V. R. Schuyler, Col. and Mrs. James V. Cole and Capt. and Mrs. W. K. Konze

A SURPRISE bridal shower was given Tuesday night by Mrs. Samuel Ayers at her home, 2210 West Lanvale st., Baltimore, in honor of Miss Marguerite Cadell of Cedar Park, whose marriage to Howard C. Durm, jr., will take place January 16.

Announcement has been made of the marriage on Saturday of Miss Mary Imogene Powell, daughter of Mrs. H. T. Nave, and the late Eustace C. Powell of Stafford County, Va., to John Weedon Smith, son of John H. Smith and the late Mrs. Smith of this city.

THE CEREMONY was performed by the Rev. E. W. Hall in the Eastport Methodist Church and was followed by a reception given by the bridegroom's two sisters, Miss Ruth Spriggs and Mrs. Clarence R. Moreland, at the Moreland home at 104 Charles st., Annapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Burwell, Mrs. Ridgely P. Melvin and Miss Helen Cheston have returned from a month's motor trip to California, where they visited many relatives and friends. They held a reunion in Evanston, Ill., with Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Burwell, jr., and in San Diego, Calif., were guests of Mrs. Melvin's son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. John B. Melvin, USMC, and Mrs. Melvin. In Houston, Tex., they enjoyed a stay with Mr. and Mrs. John M. Wells, former residents of Annapolis.

Holiday Homecoming

the Blands at their native habitat in the Old Dominion State. It's still undecided on the Sundstrom front, but chances are that Christmas Day will find them cutting fruit cake in their New Jersey home. They'll be back around December 28 to close out their Capital apartment and say adieu to their friends at the final session of the Eightieth Congress that week. Talented Mrs. Sundstrom has chairmanned the Congressional Club's famous art shows the past two years.

BEFORE DETAILING some of the foreign tours let's roll call some of the stay-in-Washington-for-Christmas couples. On the list you'll find Tennessee's Senator-elect and Mrs. Estes Kefauver, the Volunteer State's Representative and Mrs. Clifford Davis, Representative and Mrs. John L. McMillan of South Carolina. "Johnny Mac" has been in the Palmetto State for several days but is due here Monday to beat the drums for his only son, 6-year-old Johnny.

DESPITE election upsets and raging civil wars in dozens of countries, popular "Molly" and "Katie" Malone managed to get in that around-the-world trip they had promised themselves for years. Already they have seen Hawaii, Guam, Japan and the mandated islands in the Pacific. Somehow, they even managed to get into war-ravaged China.

KATIE MALONE solved the clothes problem of varied climates by shipping coats to freezing points and summer frocks to tropical countries. Just what they saw will be revealed after their return here around January 7.

IF YOU DON'T receive seasons greeting from Mrs. Homer Ferguson, there's a very good reason. One of those terrifying viruses hit her before she could do the last-minute Christmas shopping. Now recuperating in George Washington University Hospital, she hopes to get out in time to fly to Michigan with the Senator for a quiet family holiday.

LAST FALL Representative and Mrs. John C. Kunkel of Pennsylvania donated a really workable television set to the Congressional Club. Come presidential inaugural day club members and their friends who don't hold ringside seats will watch the proceedings over the screen. There'll be a buffet luncheon plus plenty of friendly chit-chat at 2001 New Hampshire ave. between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m.

SEVERAL recipes in the soon-to-be-released Congressional Club Cook Book are causing a slight national disturbance. When Mrs. Lawrence H. Smith, cookbook chairman, appeared on a New York radio program, she gave Mrs. Truman's recipe for "Ozark Pudding." Thousands of listeners complained that the flour proportions are wrong. The First Lady sticks to her directions and maintains they are correct. Another puzzler was an Australian recipe for "Stuffed Monkey." An enterprising out-of-town reporter telephoned the Australian Embassy to find out how the natives go about catching monkeys and stuffing them. Indignantly an embassy spokesman informed the scribe, "We Australians don't eat monkeys." A further check revealed that the "Stuffed Monkey" recipe is simply a formula for monkey-shaped cookies stuffed with nuts.

University Women To Hear Dr. Reissig

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, former secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will be guest speaker at the meeting of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday at the clubhouse, 1515 New Hampshire ave. nw.

His topic will be the Amsterdam World Council of Churches. Dr. Reissig was public relations officer of the World Council of Churches in Geneva, on leave of absence from the Washington Federation.

The program was arranged by the international relations group of the AAUW. of which Alida Smith is chairman.

Pen Women Slate Youth Concert

Alexandria Branch of the National League of American Pen Women has scheduled its Young Artists Concert for February 4, 8:15 p. m., at the George Washington High School auditorium. The featured soloist will be Miss Virginia Fleming, coloratura soprano, and Stewart Gordon, pianist.

Proceeds of the concert will be used as prize money for the art, prose, poetry and music contests which the Pen Women are sponsoring for children of Alexandria, Fairfax and Arlington.

Theme of the contest entries must pertain to Alexandria's bicentennial celebration which will last throughout 1949.

Mrs. C. D. Herron Elected Garden Club President

Mrs. Charles D. Herron was elected president of the Bethesda Community Garden Club at a meeting Tuesday.

The other new officers include Mrs. Frederic P. Lee, vice president; Mrs. Robert Page, recording secretary; Mrs. Frank A. Bennett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Reginald Alexander, treasurer, and Mrs. Constantine Eisinger, publicity chairman.

Mrs. A. H. Bowis, Mrs. Paul E. Ferrero, Mrs. A. R. Golze, Mrs. Robert Gutheim and Mrs. L. Welch Pogue were chosen for the board of directors.

St. Mary's Mothers Plan Turkey Raffle

The newly organized Mothers' Club of St. Mary's School will raise funds for the school library by holding a turkey raffle at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday, December 21, at the school, 5th and G sts. nw.

Regular meetings of the club will be held the fourth Friday of each month at the school. Officers of the club, organized to develop better relations between the school and homes and to promote school projects, are Mrs. William Brown, president; Mrs. John Matvey, vice president; Mrs. Norman McDonald, secretary, and Mrs. Frank Tucci, treasurer.

Members of a ways and means committee, which will plan the year's programs, are Mrs. Thomas J. Williams, chairman; Mrs. Herman F. Schaden, assistant chairman, and Mrs. Helen Tomak.

Mrs. Charles F. Brannan to Lead Women in Heart Fund Drive

Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, has accepted the chairmanship of the women's division of the Washington Heart Association's 1949 fund raising campaign. Serving with Mrs. Brannan as vice chairmen are Mrs. India Edwards, executive director of the women's division of the National Democratic Party, and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley.

The appointments were announced today by John H. Wilkins, jr., general chairman of the campaign. Headquarters for the campaign are located in the Woodward Building at 15th and H sts., nw.

"Women are especially responsive to any work that will help children," Mrs. Brannan said, expressing confidence in receiving the support of Washington women in the Heart Association's 1949 fund-raising campaign.

"Heart disease takes an astonishing number of children's lives each year," Mrs. Brannan explained, "and the only way we can protect our children from these diseases is to provide adequate research programs and adequate facilities for the doctors who treat the children stricken with rheumatic fever and other diseases."

Mrs. Brannan has been an active worker in Washington welfare and civic circles for some time. She is a well-known public speaker and is a member of the speakers' bureau of the Democratic National Committee.

Mrs. Edwards has been connected with the women's division of the Democratic National Party since 1942. Mrs. Lindley also has been active in Democratic circles. She served as an alternate to the Democratic National Committeewoman from the District of Columbia during the last convention, and she is currently chairman of the hospitality and housing committee of the 1949 Inaugural Committee.

Ask Anne About Clocks, Chairs, How to Clean Wallpaper, How to Make Curtains

I have an old Eli Terry clock, made about 1800, which has wooden works, and up to a few months ago has kept excellent time, but now needs some repairs. Can you tell me of anyone in this locality who specializes in this kind of work?
C. J. O.

There is a clock repair firm on 17th st. which specializes in repairing antique clocks. They have suggested that you bring the clock in for an estimate. They do not do cabinet refinishing. However, if the clock cabinet needs work done on it, they will remove the mechanism so that you can have the cabinet refinished at the same time by a trained cabinet worker. To discuss the work with them, call NOrth 4444.

How can I clean a chair upholstered with red brocaded tapestry?
J. J. L.

If the color in the chair is fast to washing, you can clean it by shampooing. Do not attempt just the seat, for when it is clean, the rest of the chair will appear soiled. To shampoo it, make a soap jelly by dissolving one cup of mild soap flakes in two cups of lukewarm water. Allow to cool and become jelled and then whip the soap into rich suds with an eggbeater. Make plenty, for you clean with only the suds. Apply the suds with a brush to a foot-square area of the chair. Rub in circles and when the suds become soiled, scrape them off and apply fresh suds. When the spot is clean, rinse thoroughly by sponging with another cloth wrung out of clear water. Be sure to rinse until the fabric is free from soap. When the first spot is clean, continue shampooing in small areas, overlapping the area being washed each time to avoid streaks. When the chair is completely washed and rinsed, set out of doors in the sun or turn an electric fan on it to dry thoroughly and quickly.

Which is the best way to wash a black rayon dress printed with white flowers? It has been cleaned several times, but the back looks yellow. What else can I do to get it clean?

If the color is fast, sometimes rayon dresses can be made to look brighter and fresher if they are washed in soap and water. Snip a piece of the dress from an inside seam and wash it to see if it fades. If it doesn't, wash it by using a mild soap and lukewarm water. You may have to wash it in two soapy waters to get it thoroughly clean, then rinse several times in clear water. Hang where it will dry quickly and when just damp press with a warm iron on the wrong side.

I am the victim of an amateur painter who has been painting her porch chairs. I sat down on a sky-blue chair 10 days ago and on putting on a navy woolen skirt I find a pattern on it, at least 50 spots. On advice of friends, I have tried turpentine and cleaning fluid without any result. Can you help me?
N. E. B.

There is a chance that these stains cannot be completely removed, but if you wish to spend some more time on them on the chance you might make the skirt usable, here are some suggestions: Rubbing the paint stains between the fingers to break the surface so that the solvent (turpentine and benzine both are good paint solvents) can more readily soften it, is sometimes helpful. With so many stains on the skirt, I would suggest you soak the entire garment in the solvent. Repeated rubbing during the soaking will probably help, too. If you find this treatment just doesn't move it, try this: Equal parts of benzine, carbon tetrachloride and banana oil (amyl acetate) make a good paint remover. Sponge the remover onto the fabric and rub in a dry-cleaning soap to help loosen the stain. Rinse with carbon tetrachloride.

I have a full-size nylon parachute which I would like to use to make curtains. Do you know where I could get information or instructions on how to make them, as I understand this can be done.
H. M. S. G.

I have not been able to find specific instructions for making curtains out of parachutes, but I see no reason why you could not follow the directions for making curtains from other materials. "Home Decorations With Fabric and Thread," by Ruth Wyeth Spears (M. Barrows & Co., Inc.) is filled with ideas and directions for making every kind of curtain.

We recently moved to a new house and found the painter splashed paint on the tile wall around the tub when he sprayed the wall above. Can you tell me how I can remove the paint from the tile? Also, how do you remove the brown stains from the tile caused from taking showers?
H. M. S. G.

Remove as much of the paint as possible by scraping with a flat blade which will not scratch the tile. When no more can be removed that way, sponge the spots with turpentine or carbon tetrachloride.

To remove the brown stains, dampen a soft cloth with vinegar, sprinkle some kitchen cleansing powder on it and rub the tile. It may take several treatments to remove the stain completely, but when it is removed if you will wash the tile each week with vinegar and kitchen cleansing powder it will not reappear.

Can you tell me the name or phone number of anyone in the Columbia rd. section who can recover bed comforts?
C. H.

There is a firm in the 3500 block of Connecticut ave. which recovers comforts. They can be reached by calling Ordway 1812.

Recently I received a gift pair of miniature figurine candles. The candles are colored and I treasure them for sentimental reasons and wonder if there is some way to treat them with varnish (colorless nail-polish) or anything to preserve the shape and color over a long period of time, regardless of weather or light.
O. M.

Dipping the candles in clear shellac will preserve them.

How can I clean fireplace bricks?
L. M.

Smoked or sooty bricks can be cleaned by scrubbing with a stiff brush and a cleaning powder or paste which contains abrasive. When clean, the bricks should be immediately rinsed with clear water to prevent the abrasive from drying on them.

Could you tell me where my husband can take a suit to be made smaller? It is much too large and as it is a very good suit, I hate to give it away. Would you have any idea of the cost of remodeling?
W. C. L.

If you will look under "Tailors" in the yellow pages of the telephone book you will find firms which do remodeling and alterations. Taking the suit to a tailor to determine just how much work needs to be done is really the only way you can find out how much the job will cost.

Could you tell me how to remove halibut liver oil stains from a white wool sweater. Since being stained, the sweater has been washed in soap and water.
C. O.

When garments stained with fish liver oils have been washed, the stains turn brown and are almost impossible to remove. However, you might try sponging the stain with carbon tetrachloride. If this doesn't remove it, you may be able to bleach it out with sodium perborate. Dampen the stain with water and sprinkle the perborate over it. Rub between the fingers and then let stand for several minutes. Rinse well with water. If the stain is lightened but not completely removed, repeat.

In one of my bedrooms I have detected two greasy spots on the wallpaper immediately behind the bedside lamps. I believe the heat from the light bulbs has caused some of the paraffin from the shades to melt and run onto the paper. Can you tell me how I might remove the spots?
C. C. C.

You may be able to remove some of the grease by placing a white blotter over the stain and pressing with a warm iron. If this doesn't remove all of it, make a poultice by mixing cornstarch and carbon tetrachloride. Be sure not to make it so wet that the liquid will run down the wall from the poultice. Place this on the stain ¼ inch thick and let stand until dry. Brush away the powder. If the stain is not completely removed, repeat.

Wreaths, a bell, and a Christmas greeting decorate this entranceway

To Friends and Passers-By—

Let Your House Say 'Merry Christmas'

LET YOUR house wish the neighbors a "Merry Christmas" as they go driving by or drop in to call. Evergreens, twinkling lights, and a little imagination can turn the entrance into a lighted greeting card shining with a message of "good will toward men."

Words of greeting, cut from plywood or heavy cardboard, were placed over the doorway above. They are silhouetted against a background of Christmas greens, with a few lights concealed among them. Evergreens and Christmas tree lights hang at each side of the door, which bears a Christmas wreath and bells. The whole entrance is spotlighted by a projector spot concealed in nearby shrubbery.

Here are a few other ideas for bringing the Christmas spirit to your home's exterior:

TYING UP THE HOUSE like a Christmas gift is attractive if yours is a new white dwelling. Use wide streamers of bright red oil cloth. Tack one across the front of your house vertically, and another horizontally, and fasten a big bow of the same material where they cross. Fasten a giant red, white, and green tag inscribed "From Santa" just beneath the bow. Two floodlights in the shrubbery will bathe the "package" with light at night. If you want to change its color, use color lense on the waterproof floodlights.

BANDS OF BRIGHT RIBBON tacked diagonally across the door of your house can turn it into a Christmas package if you wish to concentrate on the entranceway. You can use as many as six slanting strips of ribbon across the door, with a big bow on one of them.

A TREE ON THE ROOF is attractive if you have a low slanting roof over the entrance. Use a live Christmas tree, complete with trimmings and lights. A nice touch are gift boxes with diffusing plastic tops beneath the tree. These can be mounted on a wide board, with a colored lamp inside each, and the tree mounted in the center of the board. The board can then be fastened to the roof. You'll want the tree mounted at a slant, of course, so it will stand up straight on the slanting roof.

SMALL CIRCULAR WINDOWS, if there are such on the front of your house, can be transformed into charming miniature lighted windows with very little effort. Wreathe the window with evergreens, intertwined with colored lights. In the center, create a "picture" by painting a scene of the three wise men on a translucent background of cheesecloth and hanging it just inside the window. To light this tiny picture and make the sky luminous, attach a 40-watt blue bulb in an extension cord and socket to the inside of the window sill.

A CHRISTMAS WREATH around your whole front door isn't a bad idea either. You can frame it in the middle of a giant circle of evergreens, fashioned with a sturdy wire frame covered with several layers of evergreen rope. The wreath can end at the bottom of the door or extend along under the doorsill if there's space. Dot the wreath with "berries" of bright red bulbs (10 or 25-watt) and top off the whole arrangement with a jaunty red oilcloth bow.

High Costs, Financing Forcing Many Builders To Postpone Projects

By Conrad P. Harness

AN increasing number of local builders have indicated they are withdrawing from the building market until better home financing and lower building costs are available.

A survey of 25 builders this week revealed that still rising construction costs and a lack of buyers with necessary cash down payments have put builders in the middle of an economic squeeze.

Several said they would finish up homes now under construction and wait and see what next Spring holds in store for them. Others, however, said they would continue building at the current high pace. Some will switch to apartment construction during the winter months.

Frank A. Simon of Devereux & Simon, Bethesda builders, summed it up this way: "We've finished building for the time being. There's not enough margin of profit for the risk involved. We've let all our building crew go except the construction superintendent."

No Drop Seen in Building Costs

SIMON'S firm has been erecting large two-story brick homes in the Bradley blvd. area of Bethesda, Md., selling around $20,000. Construction costs show no signs of dropping, he said, and he predicted a shortage of good homes in the $18,000 to $20,000 range. With financing as difficult as it is, the public doesn't have the cash to buy the type of home erected by the firm, he added.

The lack of building plans for winter and next Spring appeared to be much greater than usually caused by seasonal declines. The firm of R. C. Lewis, developers of Lewisdale between Silver Spring and College Park, Md., said it would finish up three or four more homes before winter conditions slow construction. "We'll wait and see what develops next Spring before we know our building plans. However, there may be plenty of building activity at Lewisdale in the Spring," an office spokesman said. Mr. Lewis, a combination builder-realtor, has developed hundreds of homes in the Lewisdale area.

George Phifer, Jr., sales manager for Paul P. Stone Co., said the firm would finish up about 12 homes under way in Hillcrest Gardens, Md., and then "mark time to see what the new Congress will do to liberalize home financing." Mortgage money is still the chief problem, he added. Lack of skilled labor has vanished, with scores of bricklayers looking for work, he declared.

The office of David Milestone, large scale developer of homes in Silver Spring and Bethesda, reported the firm planned to sell its existing homes before starting any new residences.

Plenty of Winter Projects

SEVERAL builders, on the other hand, reported they were ready to begin a score of projects. Morris Cafritz, millionaire builder and realtor, said ground will be broken soon for the first 90 units in his proposed 631-unit Galveston Terrace Apartments, on a 24-acre tract bounded by Galveston st., Nicholas ave. and 1st st. sw.

The rental units will be across the street from Cafritz's newly completed 221-unit Upland Terrace project. All buildings will be three story walk-ups, with the first section of 90 being erected under insured mortgage terms of the Federal Housing Administration "608" section of the National Housing Act. The completed project is expected to cost nearly five million dollars at $7500 a unit, according to Leroy Werner, architect for the Cafritz organization.

Gerald Luria, of Luria Bros., Inc., said his firm would erect 35 homes next Spring in the Garden City area of Arlington, off Lee hwy. and Florida ave. The proposed homes will be modern three-bedroom bungalows. Luria will finish up 12 homes this winter in his Berkshire project in North Arlington. He and his brother have built 64 homes there so far.

Raleigh Daniels, of Standard Properties, Inc., said his firm was "winterizing" its operations at the large Eastpines subdivision in East Riverdale, Md. Curbs and gravel are being placed to control mud in the roads. All homes under construction will be closed up on the exterior so workmen can finish interiors in comfort. Around 63 homes are still under way, he said. Small stoves will help keep workmen warm in unfinished homes. The finished residence will sell for around $10,000.

M. Pomponio & Sons, Inc., Arlington builders, will start on a 294-unit apartment adjacent to the Parkwood Apartments, near Bailey's Cross Roads in Fairfax County, Va. The firm is also building a 108-unit apartment at Columbia Pike and Greenbrier st., Arlington, which they will continue through the winter months. They will also continue building operations on 12 homes in Tuckahoe Village, at Lee hwy. between Illinois and Lexington sts., Arlington.

Big Demand for Ramblers

EDWARD R. Carr, builder-realtor, plans to build 150 new brick, semi-detached houses to sell for around $10,000 on a tract of land near Texas ave. and Ridge rd., se. Construction will continue through the winter, said Carr.

Ground will be broken immediately for 42 ramblers in Chevy Chase Manor, Md., off Western ave., by Camalier & Crosby. Another 43 will be started in April, the company reported, plus another seven ramblers to be custom-built in the Congressional Club area. Still pending are plans for another 100 homes on a separate tract in nearby Maryland.

J. B. Tiffey, builder, is starting eight more two-family homes in the 4400 block of 2nd st. ne., and plans to continue building through the winter. He is just finishing up 14 similar two-family

Architect's drawing shows the proposed 16-story, 110-foot high automatic parking building planned by Arthur G. Dezendorf for a small lot at 1322 G st. nw. High speed automatic elevators would carry cars to the desired floor and park them automatically. Eight cars would be parked on each of the floors, for a 128-car capacity. Project is out of the planning stage and construction awaits an okay from District authorities. Dezendorf hopes approval will come soon because construction and equipment costs are rising each month, he said. Patrons would pay about the same as present parking lot charges, he added

Engineering Building Up 75 Pct.

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Engineering construction contracts awarded this week totaled $146,187,000, a gain of 75 per cent from the preceding week, Engineering News-Record reported.

The total is 10 per cent below the previous four-week moving average.

The engineering construction weekly said the cumulative total of awards so far this year is $6,968,052,000, an increase of 25 per cent over the like total of 1947.

Prefab Award Brings Navy Mixed Praise

THE NAVY was both praised and censured last week for its recent award of a contract to the Lustron Corp. for erection of 60 all-steel prefabs to house Naval personnel at Quantico, Va.

Harry H. Steidle, manager, Prefabricated Home Manufacturers' Institute, in a letter to Rear Adm. John J. Manning, chief, Bureau of Yards and Docks, said his organization "was highly gratified at the low bids submitted in connection with the project, but were very much disturbed as to the manner in which this award was made."

Based on Square Foot Cost

At the time of the contract award on December 4, the Navy Department said Lustron's bid of $599,379 was not the lowest submitted on a dollar valuation, but was awarded on the basis of lowest cost per square foot of usable space.

Steidle wrote Admiral Manning that other bidders were unaware that the bids would be judged on a per square foot basis. "Each of the four low bidders informed me that they could have furnished large houses in the range of 1080 square feet at a lower square foot price than the Lustron Corp., but were not afforded this opportunity," he said.

He emphasized, however, that his group was highly gratified at the Navy Department's interest in the use of factory fabricated homes and "we do not intend to do anything to delay this project. We are further interested in helping the armed services to procure the best houses obtainable for the money they have to spend."

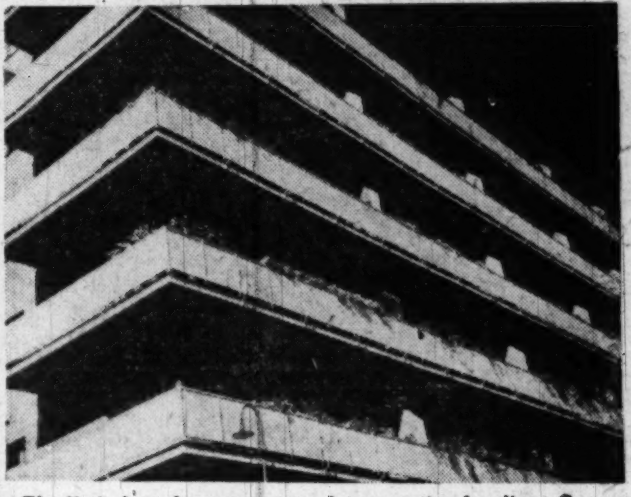
Lowest bid on a dollar basis was submitted by Home Building Corp. of Sedalia, Mo., at $499,540, followed by John A. Johnson & Son, Inc., of Brooklyn, N. Y., $508,000, and Green Lumber Co., Laurel, Miss., at $512,000.

Steidle recommended that in the future the Navy Department issue "straightforward specifications that embrace all requirements for sturdy, comfortable homes that will encourage a maximum number of contractors to bid with the full assurance that the award will go to the lowest bidder."

57 Brick Bungalows Planned for Wheaton

Plans for erection of 57 brick bungalows in the "Weisman" area of Wheaton, Md., were disclosed last week with the filing of a permit application by Ridgewood Development Corp. Ronald S. Senseman is the architect. Homes will not have basements.

Realtors to Ask U. S. Aid for Cooperatives



The Nation's realtors are expected to campaign for direct Government aid to cooperative groups who wish to build their own homes or apartment projects. The National Association of Real Estate Boards says that the United States could take a few housing tips from Sweden, where co-op groups have erected such apartments as this 472-unit structure in Stockholm. If we built cooperative homes on the Swedish scale, says NAREB, it would amount to 250,000 units per year

THE Nation's organized realtors will ask the Eighty-first Congress to pass legislation giving financial aid to groups wishing to build homes under a cooperative plan.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards termed the co-op plan as "the only road to home ownership for millions of American families."

Prior to the upset in the national election, NAREB had been cool to any Federal participation in housing schemes, particularly that of Federal subsidization of public housing.

The about-face indicates that NAREB's 45,000 realtors will use the cooperative plan as their last line of defense in a prolonged fight against any public housing measure which may be introduced before the Eighty-first Congress.

The association's stand was disclosed this week by Herbert U. Nelson, NAREB executive secretary, on Mutual Broadcasting System's "American Forum of the Air," moderated by Theodore Granik.

Against Public Housing

NELSON, together with Senator-elect Hubert H. Humphreys of Minnesota, discussed "How Can We Get More Housing?" Both agreed a modified version of the Swedish cooperative type of housing project should be adopted to solve America's housing problem.

Humphreys advocated an amendment to the proposed Taft-Ellender-Wagner Act to provide for strengthening of secondary mortgage provisions and to provide direct loans by the Federal Government to cooperative projects.

Nelson said his association is in favor of long range, low-term loans by the Federal Government for cooperative housing projects only.

In a discussion of cooperatives versus public housing, Nelson said the merit of the Swedish system is that it leads to home ownership. The occupants do not become permanent wards of the government, which he termed one of the handicaps of public housing.

The realtor predicted that with aid from Federal loans, self-sustaining cooperatives could rent apartments at $45 per month. He said he personally was in favor of direct Federal loans to cooperative associations where home ownership would be preserved and assured Humphreys that the matter

Gardens for Rent in Florida

Winter Garden, Fla., Dec. 18 (AP).—M. O. Bacon figures that if people can rent out food lockers, autos, sewing machines and such, he can do the same with gardens.

So the 48-year-old retired but energetic industrial engineer is just completing construction on six 100-foot concrete beds to be used for hydroponic gardening, a soilless way of growing vegetables that is gaining popularity even in Florida where so much lush land is suited to truck farming.

"One man can take care of a 12-bed farm single-handed if he applies himself and it should provide him a good living," Bacon said. In Florida three crops a year can be grown.

homes. His firm has erected 350 homes in the Northeast area, all of two-family floor plans. Present homes sell for around $18,950, with $5000 cash down payments.

Carlton Construction Co., Lustron home distributors, said they expected to have 300 of the all-steel prefabricated homes erected in this area by June 30. Their present schedule calls for the first home to be completed by January 1 in Prince Georges County, Md.

Savannah Gardens Co., Silver Spring builders, said they have used up all available ground in Forest Estates, Md., and would finish up existing homes before making other plans. "However," a spokesman said, "we may build some place else next spring."

Hope to See Drop in Sub-Bids

H. J. Korzendorfer Co., Inc.: "We're figuring bids on five custom-built luxury homes, costing from $30,000 up. We will continue at least three homes after the first of the year if the price situation looks right. If construction costs are more than the house will bring, then there's no use building. We're hoping for a small decline in sub-bids."

R. H. Best: "We will sell the homes we've finished before building again. Prices of building materials are still up. We have land near Suburban Hospital in Bethesda that we would like to develop if possible. We'll have to wait and see."

Earl J. Preston: "We plan to complete streets in our Glenmont Forest subdivision in nearby Maryland at the present time. There are now about 270 homes erected there. Some have been held up because of lack of utilities, but the county will be putting those in shortly.

"We have another project of 350 homes in mind for Spring to be built in the Wheaton area, but construction will depend on weather conditions, financing and sales."

Merchandising, Financing Seen Holding Back Prefabs

New York, Dec. 18.—The prefab industry's real bottleneck in the current sales picture is marketing and not production, Business Week reports.

"This year, some 40,000 prefabricated dwellings will be erected—only about 5 per cent of 1948's 800,000 detached houses," the article states. "If it weren't for that bottleneck the prefab builders could turn out three times the 40,000."

Even the most successful prefabbers have had to throttle production to fit sales. The drawback is not consumer acceptance but inability to get the houses, it added.

"Half the problem is to contact reliable, responsible, well-heeled local distributors and dealers," the article points out. "The other half is financing—which has been plaguing dealers both in making sales and in carrying the houses through the erection period.

"High company mortality has been characteristic of the prefab business through the years. Inadequate financing has perhaps killed off more companies than anything else. But merchandising trouble follows close behind.

"Many well-heeled companies have given up prefabbing because they could make better profits with fewer headaches in other lines," the article said.

U. S. Sponge Output Drops

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 18 (AP).—Disease and poor conservation methods have put the squeeze on the sponge industry.

Marine biologists of the University of Miami suggest three methods of combating shortages of the porous sea creatures, which serve us in a variety of ways from washing automobiles to keeping surgical wounds free of blood.

These methods are:

1. More rigid control of sponge-gathering in the beds off Florida—now our sole domestic source of sponges.

2. Exploration of new areas as possible sponge grounds. They suggest the water between Florida and Mobile, Ala.; those off the north and west coasts of Yucatan, and those off the east coast of Nicaragua and Honduras.

3. Investigation of the possibilities of artificial culture of sponges in the Florida Keys.

The annual production of sponges at Tarpon Springs, Fla., dropped from a peak of 285,852 bunches in 1922 to 18,566 bunches in 1947, a loss of 15 million dollars at present prices.

Aid for Co-ops To Be Asked By Realtors

would be fully discussed by the housing industry.

Asked by Humphreys if he would support the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, Nelson replied, "No, because I have seen nothing in the bill that will produce one single additional house."

Nelson brought cheers from the studio audience, mainly mayors attending a meeting of the American Municipal Association, when he said the number of employes in Federal housing agencies outnumbered the 45,000 realtors in the United States.

"Pretty soon," Nelson commented, "we'll have one Federal employe for everybody that has anything to do with housing. I think one way to stifle the production of housing is to multiply the agencies."

Asked by Hugh Wasson, Mayor of Chattanooga, Tenn., to tell how the average man can own his own home without some form of Government aid, Nelson replied that the Federal Reserve Board report for 1947 shows that the average sales price of the home bought in the United States was $7000. "Prices are not so high as some people are led to believe," he added.

Humphreys told Henry Ford, jr., Mayor of Kalamazoo, Mich., that he advocated a rural housing program to include both public and cooperative housing. Ford had asked whether the people of small towns and rural areas should be required through Federal taxation to pay for Federal housing in big cities.

Proper Humidity Is Necessary for Maximum Comfort

A house can have a 70-degree inside temperature and yet be uncomfortably chilly in winter. This is because the air lacks moisture, is difficult to heat and the tendency is to push the thermostat up to a fuel-wasting 80 degrees.

The remedy is to hang behind each radiator a water pan or humidifier made for this purpose, or to place on the radiator a cover containing a built-in water pan, and keep the pan always filled. With a warm air furnace, the water reservoir should be checked often to see that it is full. When proper humidity is maintained, rooms will be comfortable at 70 degrees or less and fuel will be saved.

More comfort is added if the house is insulated full-thick with mineral wool, since this prevents drafts created by warm air flowing to cold walls. A properly insulated wall is warmed to within two or three degrees of the room's temperature.

Project Plans Call for 800 Apartments

Plans are expected to be completed next March for early erection of an 800-unit apartment building on the site of the former Villa Rosa estate in the 4200 block of Massachusetts ave. nw., according to Corning & Moore, architects.

Owner and builder of the project is Standard Construction Co., which has erected several large garden-type rental properties in the Washington area. The proposed structure will rise eight stories on the Massachusetts ave. side and 11 stories in the rear.

It will be financed with an FHA-insured $6,761,000 mortgage advanced by the Irving Trust Co. of New York. With the Government backing 90 per cent of the estimated cost, the project will run around eight million dollars, sponsors report.

Off-street parking for 270 cars will be provided by basement parking levels. Apartments will range in size from efficiency units to two-bedroom, two-bath units, the site plan disclosed.

The five-acre site was formerly occupied by the Villa Rosa estate of the late Representative Henry St. George Tucker (D., Va.). The tract was purchased by its present owner about two years ago from Samuel Eig, Silver Spring builder and businessman, who bought it from Defense Homes Corporation in 1943.

Pigeons Left Heavy Calling Card

Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 18 (AP)—Maybe the lighted, rotating cross attracted the pigeons.

Anyway, they like the unusual tower atop the Pine Street Methodist Church in Williamsport, Pa. They stayed long enough to deposit a layer of manure 9 to 12 inches thick on the tower floor at the base of the revolving cross.

When a steeplejack was repairing the church tower, he found 2 tons of pigeon manure which filled 100 bags weighing more than 100 pounds each.

Repairs already costing more than $1500 have been made, and the job won't be complete until a fine wire mesh screen is placed over the slats in the tower windows to keep out the pigeons.

Arnold A. Phipps, chairman of the church building committee, estimated that the pigeons had been roosting in the 185-foot tower approximately 20 years since it was last cleaned and repaired.

Builder Shift To Low-Cost Jobs Forecast

CHICAGO, ILL., Dec. 18.—The Nation's home builders, having skimmed the frosting off the housing cake, will turn to construction of low-cost homes during 1949, predicts Practical Builder magazine.

A forecast of 1949 housing activities, including legislation, was carried by the authoritative trade journal in its current issue. Highlights:

Rent control will be extended past the March 31, 1949, deadline.

More mortgage money will become available to finance purchase and construction of homes.

Congress will pass legislation calling for construction of public housing units.

Rent ceilings on new apartments are considered unlikely since such action would kill off that type of badly needed construction.

Mortgage interest rates are expected to stay at present levels, with the exception of GI loans, which are expected to be raised by Government action to 4½ per cent instead of the current 4 per cent.

Added policing by the Office of the Housing Expediter to enforce existing building regulations requiring builders to give veterans first preference to buy or rent new housing units.

The article further predicted that housing volume in 1949 will exceed that of 1948. "Housing is very much in Mr. Truman's mind," it commented.

The emphasis on lower-priced homes, it was said, will be evident early next year since scores of builders were working on low-cost home plans even before the election.

If Congress should provide further financing aids to builders, it was predicted, such legislation would undoubtedly call for channeling home building into the lower income price brackets.

"This might materially change the character of the home building from what we have seen so far," the article continued. "In any case, builders everywhere are getting ready to shift to low-cost homes."

12-Unit Apartment

Max Goldstein, owner, plans to let contracts for a 12-unit apartment to be built at 39 O st. sw. Earl Von Reichenbach is designer; Ray E. Roberts is reported to be the builder. The brick building will be three stories high.

Product Previews

THE telephone party line can now take to the air with this new "citizens radio station" which includes high frequency receiver and transmitter. Developed by the Citizens Radio Corp. of Cleveland, the equipment weighs only 11 ounces and has a range up to several miles, sponsors say, using subminiature radio tubes. Producers predict the sets will be used by the public between homes, autos, offices, plants and other person-to-person radio calls. The manufacturers said they have received the first FCC-type approval for such equipment to be used on the 465 megacycle band allocated for civilian use. The set is one fourth the size of the wartime walkie-talkie. A tiny headphone and batteries are carried in a separate case about the size of a miniature camera.

Television lovers no longer need be chained to any one room. Sentinel Radio Corp. of Evanston, Ill., has come up with this portable video set, with an efficient antenna which could be one answer to present high installation costs of some television sets. The antenna can be placed on the set, hung on the wall or placed where reception is best. Set works off regular 110 AC current, has regular 12 channels. Its 26 square inch screen is half the size of most sets. The case is of handsome luggage-style leather grain. Not yet in mass production.

A toothbrush that works like a fountain pen has been marketed by the Holiday Mfg. Co. of Grand Island, Nebr. Called "Dr. Walker's Fountain Toothbrush," powder or tooth paste is inserted in the hollow handle and a plunger feeds the dentrifice onto the bristles. There's no cap to fall down the drain, no worry about tube squeezers in the family. The handle will hold enough dentrifice for 30 brushings. Available locally.

One of the biggest bugaboos in ironing are sleeves—long, short, puffed and cuffed. How do you iron a sleeve without that maddening crease, without wrinkling the front while pressing the back?

The General Electric Consumers Institute comes up with a simple answer. Use a sleeve pad, which you can make yourself in a few minutes from ordinary table felt.

Simply sew together three or four layers of felt, the dimensions depending upon the various sleeve sizes and styles in your family's wardrobe. A good general purpose pad is 8 inches wide at the top, tapering toward the cuff, and 4 inches longer than the sleeve length.

Fit a washable, removable muslin case over the pad, and your sleeve and shoulder ironing problem is solved. Simply insert in the sleeve, place all the way on the ironer and iron.

Red Cross Unit Bids

Plans have been completed and bids will be asked in about two weeks on construction of a proposed American Red Cross chapter house at Trenton st. and Lee blvd., Arlington. The structure will be two stories, no basement, of brick, cinder block and stucco construction. Kenton D. Hamaker is the architect.

Virginia Realty Board Installs New Officers

George C. Keeler, Alexandria broker, was installed last night as president of the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax real estate board, succeeding William Hoge, 3d, of Arlington. The occasion was the annual Christmas party and officer installation at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

Others installed included Charles L. Hanowell, vice president; Ashton C. Jones, jr., second vice president; Frank Clark, secretary, and Talmage Wilcher, treasurer. The executive committee is composed of Col. Clyde Eastman, Carroll Wright, Henry Kirk and Hoge.

Over 300 persons attended the gala party. Several distinguished guests played second fiddle to Santa Claus, depicted by Talmage Wilcher. Cocktails, dancing and dinner were enjoyed by guests and members.

The invitation list included Representative and Mrs. Victor Wickersham; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Dugan, Mrs. Florence Cannon, Basil Delashmutt, all of the Arlington County Board of Commissioners; Mayor W. T. Wilkins and City Manager Nicholas Colasanto of Alexandria and their wives, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Pancoast.

Mrs. M. T. Broyhill was in charge of party arrangements, Lee Potter was master of ceremonies.

Work Started On 65,000 Homes During November

A total of 65,000 new homes were started in November, a slight seasonal decline, the Bureau of Labor Statistics has reported.

The number was 7000 less than in October. It was 14,700 units under the November, 1947, total. However, aside from the 1947 record, it was a nine-year high for November.

The November total brought the number for the first 11 months of 1948 to 867,500 units of nonfarm dwellings. That was 10 per cent above the first 11 months of 1947.

Large gains were shown in Birmingham and New Orleans.

Senator McGrath Buys Home Here; 65-Acre Tract Sold

A $500,000 land transaction and purchase of a large Northwest home by a leading politician figured in this week's real estate transactions.

Dreisen-Freedman, Inc., sold 65 acres of land in the former McCormick-Goodhart estate, between Silver Spring and College Park, Md., to Standard Construction Co. The latter will build 1500 garden-type apartment units on the site, which fronts on New Hampshire ave. and University lane, in Prince Georges County.

County Commissioners have rezoned 10 acres of the tract for commercial development.

The other sale was the purchase of a large 3-story English-style home at 5100 39th st. nw., by Senator J. Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The former owner was John R. Turney, attorney, and the sale was made by Arlie L. Johnson, broker.

Senator McGrath and his family moved into their new home this week. The 5-bedroom, 3-bath home has been completely redecorated and the kitchen remodeled. The floor plan includes an office finished in solid walnut.

Seek Malaya Aluminum

Singapore (AP).—Malaya's bauxite mines, idle since 1945, soon may be in operation again. Dr. O. C. Schmedeman, chief geologist of Reynolds Metals Co., recently investigated mining prospects for the metal from which aluminum is produced.

The Japanese began mining bauxite in Malaya in 1936. Four mines were opened. They operated for nine years, yielding several hundred thousand tons of ore.

Competition To Stiffen, Firm Warns

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Johns-Manville Corp. has warned its dealers, jobbers and salesmen that a period of stiff competition in the building field is approaching.

R. W. Lea, Johns-Manville president, said this condition is developing as production continues to make more and more goods available.

He spoke at a meeting of 400 company representatives from New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Vice President H. R. Berlin predicted there would be "definite limits to any prospective price decline as purchases are adjusted to income." He said labor costs, raw material costs and freight rate increases were among the factors "tending to support prices."

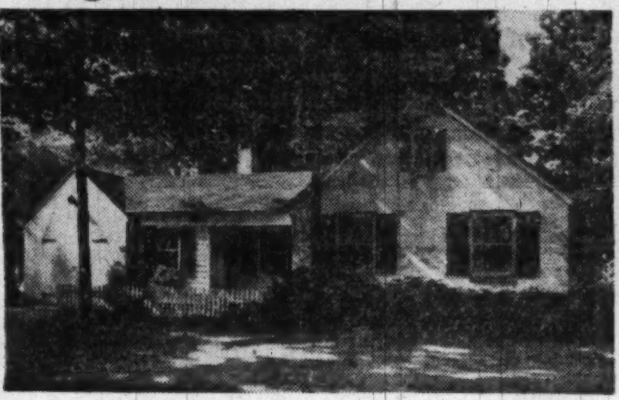
"There appears a bright outlook for steel, automobiles, building construction and durable goods," Berlin said.

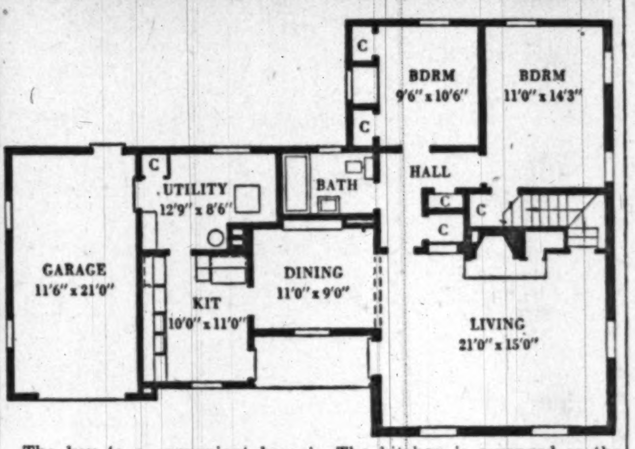
"Especially important in the long term outlook is the prospect of a population mounting to 155 million by 1950, high wages, capital purchases running for several years, reasonable foreign trade possibilities and the Marshall Plan."

Larger Garage Required Today

Today's automobiles are too large for many prewar garages, since the cars approach 20 feet in length and 7 feet in width. The difficulty often can be overcome by building a low bay about 4 feet deep and 5 feet high across the rear of the garage so that the car's hood can extend into this space.

Designed for Conveniences





The key to a convenient home is the floor plan. This one features a large, light living room. The entrance door is well protected from rain and wind. The living room has three-way ventilation and two walls available for furniture arrangement.

The kitchen is arranged so the range, refrigerator and sink all have work space next to them, and the two inside walls are lined with cupboards.

Two corner bedrooms, placed on the back of the lot, are quiet at all times. Hallway, closets and fireplace help keep social noise in the living room.

A big utility room contains heating plant, water heater, broom closet, and wall space for laundry equipment.

The partial second floor can be used as a guest room or as storage space for luggage, boxes and odds and ends. This house has no basement, but doesn't need one. The plan provides a well proportioned house replete with authentic Colonial details. (Better Homes & Gardens, No. 1812.)

Czechs Study Ancient Site

Prague, Dec. 18 (AP) —Czechoslovak scientists have begun an attempt to evaluate the diggings at Stara Kourim, about 38 miles east of Prague, where fortifications that may date back to the Neolithic period have been uncovered. The diggings were on an area about 100 acres.

The excavators found a fortification of three earthworks in the form of circles, surrounded by deep ditches which had been filled with water. Stone walls were built along the earthworks.

Earthenware, stone, bronze and iron tools of several prehistoric periods were found, it was reported by Dr. Jaroslav Bohm, director of the state Archeological Institute. The findings indicated that people of the Neolithic Age lived in the fortifications 3000 years before Christ. Evidence was found that people of the Lusatian Serb culture lived there between the thirteenth and ninth centuries before Christ, and that the Gauls had been there after the fourth century before Christ.

Magazine Features Post Home

One of the outstanding homes in the recent "Homes of '48" exhibition is the subject of a picture-story in the January Better Homes and Gardens magazine. Built by Sydney Weinberg & Sons from a Better Homes and Garden floor plan, the residence is located in Columbia Pines, near Annandale, Va. It was furnished by The Hecht Co. The event was sponsored by The Washington Post and 26 business firms.

The magazine sent a special crew of writers and photographers to "profile" the new dwelling at the time of its opening in September. The article said the floor plan was the most popular of any published by the magazine.

The finished home is a luxurious three-bedroom rambler, with air conditioning, strategically located telephone jacks, and a radio in every room, with a central control system. A unique compartmented bath contained a shower, tub and washstand in one section, with a toilet and lavatory in the other.

Farmers' Dilemma: 'Fix Up Homes or Buy More Land?'

By Robert E. Geiger

SHOULD farmers use their profits from record-high farm prices to buy more indoor plumbing, give their children better educations, take a trip to Europe?

Or should they buy more land and expand their farms in the hope they can make more money?

The National Planning Association touched off a controversy among farmers and farm leaders when it raised that question.

The nonprofit organization of farm, business and other leaders, advised farmers to raise their level of living with "boom-time profits"—improve their homes or build new ones, buy such things as house furnishings, electrical appliances, indoor plumbing, furnaces, fans, radios and automobiles.

The report said farm earnings are 3½ times prewar days and farmers were advised not to buy more land, because land prices are double what they were in 1940. The report said more buying would send land prices still higher and add to inflation.

"What Profits?"

THE Associated Press sampled opinion on this advice throughout the Nation.

Many deny they have made "boom-time profits." Several Eastern farmers say they believe it must have been the Western cattleman and wheat grower who made big profits.

Farmers generally say the high price of farm machinery and labor ate up a great deal of the farm income.

Many ask: What is the difference between buying more land, which admittedly creates inflation, and buying high-priced equipment or building new homes? This too, they say, adds to the demand for products.

But many agree with the NPA advice. They say it is the answer to that old question of "how you going to keep 'em down on the farm?"

L. M. Walker, jr., farmer and Virginia commissioner of agriculture: "It's a sensible suggestion that the farmer seek to improve his standard of living, but it is doubtful is the association's suggestion will make much difference."

Get Set for Decline

LELAND BOOTH, of W. Va., Farm Bureau: If farmers are going to spend it's better at present, to spend for better living than for land. But if they save now their dollars may have more purchasing power later.

Howard Leaverton, Maryland Farm Bureau: "The advice of NPA is about a year too late. This is a time to prepare for even lower prices and for farmers to set their financial houses in order."

Dr. J. H. Hilton, dean of agriculture, North Carolina State College: "Our whole philosophy has been to get the farmer to improve his standard of living and to improve his efficiency."

Frank Hampton, Richland County, S. C., farmer: "Farmers do feel their standards of living and of farming need improving and are using nearly every cash gain to do something about it."

Canterbury, England (AP). — A Roman defense wall, said to have been built about 22 A. D. around Canterbury, has been discovered in excavatoins where the medieval wall was hit by a bomb in 1942.

The builders of the existing medieval wall had incorporated the Roman wall as a core and covered it with a flint facing. Six feet thick

Realty Roundup

A PLAN FOR STIMULATING the construction of rental housing by private enterprise, rather than by dipping into the Federal treasury, is favored by a California banker who has proposed that private investors in such housing be allowed a tax credit for depreciation in excess of normal depreciation.

H. J. Mendon, vice president of the California Bank, in the forthcoming issue of the Mortgage Banker, published by the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, declares that such a plan would stimulate the construction and financing of sorely needed rental housing by private builders and investors.

If successful, he indicated, it would mean that it would not be necessary for the Government to embark upon a vast public housing program.

The plan would work similarly to that employed during the war for construction of war plants and production of equipment when "certificates of necessity" were supplied manufacturers.

He declares that with today's high building costs, private interests cannot build rental housing for the low income groups at rents they can afford to pay and that the plan he suggests would be the simplest method to get such housing built.

Explaining his proposal further, Mendon declares:

"Ordinarily an owner of a multiple housing project would be entitled to something like 2½ per cent depreciation annually for income tax purposes. Why not allow an extra 10 per cent annually for five years applicable against any taxable income of the owner, with the stipulation that a like amount be applied against debt curtailment or return of capital?"

Mendon admits the plan is a subsidy but believes it is far preferable and less expensive than having the Federal Government enter into the housing field as is now being proposed.

Housing Aid Seen in Iron Allocations

The success of voluntary allocation programs for pig iron may have a marked effect on the volume and type of residential construction during the coming year, says the National Association of Home Builders.

Referring to the Department of Commerce schedule for bringing producers of the pig iron industry together in an industry-government program to channel raw materials into vital sources, the association cited the need for such items as iron pressure pipes, plumbing drainage products, cast iron radiation and boilers, valves, fittings, pumps and heaters.

The curtailment of production of these and other necessary components of new homes would directly affect the supply of completed houses, the association added. Ample pig iron, they say, must be available for fabrication of home building fixtures and supplies—particularly soil pipe.

The group is hoping for prompt and effective action by the Department of Commerce in organizing the final phases of the program. Already in operation is a voluntary allocation program for steel which is being channeled to manufacturers of home heating equipment.

GAO Bids Due January 26

Sealed bids for construction of the $22,850,000 General Accounting Office building at 5th and G sts. nw., will be accepted January 26, 1949, the Federal Works Agency has announced.

Specifications for the 7-story block-type building, which will bring the GAO's 8000 scattered employes together under one roof, are available in the FWA's Office of Design and Construction, Public Buildings Administration.

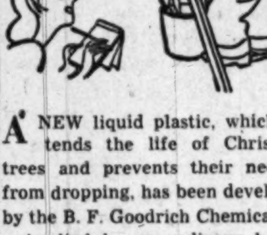
The GAO building will occupy the block bounded by 4th, 5th, G, and H sts. nw., which was excavated in 1941. The northwest corner of the block will continue to be occupied by St. Mary's Church, however.

The first Federal building to have fluorescent lighting throughout, it will boast escalators between the first five floors, as well as six fast elevators. A basement garage will house 800 cars.

Gas Service Station

A two-story brick gas service station will be erected at 4455 Benning rd. ne., by E. Mortenson, builder, for Domenico J. Mussolino under terms of a building permit application recently submitted.

HOME HINTS



A NEW liquid plastic, which extends the life of Christmas trees and prevents their needles from dropping, has been developed by the B. F. Goodrich Chemical Co.

Applied by an ordinary household sprayer, the material quickly forms a transparent, plastic film at room temperature.

Tests have shown that treated evergreen trees kept in a room at 85 degrees remained forest-fresh for 10 days and longer, and dropped only a thimbleful of needles in 15 days. In the same tests, similar trees, untreated, lost most of their needles in three days, and within a week's time were practically bare.

The material creates its effect by sealing in the moisture present in the trees, the company explained. Known as Good-Rite vinyl resin latex, the liquid plastic also keeps certain cut flowers, trees, bulbs and flowers from drying out and dying during transplanting or shipping.

IF YOU want to relax while snow and ice storms howl around your house this year, you'd better lay in a supply of rock salt now. Spread on sidewalks, driveways, porch steps and similar areas around the house, rock salt takes the work and the worry out of removing snow and ice and gives you safe, summer-clear surfaces with no trouble at all.

A HOME with an active child but without a playroom usually means unhappiness for the small fry and confusion for the homemaker. The problem can be solved, in most cases, by making Junior's bedroom do double duty as a playroom.

In providing equipment and furnishings for the room, safety is of prime importance. Lamp cords should be securely fastened in sockets and kept from trailing across the floor. Avoid small throw-rugs which are likely to slide when the youngsters decide to frolic.

Replace old-fashioned radiators with new heating units that offer little chance for cut heads, torn hands or scorched fingers. The new convector radiator is recommended. The heating element of this unit is safely inclosed in a smooth metal cabinet, away from youthful prying fingers. The smooth surfaces of the cabinet never get too hot to the touch, and provide an added safety factor by their freedom from sharp edges and pointed corners that might cause painful cuts or bruises.

By John Fahey

KELLOGG, Idaho, Dec. 18 (AP).—America's big metal producers are going into the housing business to beat the labor shortage.

Adequate housing for mine workmen in the rich Coeur d'Alene district is one of the lures of a labor recruitment program.

It also includes asking Congress to admit immigrants for mine labor, replacement of men with machinery, and a publicity campaign to convince young men that mining is a dignified and necessary calling.

Not since 1937 has the mine labor supply been adequate. Although 4500 men are working now in the Coeur d'Alenes, executives estimate the Nation's metal diggings could employ 5000 or more if they could attract them.

Forty years ago the Bunker Hill Co. pioneered company homes for employes. Today they're back in the business, completing 48 new homes and four apartment houses with 10 units each in the hope they can entice workers with the promise of modern housing.

The mining companies have their eye on young veterans, the sons of miners, and young men who may develop into technicians. There are no statistics for metal mining, but the average age of coal miners in the United States is 51, and the mining companies believe metal miners average close to that.

Most frequent of all complaints from a miner is, "I won't live in a shack, and I won't ask my family to." He can find another job in an aluminum mill, an airplane factory, or one of the other industries beginning to spot the Pacific Northwest.

That is why apartments costing Bunker Hill $3500 to build will rent for $25 a month and houses will be sold miners at $6500 under FHA, with the company reserving the right to rebuy if the miner sells. This is just the beginning of a project Bunker Hill plans to enlarge next year.

Sunshine Mining Co. is finishing a community of 10 four-room houses this year overlooking the attractive Shoshone Country Club grounds.

Pend Oreille Mines & Metals Co., enlarging its mill near Metaline Falls in northeastern Washington State, is spending $150,000 remodeling a hotel into 58 apartments.

Even before they're completed, housing projects seem to be attracting miners. Bunker Hill has more than 100 applicants for the 48 homes in Kellogg. With this response the mining industry is hoping it again may handpick the men who live in its towns and work in its mines.

Dustproofing Screens

A thin coat of varnish or screen enamel will prevent rusting of iron-wire screening. White or aluminum paint on screens will make the interior less visible from outside.

Park Central

N. Y. Hotel To Install Television

New York Herald Tribune News Service

New York, Dec. 18.—The 1600-room Park Central Hotel, Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, will become the first major hotel in the world equipped with television in every room or suite when installation of more than 1200 sets is completed in February, it was announced today.

The first of more than 200 miles of special wiring was laid down this morning, immediately following purchase of a controlling interest in the hotel by the Sheraton Corporation of America, operators of twenty-seven hotels in twenty-two American cities. The hotel chain brought a little under 50 per cent of the outstanding stock of the 31-story Park Central. No price was disclosed.

Installation of the television sets at a cost of more than $500,000 is being made by the Tele-Rent Corporation. The sets will have 10-inch picture tubes, five-channel selectivity, and will operate from a single master antenna.

Elmer E. Boswell, vice president of the Sheraton Corporation, said the chain had not yet decided whether a special charge would be made to guests for use of the television.

Lights and Greenery Galore

Outdoor Decorations Heighten Yule Cheer

By Henry B. Aul

DO SOME of your decorating for the holidays outdoors—it will contribute to the general good cheer of the neighborhood and provide a colorful entrance for guests arriving for the festive activities indoors.

Weatherproof lights and trimmings, combined with traditional greenery are the prescribed materials. Use them as simply, elaborately or originally as personal taste, influenced by the season, dictates. It is a pleasure at this time of the year to be able to use lights and color, spangle and fantasy with a free hand.

Outdoor decorations are generally concentrated along the front of the house and, in particular, around the entrance steps, porch and door. Any means of giving holiday atmosphere to the long, straight walk to the house will have popular appeal. The scheme for an entrance walk, shown in the accompanying illustration, uses eight slender poles to support lighted stars and spiraled streamers of evergreen roping.

The poles of bamboo or other light wood are set 2 feet in the ground. Holes for them are made with a digging bar. The poles are graduated in height from 7 feet near the sidewalk to 4 feet next to the stoop. They also are placed closer together as the house is approached. All of this forces the perspective and tends to increase the apparent length of the walk. They are painted silver or white.

Stars From Pie Tins

THE stars attached to the top of each pole and to the top of the trees on each side of the doorway are cut from shiny new pie tins. A hole in the center of each star receives the socket for a single white electric light bulb.

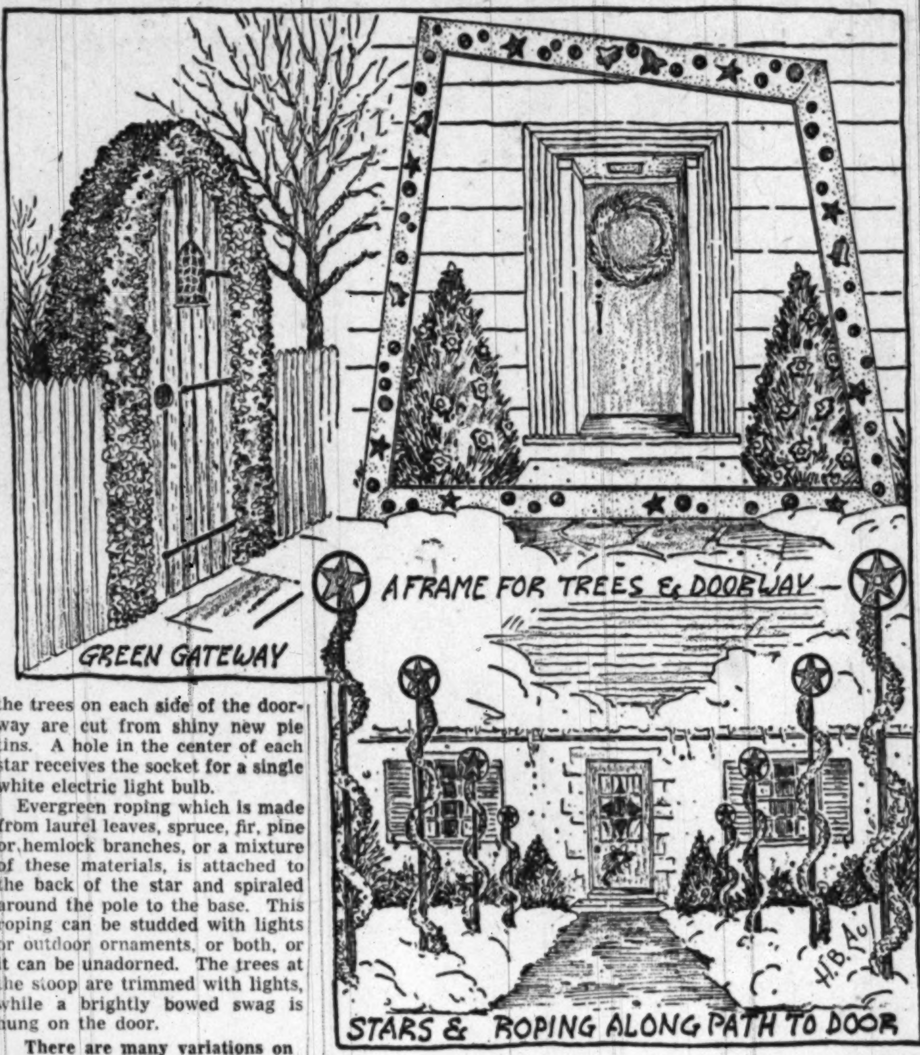
Evergreen roping which is made from laurel leaves, spruce, fir, pine or hemlock branches, or a mixture of these materials, is attached to the back of the star and spiraled around the pole to the base. This roping can be studded with lights or outdoor ornaments, or both, or it can be unadorned. The trees at the stoop are trimmed with lights, while a brightly bowed swag is hung on the door.

There are many variations on this theme, using two or more poles of equal or graduated heights in straight or curved formations, depending on the shape of the walk. The poles might be painted or wrapped with strips of red and white oilcloth to simulate peppermint sticks. On the other hand the roping might be thickened toward the ground and lights or balls could be arranged to make the nighttime appearance cometlike. Actually, the daytime appearance of poles, stars and roping makes them worth doing, and lights used only on the doorstep trees.

Attractive doorways and doorstep plantings deserve special attention, particularly during the holidays. Hang a wreath or swag on the door and have the trees bristling with bulbs that will give off an extra sparkle from a square of shiny aluminum foil placed back of each socket.

Build It Yourself

FOR real emphasis and fun, focus the door and lighted planting within a real frame that contributes its share of glitter and spangle to the scene. You can build the frame four-square or shaped, as shown, to suggest perspective. Build it big enough for your friends to step right through as they come and go.



GREEN GATEWAY
A FRAME FOR TREES & DOORWAY
STARS & ROPING ALONG PATH TO DOOR
H.B. Aul

Ideas for outdoor decorations to celebrate the Christmas holidays

Paint the frame a Christmas pink, palgreen, gold, silver or white and, while the paint is wet, dust it with large splashes of glitter. Then apply cutouts of stars, balls and bells made from aluminum or colored foil to the frame, with glue or liquid cement. Clear or frosted light bulbs can be spaced around the back of the frame, along the sides and over the top to flood the entrance way with light. One or two small floodlights are placed on the ground in front of the frame to make it shine.

The frame shown is 12 feet across the bottom, 9 feet 4 inches across the top, 10 feet 6 inches along the left side, and 9 feet 8 inches along the right side. The boards are mitered at the corners and held together with cleats and screws. To hold it in an upright position, fasten it securely to two 2-inch pipe posts, set in the ground back of the two bottom corners.

Where the approached to the house is through a fenced-in door yard, decorate the gate and gateway as an extension of the welcome that awaits holiday friends at the door. The gate shown is transformed into a planked door, complete with heavy hinges and grilled window, set in a gateway of greenery.

The door is a single piece of ¾-inch weatherproof plywood, cut to shape and secured with four screws to the front of the gate. Hinges and joints to simulate planking are painted on the plywood, which is stained to give an aged appearance. The window opening is fitted with clear sheet plastic or glass, with gold-painted rope or wire used for the grill.

The greenery around the gate consists of small branches of spruce, balsam, pine or laurel woven into chicken wire and secured to a light wooden frame, which in turn is fastened to the fence. This frame is 5 feet high, at which point the arch and the gate start to curve toward their respective pointed tops. Above the 5 feet, the top and sides of the chicken netting, wired together, have sufficient strength to hold the desired shape. The top of the arch is 7½ feet; the gate is 6½ feet.

Theater Takes Step to Get New Physical Form

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE milder wonders of the theater world is that, generally speaking, twentieth century drama is being played on nineteenth century stages.

Precious few theaters have been built in this country for the living drama in the last generation. Our teeming cities have something to do with this; real estate values mean heavy risks for those who would invest in the fabulous invalid.

Another factor, important because it rules in the country's theatrical capital, are Manhattan building laws which prevent legitimate theaters from being built effectively in buildings devoted to other purposes. Recently the New York fire laws have been altered somewhat so that auditoriums may be housed in office buildings, but stages themselves must be constructed so that no other edifice is above the flies.

Influence of Movies

THE NEED for some new form of physical approach in theater construction certainly has one of its germs in the influence of the movies on our playwrights. The tendency is towards as striking a form of realism as the stage can afford ("Mister Roberts" and its heavy ship settings were a sore problem during out-of-town tryouts) or a flowing, episodic approach by the playwright.

When Maxwell Anderson's "Anne of the Thousand Days" recently opened in New York after some weeks of tryout touring, final revisions in the production were going on until three hours before the opening curtain. Jo Mielziner's entire turntable production had been scrapped in favor of a simpler unit setting which made possible the flow demanded by Anderson's cinematic script.

Along with these considerable factors in theater construction are the tentative efforts being made to decentralize the theater. It is reasonable to suppose that New York will continue to be the center of the Nation's theater world, for from the commercial theater as we know it have come undeniable pulses of energy. But just as truly, the theater, to live, must get beyond the real estate gauntlet of Gotham.

Building Plans

IT IS here that the university and community theaters, many of them with the encouragement of ANTA'S youthful vitality, are coming to the fore. Within the last few weeks building plans have been announced by several such groups.

What makes the plans particularly titivating is that names of the first rank are associated with these projects—Frank Lloyd Wright, Jo Mielziner and Donald Oenslager.

Wright's projected theater is being built on the outskirts of Hartford, Conn., where Paton Price plans to give the community something between the Avery Memorial (not open to commercial enterprises) and the 10,000-seat Bushnell Auditorium. This theater will stand on an 8-acre site, with parking space for 600 cars. Cost of the 750-seat house is not expected to exceed $150,000.

Wright, whose architectural writings have often discussed theater, will renew his attack on the proscenium arch. "Getting it through the hole to the people out there," Wright has said, has forced overacting. He is emphasizing sight lines and acoustics and promises that his theater will support the fullest vision of playwright, director and actor.

Pittsburgh Showcase

MIELZINER'S theater will be in Pittsburgh as a new showcase for that city's lively community Playhouse. Like Wright, Mielziner plans on a theater of 750 seats. His sets for both "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "Summer and Smoke" are the most noteworthy of that art now on the American stage. It seems more than reasonable to suppose that any theater he designs will take into fullest account the demands made by contemporary playwrights.

Oenslager, whose sets for "Stage Door," "I'd Rather Be Right," "The Fabulous Invalid," "Born Yesterday" and "Three to Make Ready" have made him a Broadway standby, is connected with a theater that promises to be less trail-blazing than the Wright-Meilziner ventures. Although the architect is anonymous on the plans, Oenslager is a cochairman of the committee to build the Robert Benchley Theater at Phillips Exeter, N. H.

This plan for the celebrated boys' school, where the late humorist prepped for Harvard, is to construct a student center for the visual arts, music and drama. The theater will seat 1200, is more traditional in design than the Pittsburgh and Hartford plans, though its decor is a conservative modern. But with Oenslager spearheading the drive, it can be assumed the theater will be built with the guidance of a man who understands the pitfalls and demands of theater building.

Olney's a Good Stage

IRONICALLY, apart from the campus theaters of Catholic and George Washington Universities, both of which have their drawbacks, the only stage to be built in this locale in recent years embodies some of the most advanced backstage facilities in the Nation.

This is the summer theater at Olney, whose wide wings and deep stage make possible scene changes or rolling stages, a device that is one answer to the cinematic style of Anderson and his school. However crude the Olney's rolling stages are in construction, they represent a longtime dream of theater designers. Because the procedure demands such space that in a city building would be prohibitive, it usually is only a dream.

But "round actors" can take heart from the building on the way from the drawing boards of Messrs. Wright and Meilziner.

Three Christmas Belles

TALLEST AND NEWEST: Dorothy Ford, above, is 6 feet 1, but that's not keeping her from a film career as a beauty. Dorothy will be on the Warner Christmas bill in the Technicolored musical, "One Sunday Afternoon." Right: Luba Malina, whose torrid songs were a hit for the stage "Mexican Hayride," plays her old role for her screen debut in the same musical, with Abbott and Costello in the top spots, opening Thursday at the Capitol

CHANGING THE TRANS-LUX POLICY to one of feature pictures on Christmas Day are Gigi Perreau and Farley Granger in "Enchantment." This Sam Goldwyn latest, with David Niven and Teresa Wright in the leads, will start the longtime newsreel center on a new career of feature pictures, supported by over-average slices of "actualities," as the French call the newsreels. Mistress Perreau has been hailed as a highly promising juvenile by the astute Goldwyn

On Broadway

Stars Chow And Chat in Chili Joint

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—A Mexican sombrero marks the place in a grandiose manner, and it would seem incongruous except for the fact that it trademarks a door just off Broadway.

Broadway, as anyone knows who has been around the street for the last half dozen years, is getting to look more and more like a carnival midway, a capricious Capricorn that can't make up its mind.

So a Mexican sombrero as a sign doesn't seem to be too much out of place.

The place is a chili con carne joint — a lunch counter place with a menu consisting mostly of chili, enchiladas and a few other Mexican dishes. It is a convenient, late-hour lunch room for the performers who earn their precarious living in the Broadway theatrical belt and Madison Square Garden, that hardier showhouse for prizefighters, rodeo and circus performers.

Draws 'Em All

THE chili joint is sort of a rich man's, poor man's club for it attracts both the stars and the uncertain players who are either on their way up or on

Petrillo's Union Grows As Disk Industry Does

By Paul Hume

A ban on recording music for phonographs and transcription services is once again lifted.

In effect since January 1, 1948 the ban disappeared last Tuesday when officials of record companies signed five-year contracts with representatives of the American Federation of Musicians. A previous ban, leveled during the war, lasted over 27 months, from August 1, 1942, to Armistice Day, 1944. The armistice lasted three years and 19 days.

Last New Year's Eve the studios of every major recording company in the country were filled with artists making the last records possible before the ban which fell at midnight. Shortly before James C. Petrillo, president of musicians' union said, "Union members will never again make records even if the Taft-Hartley law were repealed and recording companies increased royalty payments to the union."

The Taft-Hartley law and the earlier Lea Act both contained clauses designed to limit the powers of the musicians' union in levying royalties against recording companies. In 1946 Petrillo forced a test case on the constitutionality of the Lea Act.

Another Bluff

ALL this is now past. Petrillo's "never again" was the same sort of bluff tried by the Metropolitan Opera and the Philadelphia Orchestra this year when they said they would have no season 1949-49. An examination of issues involved in Petrillo's demands shows:

Until 1944, musicians who made recordings were paid either a flat fee, or, in the case of big name artists (both popular and classical) royalties. To take a specific example, if the Boston Symphony Orchestra made a recording, its members were paid the usual fee for recording time. After that, no matter how many copies of that record were sold, or how often it might be played over the air, the players received no further income from it.

Petrillo foresaw a day when men might record themselves out of business. He argued that record companies should provide some means, from record sales, to help unemployed musicians. Thus, at the conclusion of the 1942-44 record ban, record companies agreed to pay a royalty on all records sold. These royalties were spent in the years 1946 and 1947 for free concerts throughout the country.

Schools, hospitals, service centers, and public audiences profited from these to the extent of more than a million and a half dollars each of those years. Less than 1 per cent of the total income from royalties went for administrative expenses. The money was spent to employ union members at regular union rates.

Payment Outlawed

WASHINGTON has enjoyed many of these concerts. This year there were programs in Constitution Hall, the Watergate, the National Gallery, Washington Cathedral, and oth-

Turbulent Year Closing

Pains Wrack World of Play

By John Crosby

THE revolution in the entertainment world is only dimly understood. Like an iceberg, eight ninths of it is invisible and in some places this part is not discussed, partly because the great hulk under the surface has its sinister aspects, but mostly because no one quite knows what is down there.

Nineteen forty-eight is the year in which television came of age, both as an actuality and as a portent of the future; yet consideration of television is limited to the fringes of it, not the whole of it, and the only clear indication that television is not simply another local, easily assimilable gadget in entertainment is the fact that it has bobbed up in so many fields and in such distant places.

Sports, for example. The minor leagues are already shaking with fright at what television of major league ball games will do to minor league attendance. The minor league gate suffered considerably last season from television. The Newark Bears are trying to sell their franchise, claiming the club can't compete against television. The minor leagues claim that it's only a matter of time before the major leagues will be hurt, too. Meanwhile, the Columbia Broadcasting System became a partner in the Tournament of Champions and a new and radical philosophy was born. Henceforth, broadcasters would be active partners in sports, not just transmitters of it. The whole approach here is different from that of radio.

Television, according to the new philosophy, may shrink the base of sports. There may be fewer fights, local ball clubs or small-time sports, and greater attendance either by television or in person at the big events. Gloomy prophets predict this will kill off the training grounds for the big leagues. I'd rather not predict anything just now.

Take Industry

LET'S take industry as another example. Radio manufacturers in common with the producers of all consumer goods enjoyed vast prosperity after the war. But the end was near. The radio market is almost glutted and without television the manufacturers might easily have been in a pretty predicament. But television assures not only continuing profits to the radio industry but also to a dozen minor allied industries.

To the American economy as a whole, television glitters with promise. If, as one executive predicts, television becomes a six-billion-dollar baby, it will be one of the Nation's great industries and almost as formidable and welcome an addition to the national wealth as the automobile industry in the second and third decades of this century.

Take the motion picture industry, where the crystal ball is cloudiest and most turbulent. Within the last month, there have been negotiations first by Warner Brothers and later by Twentieth Century-Fox to purchase the American Broadcasting Co. (both now broken off.) There was also a w[illegible] rumor that the Columbia Broadcasting System [illegible] up for sale (presumably to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) which has been emphatically denied by William S. Paley, chairman of the board and owner of effective stock control of C. B. S.

Both actual negotiations and rumor point to what seems an inevitable partnership between movies and television. The question arises: who is to be senior partner? Well, the movie producers have always been junior partners to the movie theater owners. Loew's, Inc., for example, owns and operates Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. In the prospective television-movie partnership, it is the broadcasters who own the stations, the equivalent of the theaters, and consequently are in the saddle. Belated recognition of this fact has led to the moviemakers' attempts to acquire television

Horace Squares Off To Fight Jack Benny

By Sonia Stein

WITH THE transfer of Jack Benny to the CBS network, the whole Sunday night entertainment structure on NBC, of which Benny has been the keystone for 17 years, seems to have come apart.

HEIDT

The first program to be announced by NBC for the gigantic shoring up job is the Horace Heidt "Youth Opportunity" program which celebrated its first birthday on the air here Sunday night when the $5000 finalists contest was broadcast from Uline Arena.

The Heidt show, currently heard at 10:30 p. m., will be moved down to the once coveted 7 p. m. spot on NBC, on which Benny has had a lifetime option.

This puts Heidt squarely opposite Benny, who will have the 7 p. m. spot on CBS beginning January 2, in what would seem a challenge to Heidt but which is "a challenge to Mr. Benny," according to Patrick Gorman, advertising manager for Heidt's sponsor, Philip Morris & Co.

In fact, the whole retinue of people involved in the Heidt show when it came here last week for this year's finals, sounded overjoyed and optimistic about Heidt's chances successfully to buck Benny (pardon!), although Kate Smith in her most influential era was not able to do it with any marked success.

A Tight Spot

AS A MATTER of fact, whether or not NBC's as enthusiastic about Heidt's show as it claims to be, it is in a tight spot about fighting the Benny show. Comedians vs. comedians are notoriously a poor arrangement and NBC is publicly opposed to offering crime shows early in the evening. This leaves a choice of the giveaways or Heidt, potentiately strong enough in pulling power to give Benny competition, and NBC once promised to add no new giveaways.

Heidt and his wife, who travel around the country with the show, seem well-acquainted with some of its genuine virtues. They point out that the auditions (which processed 20,000 people last year) reach small towns so that talented youngsters, whose parents wouldn't let them risk being beached in New York or Hollywood, get a chance to be heard without venturing away from home.

"Furthermore," says Mrs. Heidt, "the ones who don't get a chance on the show are given the

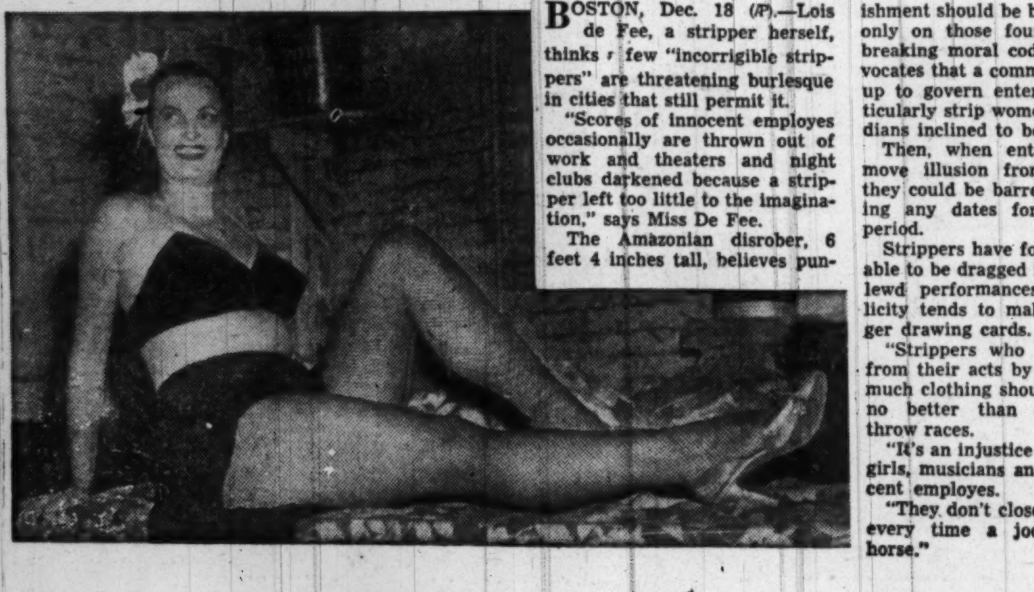
T'ain't Cricket to Strip Too Far, Says She



BOSTON, Dec. 18 (AP).—Lois de Fee, a stripper herself, thinks a few "incorrigible strippers" are threatening burlesque in cities that still permit it.

"Scores of innocent employes occasionally are thrown out of work and theaters and night clubs darkened because a stripper left too little to the imagination," says Miss De Fee.

The Amazonian disrober, 6 feet 4 inches tall, believes punishment should be brought down only on those found guilty of breaking moral codes. She advocates that a commission be set up to govern entertainers, particularly strip women and comedians inclined to be smutty.

Then, when entertainers remove illusion from their acts they could be barred from playing any dates for a specified period.

Strippers have found it profitable to be dragged into court for lewd performances. The publicity tends to make them bigger drawing cards.

"Strippers who strip illusion from their acts by shedding too much clothing should be treated no better than jockeys who throw races.

"It's an injustice to the chorus girls, musicians and other innocent employes.

"They don't close a race track every time a jockey pulls a horse."

Princeton Triangle Show At Lisner Tomorrow

Thomas H. Middleton, jr., of Bronxville, N. Y., one of the principals in the Princeton Triangle Club show, "All in Favor," should be happy. That's Jane Powell, the screen star, making him up. The show appears here tomorrow night in Lisner Auditorium

THE Princeton Triangle Club, whose veterans include such names as F. Scott Fitzgerald, Jimmy Stewart and Jose Ferrer, will present its annual musical show tomorrow night at 8:30 in Lisner Auditorium.

This year's play is a musical satire, "All in Favor!" spoofing the follies and fanfare of small-town politics. The leading male role will be played by a Washington man, Robert G. Abernathy, whose role will be that of Roger de Coverly. Object of his affections will be Thomas H. Middleton, jr., vice president of the club.

"All in Favor's" dancing—always a vital part of these college shows—has been directed by James C. Nooly from routines by Morgan ("Buddy") Lewis, who in his days at Princeton did choreography for four Triangle shows. These days he's looking forward to "Four to [illegible] the Broadway successor to three of his previous big-time assignments. "One for the Money," "Two for the Show" and "Three to Make Ready."

Speech Group to Meet

LEADING figures in the theatrical world will be among those attending the convention of the Speech Association of America's thirty-third annual meeting at the Statler Hotel for a three-day session beginning December 28.

Kenneth Macgowan, who began his career as a critic and became an independent producer, will be on to talk of cinema and radio from the University of California. Mary Morris, of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, will discuss acting.

One general session will be devoted to a discussion on the Broadway theater by Clarence Derwent, president of Actors' Equity, Producer Gilbert Miller and Editor Garrett H. Leverton, of the French Publishing Co.

Walter Kerr, of Catholic University, will join a panel on university theaters, and Glenn Hughes, now at the University of Washington, will talk of the high school theater.

Robert Breen, executive secretary of ANTA, will lead a discussion of the American theater scene with Rosamond Gilder, Theron Bamberger, Campton Bell and H. Darkes Albright.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen, chairman of the District of Columbia Committee in the House, will deliver an address of welcome.

'Harvey' in Ford's December 27

Ford's Theater, Baltimore, nearest professional legitimate theater to the National Capital, will be closed this week, reopening Monday night, December 27, with a two-week run of Frank Fay in "Harvey."

Cathedral Choir to Sing With Orchestra

Paul Callaway's Washington Cathedral Choir, which is appearing with the National Symphony today in Constitution Hall

FROM the National Symphony: This afternoon the orchestra invites its audience to join in Christmas carols. The Washington Cathedral Choir will help out in the singing.

HELLER

Hans Kindler announces the world premiere of Henry Cowell's fifth symphony for Wednesday, January 5. Cowell, a well-known American composer, will be on hand for the premiere.

Georges Enesco returns in January to conduct the National Symphony for the third consecutive season. His concerts, set for the 19th and 23d, include Mozart's G Minor symphony, Erica Morini in Wieniawski's D Minor concerto, the Schumann fourth symphony, and arias sung by Salvatore Baccaloni. At the 19th concert, Enesco will include his own concerto-overture on Romanian Themes.

This week's brief allotment of music includes a brilliant array of modern works on Robert Gross' violin recital tonight in the National Gallery, and a similarly fine list on Erika Thimey's dance program tonight in Cafritz Auditorium. Batya Heller appears with the Thimey Group.

TUESDAY evening Baltimore's Handel Choir makes its Washington bow in the Messiah, and Wednesday Florence Booker leads her wonderful choruses in Christmas music at Washington-Lee School.

Between Christmas and New Year's there will be just one concert in all of Washington; the Philadelphia Orchestra with Francescatti. That one concert is good enough in content and artists to suggest that a welcome Christmas gift would be a series ticket for the three concerts of which this is the first. Later programs boast Moiseiwitch and Piatigorsky as soloists.

INFORMAL record concerts are played each Monday evening at 8:30 in the Hospitality Room of the Jewish Community Center.

With Kay Fowler as moderator, concerts range from standard literature through such items as Villa-Lobos, Bernstein, Kabalevsky, and others. The concerts are open to the public, without charge.

Chamber music finds a place on the programs, along with larger works for orchestra and solo-orchestra combination.

IT IS interesting to hear recordings made during a recent Air Force Concert Orchestra broadcast.

The orchestra, built up and directed for years by Maj. George S. Howard, was turned over to its concertmaster, Paul Wolfe, for the Prelude and Love Death from Tristan, and a Vivaldi concerto.

Wolfe, whose fiddle playing has been a prominent feature of the orchestra for some time, shows real ability in conducting. The Wagner excerpt can easily fail to sustain either line or mood unless the conductor knows his business. It succeeded remarkably well. Wolfe could undoubtedly develop into a valuable leader given sufficient opportunity.

Planning Symphony Drive

ALTHOUGH the National Symphony Orchestra's Nineteenth Sustaining Fund opens February 3, 1949, its leaders are laying foundations for the drive already.

Emerson Meyers, member of the Board of Directors and a prominent Washington composer and pianist, is chairman of the drive. His vice chairmen are Mrs. Hans A. Klagsbrunn and Mrs. Theodore W. Dominick, both members of the board.

The campaign is planned for the three weeks from February 3 to February 25. Headquarters have been set up at 1727 K st. nw., and all who wish to volunteer to help in any way may call NAtional 7198 for details.

Builder of Braille Music Named to VA Position

LENARD QUINTO, decorated by the Army for developing a music program in Braille for blinded servicemen, has been appointed chief of music of Veterans' Administration Special Services, F. R. Kerr, assistant administrator for VA's Special Services, was announced.

He replaces Ray Green, noted young American composer, who left VA to become executive secretary of the American Music Center in New York City

Assistant chief of music at VA since November 1946, Quinto established a number of music projects for the benefit of patients in VA hospitals and homes.

He worked with the Musicians Emergency Fund, Inc., on a program of bringing leading stars of music into VA hospitals for concerts in hospital auditoriums and personal appearances in the wards. He also arranged for the Library of Congress to catalogue the Armed Forces Radio Service transcriptions, which are played over VA intrahospital broadcasting networks.

During the war, Quinto became chief of the hospital section of the music branch, War Department Special Services. As part of his music program for the blind, he prepared Braille editions of musical publications, instruction books, and compilations of popular and folk songs. He received an Army commendation for his Braille music activities.

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., he received the degree of bachelor of science in education from Temple University, and master of music from the University of Southern California. He also has done graduate work at Temple and the University of Pennsylvania.

He is past president of the Delaware Music Educators Association and the Wilmington Public Schools Music Teachers Association. He also is a member of the Philadelphia Contemporary Club, the Film Music Council, Film Music Notes, and two movie reviewing committees. He has published numerous articles on film music.

DuMont Wants an Earlier Opening

Although A. T. & T. has set January 12 for the opening of the Philadelphia-Cleveland link connecting the East Coast and Midwest television networks, DuMont is said to be trying for an earlier date for the Philadelphia-to-Pittsburgh leg. The DuMont network's new station in Pittsburgh is nearing the broadcast stage and network officials would like to connect it to the East Coast hook-up for the opening.—(AP).

A Chili Joint Draws Stars On Broadway

their way down from the pinnacle of stardom.

The players and athletes eat there because chili, like Irish stew, is both filling and cheap. It is a combination of economic necessity and dietary wisdom. They eat chili (or stew) when they are out of the money. They continue eating it when they are drawing the high salaries of stardom because of habit, instinct and because they are never certain when that day will come when they will be out of the money again.

Hugh O'Connell, comedian star of "Once in a Lifetime" and many other Broadway plays and Hollywood movies, had a sensible idea about how actors should continue eating. Before he won stardom on stage and screen, the bland-face O'Connell had been a stock company actor in Syracuse and other cities in upstate New York.

"I learned one thing about how not to be hungry as an actor," he once said. "When I went with a new show I always took my first pay check and invested it in canned goods. If the show didn't last I was sure of eating for a time."

He Won't Talk

SO THIS inexpensive chili joint is a favorite with Broadway stars and minor actors, chorus girls and circus roustabouts. There is a glum Irish waiter who, surprising for an Irishman, doesn't like to chat.

"Coming up or going down," he said, "I met them all. They're a gabby bunch, these actors.

"But the one I like best is Emmett Kelly (the sad-faced circus clown). He comes in, eats his chili and never says a word."

PERSONAL notes off a New Yorker's cuff: Charles Boyer is now not only a top Broadway dramatic star. He is revealed as an important bibliophile, and established here the French research foundation to build up a research library.

Ken Parker, the skating star "Howdy, Mr. Ice," became a playwright when he broke his leg and had to hang up his skates for many weeks. His mystery comedy, "Four Flights Up," was produced in Greenwich Village and is now a summer theater standby.

Husband and wife teams: At the opening of Maxwell Anderson's new play, "Anne of the Thousand Days," Actress Betty Field and Playwright Elmer Rice sat next to Actor Frederic March and Actress Florence Eldridge. Directly in front of them were Mary "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" Martin and Film Executive Richard Halliday. (All Mr. and Mrs.)

Gertrude Lawrence cables from London that she has just opened in a new Daphne Du Maurier play.

Long Research Marks Scenes For 'Hansel'

DELVING into cookbooks and old recipe clippings by the dozen, Marion DePew prepared herself for a unique task. With the fruits of her research, she designed the scenery and costumes for the "Hansel and Gretel" production which the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater of New York will present at the Virginia Theater, Alexandria, Tuesday, December 28.

Miss DePew's research into old pictures of colorful goodies inspired her to design costumes which look like candy and a witch's house that resembles the Grimm Brothers' description of the gingerbread home with sugar frosting.

One of her mouth-watering examples is a candy maiden's dress of clove, an apron of cinnamon with licorice trimming and sleeves of puffy marshmallows. Her peppermint soldier and taffy princess promise to make "Hansel and Gretel" a flavorsome Christmas treat.

Mrs. Major's children's plays, now in their twenty-fifth season, are sponsored locally by the Children's Museum of Washington, Inc. Tickets are available at the museum, Wisconsin and Western aves., or by phone at WIsconsin 6823.

Revel Call It 'Perfum Set to Music

By The Associated Press

HARRY REVEL is a composer with a nose for music and, incidentally, a nose for intriguing perfumes. Combining the two, he has composed an album of musical sketches, "Perfume Set to Music," which RCA-Victor has recorded under an engaging series of titles including "Toujours Moi," "Jet," "Tzigane," "L'Ardente Nuit," "Possession," and "Fame."

The musical phrases of his sketches are subtle suggestions of rendezvous with beautiful girls the world over, and the appropriate perfumes that each would favor. For instance, his "Tzigane" has a distinct gypsy mood with its swift-changing nuances. His "L'Ardente Nuit" submits a fluorescent mood of a tropical night, suggesting deep, heady emotions and perfumes.

Revel, who composed in collaboration with Mack Gordon, such songs as "Stay as Sweet as You Are" and "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking," said his idea of "Perfume Set to Music," happened because of a chance meeting with a young mademoiselle in Paris.

"Her perfume had a dreamy, beautiful fragrance that transposed itself into a melodic theme in my mind," he said. "I kept thinking of that perfume and a musical theme until it resulted in my melodic sketch, "Toujours Moi."

Some Hints For Your Yule List

TO EVERY record collector, more and more phonograph records are the perfect Christmas gift. Furthermore, they are wonderful last-minute gifts if you do your shopping as I do mine. If the particular item you had in mind is not in stock at the moment, there are always six others that please as well.

Here are some suggestions from this year's lists which are either seasonal or festive in nature, or would, for any of a dozen reasons, be good gifts:

VICTOR: Handel: Messiah (complete)—Beecham with three choruses, orchestra, soloists. Albums 1194-1195. $23. Great job.

Beethoven: Ninth Symphony—Boston Symphony under Koussevitsky, with soloists, chorus. 1190. $10.

Bach: Magnificat — Victor Chorale under Shaw, with chamber orchestra, soloists. 1182. $4.75. Fine recording, highly appropriate for season.

Wanda Landowska in harpsichord collection. 1181. $7. Beautiful album perfectly played.

Virgil Fox in organ music. 1177. One of today's most brilliant virtuosi on any instrument.

Buxtehude: Aperite mihi portas justitiae. Aksel Schiotz, tenor, with chamber ensemble. 12-0533. $1.25. One of the world's great singing artists in a perfect recording.

Stravinsky: L'histoire du soldat; also: Octet for wind instruments. Victor 1197. $7.25. Great performance of important contemporary scores.

Ravel: Piano Concerto. London Philharmonia under Bernstein, with Bernstein as pianist. Fine set in every way. 1209. $4.75.

Victor has also reissued two of their most popular albums, sung by the Trapp Family. These albums of early choral music and Bach chorales are wonderful examples of this amazing family, and make fine Christmas presents.

Tschaikowsky: Sleeping Beauty. Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski. 1205. $8.75.

COLUMBIA: Bach: Sonatas for violin and harpsichord. Schneider and Kirkpatrick. 719. $19.20.

Menotti: The Medium, and the Telphone. Broadway casts with orchestra. 726. $14.70.

Puccini: La Boheme (complete). Metropolitan cast, with Sayao, Tucker, orchestra, chorus. OP 27. $19.85.

Milhaud: Symphony No. 1. Orchestra under Milhaud. 704. $6.

Brahms: Requiem. Vienna Philharmonic with soloists and chorus under von Karajan. (You may prefer the Victor set.) 755. $15.50.

Albeniz: Iberia (preludes for piano). Arrau. 757. $7.25.

Debussy: La damoiselle elue. Philadelphia Orchestra with Sayao, Nadell, chorus, under Ormandy. 761. $4.75. Unique score.

Songs of the Auvergne. Madeleine Grey with orchestra. 758 $4.75. One of Columbia's most popular and finest sets, in a reissue by public demand.

Offenbach: Arias. Jennie Tourel with orchestra. MX-299. $2.90. Perfect fluff for Christmas giving.

Berlioz: Requiem. Chorus, orchestra, bands, the works, in one of music's biggest moments. 769. $15.50.

Saint-Saens: Samson and Delilah (complete). Good performance and recording. OP. 28, $21.50.

Ravel: L'enfant et les sortileges. OP 29. $8.50. One of the year's notable releases (not yet reviewed in these columns). This is different, new, no one has it in his collection yet, but everyone should.

Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra: Pittsburgh Symphony under Reiner. Great music, great performance, brand net set. 793. 793. $8.50.

Don't overlook the wonders of English Decca FFRR records, with their unusual repertoire. And think carefully about someone who might prefer above all else a subscription to Concert Hall Society, the cream of recording in some ways.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

Performers Hail Lifting of Disk Ban

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Stars of the Metropolitan Opera and the popular music world combine forces to make a recording of "I'm Just Wild About Harry" for presentation to President Truman. It was one of the first records made at RCA-Victor in New York after the lifting of the Petrillo recording ban. Left to right, standing: Gladys Swarthout, Lawrence Tibbett, Jan Peerce, Leonard Warren, Fran Warren, Tommy Dorsey, Perry Como, Dorothy Kirsten, Cloe Elmo and Thomas Hayward. er places, paid for out of these funds. School children heard live musicians for the first time in their lives, and homes for aged and infirm, hospitals, and similar institutions have benefitted.

With the enactment of the Taft-Hartley bill, payment of such royalties was outlawed. It was at that point that Petrillo ordered further recording stopped.

Now, almost 12 months later, a new system has been devised, which meets legal requirements and still guarantees payment of royalties of about two million dollars a year. This money will be spent as before, to the benefit of the country at large and its musicians, who assuredly deserve such minimum security.

That the new arrangement is satisfactory to both sides is shown by the long-term contracts signed this week. Earlier agreements were often for one or three years. The recent contracts are for five. This is a healthy sign.

Rapid Growth

THE recording industry has grown in late years to undreamed-of proportions. Technological improvements have brought popular and classical fans long-playing records. Tape recording is about to burst upon the scene on a large scale, and sales of combination radio-phonographs with FM reception and television leap upward daily.

James Petrillo has been an astute leader of his musicians. To those outside his union he has often seemed dictatorial and demanding. In the opinion of those who know the history of the musicians' profession in this country, he has brought about just and necessary improvements in wages and hours, vacation, old age security, and other working conditions. His mistakes have been in the realm of poor publicity rather than in the region of blackmailing he is sometimes accused of.

We believe musicians and public alike will benefit from the past week's settlement. We hope future difficulties can be worked out from year to year with no further need for interruptions in manufacturing.

Delayed Overture

The Little Orchestra Society has just played, probably for the first time ever, a Schubert "Overture for String Quintet" that is 137 years old. It was written when Schubert was 14 years old, turned over to a publisher, set aside in the press of other work, and finally transferred to a new firm, A. Cranz, a descendant of whom has just brought it to this country. (AP).

Grand Opera Comes Very High If You Want to Put on the Dog

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—If you want to take your girl to the Metropolitan Opera, you have these choices:

On normal subscription nights there are some, but not many, family-circle seats at $1.50; unless you live next door, there'll be bus or subway fare of 7 to 11 cents. For both of you, that makes $3.14 to $3.22. There is also standing-room way up top for the same price as the seats, or on the floor at $2 per.

But to entertain in the grand manner, as befits grand opera, you may start with a pair of tickets at $15, flowers at $4, and a taxi from home and back that would cost, say $1 to $3.50, depending on how far out in the sticks the girl lives. If we average taxi fares at $2, you are now out $21.

But that just gets you to the door. Inside, you will want a libretto, which is at least 50 cents. By depositing $5, you can rent opera glasses, and you get $4 change at the end of the performance. There's a tip in the ladies room of no less than a quarter and later, for checking, no less than another quarter. This makes $2, or $23 in all.

Then of course you have to eat and drink. There is a Sherry's in the "Met" which will serve dinners to groups of 200 or more at $5 a plate. But that's for special occasions only.

Normally you can buy sandwiches for 60 cents to $1 apiece, coffee for 25 cents a cup, cocktails from 50 to 75 cents or highballs from 80 cents to $1. If both of you take only one apiece of these, but the most expensive one, that's $4.50 more; during two intermissions, you can count on four more drinks, or $4. Tips at the minimum would be $1.50. Food and drinks thus amount to $10, or a total bill for the night of $33. If you have to take the girl to supper afterwards, you'll need still more money but you can't blame it on the "Met."

THE STORY OF THE MEN WHO CREATE OUR COMICS

a new series of articles in The Washington Post

HOW do comic strip artists work? Where do they get their ideas? Who owns the strips—the titles—the characters? What do cartoonists assistants do? Which comics are the best—and how do editors know? Do comic strip creators really have such fantastic incomes? How does an aspiring youngster get started in the comics business?

Here's the fabulous, romantic story of Milt Caniff, creator of Terry & the Pirates, of Male Call and now of Steve Canyon—the story of Ham Fisher, whose brainchild is Joe Palooka—of mystery story Author Leslie Charteris, who recently transformed his famous character, The Saint, into a comic strip hero—of Allen Saunders who creates Steve Roper with Artist Woggon and Mary Worth with Artist Ernst—the story of a dozen leaders in this most popular of all newspaper fields: the comics!

Edmund Gwenn again this year will play Kris Kringle when a radio version of "Miracle on 34th Street" is broadcast over WTOP-CBS tomorrow night at 9. Maureen O'Hara and John Payne also are in the show benefit of Horace's detailed criticism on why the act isn't going over." Those who pattern themselves along the lines suggested, sometimes make the show the second time around.

Benny Doesn't Frighten Heidt, the Californian

Only the Beginning

BUT EVEN if Heidt is able to wrest the Sunday night crown from Benny, he is only the first of the large stature talent NBC is going to have to dig up. The Alice Faye-Phil Harris show now on NBC at 7:30 p. m. Sundays, probably will go to CBS in March or sooner, since it is part of the Benny amusement enterprise which CBS has purchased. (It's expected to fill the 8 p. m. spot there.)

Edgar Bergen has expressed dissatisfaction with having to be responsible for a full half hour each week and is whisking Charlie and Mortimer over to television and personal appearances when he gets around to it. CBS is also angling for them.

Fred Allen is expected to be moved into the 8 o'clock period when Bergen goes off, but that leaves Allen's spot open at 8:30 p. m. (Allen has said he will retire at the end of the year because of the strain of broadcasting, but since this is a perennial threat of Allen's, it may not be carried out.)

Even Red Skeleton of the Friday night NBC lineup may go over to CBS sometime soon. (And may be put into the 8:30 Sunday night spot if and when he does.)

(And while we are at it, if Bob Hope's request to buy stations WHAS and WHAS-TV in Louisville, Ky. is OKed by the FCC, maybe Hope will want to go to CBS, since WHAS is now a CBS affiliate.)

In this radio versions of who's on first and what's on second, the important point isn't really which show ends up where; the important point is that NBC has had its multimillion-dollar complacency jarred. After years of sitting around counting its comedians, while CBS had its program department madly agitating its brains, NBC will have to give its own program department a chance to show its talents.

While NBC discreetly avoids all public mention of Benny, even to the point of not saying in publicity releases whom Heidt is replacing, CBS is informing its listeners of Benny's advent in no uncertain fashion. Benny will make the following special appearances on CBS:

December 27, Lux Radio Theater; December 28, "We, the People"; December 29, the Bob Crosby Show; December 30, "Suspense;" December 25, the Gene Autry show, and between halves of the Rose Bowl game, January 1.

THE IMPENDING arrival of Benny meant that CBS had to find another spot for Gene Autry, who has been occupying the Sunday spot. Beginning Christmas Day, Autry will be a Saturday night performer, with his show at 8:30 on CBS. "Sing It Again" moves up to 10 p. m. Saturday.

Spike Jones (without Dorothy Shay for some odd reason) will move from Friday to 6:30 p. m. Sunday.

Not involved in this particular checkers game, but making a change nonetheless, is the "Mr. Ace and Jane" show, which will recess for three weeks at the beginning of the year, and then return as a Tuesday night show in all probability. "My Favorite Husband" is expected to take over the 8:30 p. m. Friday night spot vacated by the Aces.

I never saw a purple cow, I never hope to see one.
But I have seen a purple dog, and she is glad to be one.

COCO, FRENCH poodle who starred in a series of New York television shows with her mistress, Columnist Evelyn Robert, blended too much into the background in her natural pearly-grey color. So she had a weekly lavender rinse, such as the most elegant dowagers use, to make her telegenic.

As she waggled her colorful self down Fifth ave. of a sunny Sunday, she was stopped by awe-stricken amateur photographers with color film in their cameras.

The presence of Coco on the TV set proved one answer to the problem of what-to-do-with-hands on these shows. Mrs. Robert's guests just naturally petted Coco while they were on the set.

Tonight on "Actors' Studio," a Christmas video play called "The Man Who Lost Christmas" will be presented. It's on WMAL-TV at 8:30 p. m.

Bing Crosby will make his video debut at 9 tonight on WNBW when he appears in Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" on Philco Television Playhouse. Bing will appear near the close of the program with the Mitchell Boys Choir. Dennis King will play Scrooge.

Ellinor Benedict, who helps plan some of the WQQW classical music programs, will appear on the station "live" today at 2:15 p. m. in one of the concerts sponsored by funds from the American Federation of Musicians. A cellist with considerable classical training, she had enough popular appeal to win an Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scouts" show. Her program today will include Sammartini's Sonata in G major.

CHARLES PARMER, veteran Washington correspondent, begins a new radio series today at 2:05 p. m. on WPIK. The show lasts exactly 3 minutes and 30 seconds, with the three minutes going to some prominent speaker who will give his opinion on a point of hot controversy. Today's guest will be Oscar Chapman, Undersecretary of the Interior, who will discuss Federal control of tidelands oil.

The two big 4-6 p. m. holidays shows on Christmas Day are expected to read like this: On NBC, Al Jolson, Bob Hope, Don Ameche and Jo Stafford, to name a few. On CBS, Danny Kaye, Burns and Allen, the Andrews Sisters and Lionel Barrymore.

WGAY is really going to spread itself on Christmas shows. On Friday, from 7:30 a. m. until 1 p. m., all the shows will be broadcast from Holiday House in downtown Silver Spring. Coffee and cookies will be distributed to droppers-in. On Christmas Day, from 10 a. m. until 1 p. m., the station will play recorded Christmas songs and stories interspersed with "live" greetings.

What's Video Mean for Movies, Radio?

stations. Failing this, it's likely the present broadcasters will assume control.

About Theaters

WHAT about movie theaters? There are 18,000 movie theaters in the country today. It's not unlikely that the competition from television will decimate this number, will cut it down to the big first-run houses such as the string of six or seven on Wisconsin ave. in Milwaukee, will eliminate the neighborhood theater and close theaters in small towns within easy reach of big cities. The survivors will show far fewer pictures, possibly 10 or 12 a year, for long long runs at prices approximating those of a Broadway legitimate theater.

And radio. There is space here only for a couple of portents. There is a small, significant trend to put good, new, fairly expensive programs on in the day time to avoid the increasing competition from night-time television. This trend will almost certainly accelerate next year.

C. B. S. has raided and is continuing to raid N. B. C. for its most popular radio programs. Obviously, C. B. S. is trying with great success to build up the strongest program structure in radio.

If C. B. S., as seems likely, takes the lead in programming, it is in strong position to win over some great stations to its network. The primary reason at this late date is not to bolster its position in radio but to bolster its position in television. For the great pioneering stations in radio—KSD in St. Louis, WWJ in Detroit, WTMJ in Milwaukee, to mention only a few big N. B. C. stations—are pioneers in television, too, and worth their weight in two-million-dollar comedians to the network which has them on its string.

All in all, it's been a turbulent year, 1948. If I weren't mildly suspicious of the word, I'd say it was the beginning of one epoch and the end of another.

Bergen Signs Anew With Same Sponsor

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—Any shift in the Edgar Bergen show on NBC Sunday nights apparently has been put off at least 13 weeks. He has signed a contract extension with his sponsor (Standard Brands).

There have been persistent reports that Bergen might follow Jack Benny to CBS, possibly as one factor in a transfer of sponsors. This deal, in which the present sponsor proposed to release him, still is reported under consideration.

Meanwhile, Bergen has signed the two characters to which he gives vocal life to a radio acting job. They are to have roles in a Screen Guild version of "The Seven Dwarfs" on the Thursday night of Christmas week via NBC.

Charlie McCarthy will be Sneezy and Mortimer Snerd will be Bashful.

Some further facts and figures indicating that the introduction to television broadcasting is a costly venture is contained in the current financial report of the ABC network.

The report said flatly that a "decrease in net income is largely due to the loss from television operations." The network now has stations in New York, Chicago and Detroit with others in San Francisco and Los Angeles to come on later.

The report, covering the first nine months of this year, showed an estimated income of $440,000 after income taxes. This compared to $1,050,000 for the same period in 1947.

Newscasters to Do Show at Walter Reed

Appearing as guests at Walter Reed Hospital's annual Christmas party in Washington, NBC Newscasters Ray Henle, Ned Brooks and Felix Morley will do their Monday evening (WRC—6:45) broadcast from the Red Cross recreation hall at the hospital.

After the broadcast, the editors will take part in an informal hour and a half "quiz" program with Henle, Brooks and Morley acting as the panel of experts and hospital personnel and patients as "quizzers."

The American Theater Wing is sponsoring the party.

It's a Living, But Dunninger Has Puzzles

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—It's a good living, but Joseph Dunninger's mind reading exploits on stage and on the air bring him plenty of grief when he's not supposed to be at work.

"For instance," he relates, "when I arrive at a hotel the clerk frequently won't tell me the number of the room that's been reserved for me—I'm supposed to know.

"When I go into the coffee shop later to eat, the waitresses don't want to give me a menu. I'm supposed to know what's on it. I'm supposed to know the prices, too, and the amount of my check."

Dunninger's act, which has been presented throughout the country and in Europe and is now being featured on a Thursday night NBC television show, consists entirely of mind reading demonstrations. But the impression prevails among many, he says, that he's also a fortune teller "and I can't tell any more about the future than anybody else."

"Often when I'm changing trains," he says, "if the porter recognizes me, he wants to know what number will come up next day.

"One of the most frequent requests is for winning horses. I reply that you can't read a horse's mind. Even if you could, the horse might have the best intentions in the world and lose to a faster horse or change his mind during the race."

But Dunninger's pet peeve is the person who calls on the telephone and says: "Dunninger, tell me who's calling?"

He says he has had to have an unlisted telephone installed to get any rest at all.

A typical Dunninger demonstration is to ask who in the audience is concentrating on certain initials. After the person stands, Dunninger tells the full name that the person had in mind, plus two or three additional thoughts. Then, perhaps, he will have the subject look in the back of his watch at the serial number which Dunninger, on the stage, will repeat aloud.

Dunninger admits that skeptics comprise 90 per cent or more of his audiences—at least at the beginning.

Blind Man Fixes Things

He Lost His Sight, But Not His Vision

Carson Dennison, blind "fix it" man of Holtville, Ala., works on a boiler in the heating system he installed in a school

By Rex Thomas

HOLTVILLE, Ala., Dec. 18 (AP).—A blind man literally has the feel of this rural Alabama community.

He is 39-year-old Carson Dennison, and his talents as a mechanic, electrician, plumber and general fixer-upper are so much in demand the folks around here say they wouldn't know what to do without him.

He started to take a war job once, but the neighbors howled so much he stayed home.

The feeling of being useful is what Dennison has struggled for since he was 18. That's when he lost his eyesight.

His dream of independence has paid off in the cash register. He'll tackle anything from patching up a wheezing jalopy to diving in Lake Jordan to see if a boathouse piling is put down right. But he turns down work every day because he has more than he can do.

No Handicap

DENNISON doesn't consider his blindness a handicap, either. It's an asset. Like the time a customer brought in a typewriting machine so broken down nobody else would touch it.

"I couldn't see how bad it was," Dennison recalled, "so I fixed it."

"Carse" was only 6 when a playmate blasted his eyes with birdshot. There were intervals of seeing again out of one eye, but when he was 18 the light went out for good.

Despondent, he suffered through one operation after another for five years. Then one day in a New Orleans hospital, Dennison found a new light—from the inside.

"It's imagination," he says. "Most people talk about imagination so much they don't have a chance to think what it means."

Ignoring the advice of doctors, Dennison began to imagine he could be a mechanical engineer. He'd always wanted to be one.

"I didn't feel like I could stand a handout," Carse explained, looking up from the water gauge he was installing in a heating plant. "I wanted to do a job and send someone a bill and get paid like anyone else."

Big Projects

THAT'S WHAT he does. He finds time now and then to squeeze in small jobs, but most of his work lately goes into big projects, like the heating systems he put in at Holtville High School and the grade school at nearby Eclectic.

Difficult wiring jobs don't bother him. The refrigeration unit he installed at the high school had 150 separate connections, but he got every one right.

When he takes on work like that, his wife reads the blueprints aloud and he memorizes them. Fellow workers help him figure out the color schemes that tell electricians which wires go where.

Once he got crossed up—a helper turned out to be color blind. But Carse connected the wires the way he thought they should go when he ran a test to see if they were right, they were.

Expect It to Be Good

DENNISON likes to take on jobs that others have bungled or given up. Strangely, he says customers expect better workmanship from him than they do from others. When he bids on a project, he insists on being put on an equal footing with his competitors.

"A blind man has only to conquer his inferiority complex to really be a free man," is his philosophy. "A blind man loses his sight but not his vision, and vision is what makes men create things."

He can joke about it, too.

"Carse," a friend asked him one day, "how come you won't let me hold your arm when we're walking, but you always hold mine?"

Dennison came back with this one:

"Because a man was holding my arm once and led me into a ditch. If I hold your arm and you walk into a hole, I can turn loose. And if you walk me into a hole on purpose, I can pull you in with me."

Agency at Northwestern Has 16,000 Jobs in Year

EVANSTON, Ill., Dec. 18.—More than 16,000 jobs were listed with Northwestern University's placement services by business, industry and schools during 1948, Frank S. Endicott, director of placement, has announced. One of the biggest job markets in the Midwest, Northwestern's placement bureau this year helped 4500 students, graduating seniors and alumni to find all or part time positions. More than 1300 different companies from all parts of the country sent requests to the university for graduating seniors; 225 companies sent interviewers to the campus here to select men for jobs; and more than 600 business concerns in the Chicago area called the university for part-time help.

The largest number of calls, 7500, was for men in business and industry. Teaching ranked next with 5000. The highest average starting salary for teachers with Ph. D. degrees was $4400 for a school year. Teachers with master's degrees were offered $3200 for a school year, and beginners with bachelor's degrees and no experience averaged $2400 for the school year.

A total of 860 graduating seniors in business, journalism, engineering and teaching were placed in jobs by the several placement offices of the university, and at least 620 alumni with experience in teaching or business found positions through the alumni placement director. Approximately 2400 part-time jobs were filled by students earning part of their school expenses. The medical school assisted 140 of its new graduates to get internships in hospitals throughout the Nation. Ninety-five per cent of 1948 law graduates, placed primarily by the law school itself, have entered practice or Government agencies, and 5 per cent have gone into business, Fred E. Inbau, professor of law, estimated.

Hollins College Gets Gift

Hollins College, Va., Dec. 18.—A gift has been made to Hollins College by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur K. Kuhn of New York to enable students in international relations to attend outstanding conferences in that field. "Our purpose is to enable the faculty to select one of the best junior students to attend meetings of the United Nations or any of its committees or of some other institute or conference selected by the faculty, to thus permit the student to acquire applied knowledge within the field by direct observation or participation," the donors explained.

Simplicity Marks Latin Works

By Jane Watson Crane

WE FOUND the little show of Latin American religious painting at the Pan American Union charming, partly because it is so utterly unpretentious. It ranges from a very fine example of the sixteenth century, belonging to the Colonial Museum in Quito and lent through the courtesy of the Embassy of Ecuador, to simple devotional tablets painted by the unschooled three centuries later. It touches on the leading schools of their time and suggests that the tradition of religious painting, which took root in the new world soon after the Spanish Conquest, has widened into a people's art.

One of the pleasures of travel in Latin America is to come upon, by accident or design, a church in some remote spot which still treasures an impressive painting done by a European painter centuries ago. We can recall the reverential manner in which an Indian pulled aside the velvet curtain in a little church in Mexico to reveal a large canvas rashly referred to in the guide book as a Titian. The derivation of the painting seemed to fade in importance by comparison to the value which was placed on it here.

Even the greatest of religious paintings lose some of their luster when they are removed from the settings for which they were intended and placed side by side against the walls of a museum. Viewed alone, one will brighten a whole interior, whereas together so many resemble each other in character and design that the effect is monotonous.

Variety Achieved

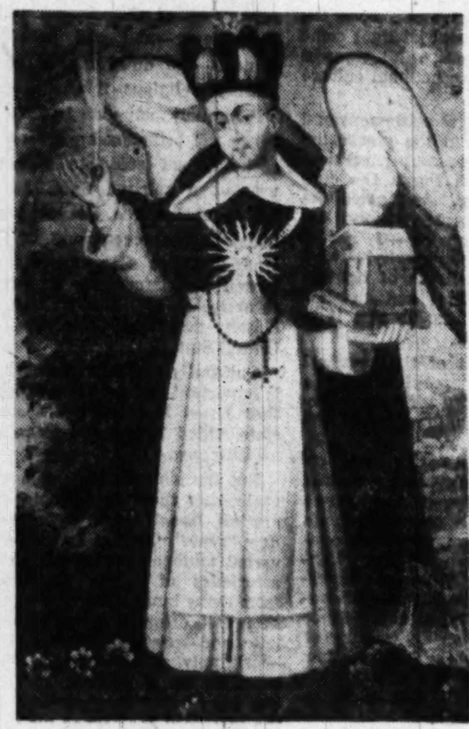
SOME VARIETY has been achieved in the group at the Pan American Union, and the assemblage being small, each item stands out. European painters of the time of the Spanish Conquest got about more than one would suppose; they brought to the Western Hemisphere Flemish and Italian influence, as well as those of Spain and Portugal.

One of the gems of this collection is a seventeenth century painting by an unknown artist of the school of Cuzco entitled "The Christ Child as an Apprentice Carpenter"; it could have been done in the Netherlands. This painting is one of several lent by the Brooklyn Museum, from which also came an eighteenth century St. Thomas Aquinas, a small, well-preserved painting revealing the philosopher-saint balancing a church in one hand, a quill pen in the other. The handsomest portrait in the group is the "Reverend Mother Maria Antonia de Rivera," an eighteenth century Mexican painting lent by the Philadelphia Museum.

Oswald Bridge of Mount Rainier has lent a canvas of the Madonna, also Mexican and believed to be of the same period. The painting, retrieved by the owner from oblivion here in the District, has been the subject of careful research by his son to determine its origin and meaning.

Some Folk Art

TWO LITTLE nineteenth century ex-votos from Antigua, Guatemala, are folk art, very similar in character, if not in theme, to the prints of Jose Guadalupe Posada in Mexico and the consciously imitative contemporary paintings of Frida Rivera. The simple panels from Venezuela are also popular painting, but their models were the earlier religious paintings of European origin.



Peru colonial painting, "St. Thomas Aquinas," artist unknown, currently on display at Pan American Union

The periods touched on so briefly in the Pan American Union show are the least known in this country. There are now a good many examples of the Inca, Mayan, and other pre-Conquest Indian civilizations in our museums, and some of the contemporary Latin American artists have become widely known. But there is almost no art material of the years between. The only country of which a comprehensive survey has been made is Mexico. A handsome exhibition covering 20 centuries of Mexican art was put on by the Museum of Modern Art in 1940. A similar project for Brazil was contemplated by the Whitney Museum, but it was dropped in face of the obvious difficulties of transportation during the war.

All phases of the life and development of Latin American are revealed through the arts—the Indian, the Hispanic, the later European influences, and the return to the indigenous in the twentieth century. The possibilities for exhibition material are great, the field still relatively unexplored.

Degas Drawings on Exhibit in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP) —There are drawings by Degas at Durand-Ruel's, paintings by Sert at Knoedler's, new John Marin works at An American Place, a comprehensive show of Canadian paintings at the Canadian Club, gift pottery at Greenwich House; and the Metropolitan Museum has just lent art worth $750,000 to the Toronto Art Gallery, where the show opened yesterday.

New members of the American Academy of Arts and Letters are William Faulkner, John Steinbeck, Leon Kroll and Mark Van Doren.

The Autographed First Editions Club, Ltd., has just opened for business at 16 East 43rd street, New York 17; books tentatively scheduled are by Edwin Corle, Robert Graves, James Branch Cabell, Graham Greene and Frank Lloyd Wright.

And don't forget to listen to carols on the air waves next weekend.

Artists, Parents Put Out Books for Children

ARTISTS have collaborated with parents in an effort to provide animated attractive reading matter at low cost to challenge the comics. Launched last April by four families in Mamaroneck, the project, now dubbed the Once-Upon-A-Time Group, has issued its first book—Hans Christian Andersen's "Nightingale" with illustrations by the well-known Chinese-American artist, Dong Kingman.

Waldo Pierce's illustrations for a new ten-cent animated volume of Red Riding Hood is expected to reach the stands shortly.

Other artists, all affiliated with the Midtown Galleries in New York, who will illustrate children's books are Doris Rosenthal, Isaac Soyer, Emlen Etting, and Julian Binford. At present Once-Upon-A-Time books are for sale only in Westchester, but the publishers claim they will see those desiring them will get copies if they send a card to Once-Upon-A-Time Press, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

"We are not naive enough," say the sponsors, "to believe that our art, our style, our editing will change overnight a reading pattern so deeply ingrained in the daily life of our children. We believe, however, that there is a way of improving and gradually changing the media without shouting futilely for its eradication."

Some paintings not previously shown in Washington are included in the exhibition by U. S. Navy Combat artists at George Washington University Library to January 10. The library is open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Mondays through Fridays; from 9 to 5 p.m. Saturdays, 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays. It will be closed during the Christmas recess, December 24 to 28.

Work by students of the Institute of Contemporary Arts will be on view at the Dupont Theater on Dupont Circle until the middle of January. This is the first in a series of shows planned for this theater.

Opening this afternoon at the Arts Club is an exhibition of paintings and sketches by the Landscape Club of Washington.

The National Gallery of Art has on sale reproductions from its collections, in color and black and white, some for very modest prices, that make attractive and distinctive Christmas cards.

I. Rice Pereira, who has a one-man show at the Barnett Aden Gallery, is one of the best known abstract painters in this country. An able technician, she has experimented with various new materials, projecting new ideas in their development with clarity and precision.

Franklin C. Watkins has completed two big mural panels for the home of Henry P. McIlhenny in Germantown, Pa. Studies for the completed works are now in the artist's one-man show at the Rehn Galleries in New York.

This afternoon from 4 to 8 p. m., there will be an exhibition of paintings by students of Ralph De Burgos at his school, 627 F st. nw.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York has announced the establishment of a new department of American art and the appointment of Robert Beverly Hale as associate curator, in charge. Now teaching drawing and anatomy at the Art Students League, Mr. Hale will join the Metropolitan staff January 1. The museum for the first time will initiate a series of exhibitions of contemporary American art. The announcement follows the recent severance of ties between the Metropolitan and the Whitney Museum of American Art.

D. C. Players Run Master Points Up

By Marian H. Barre

CONCLUDED last Sunday in Miami Beach, Fla., the twenty-second annual National Tournament boosted the master point total of several District players, the lion's share going to Charles C. Johnson, who was runner-up in mixed pairs, sole world championship on the program. Paired with Mrs. Frank Meyer of Richmond, Johnson lost to two first magnitude stars, Mrs. Wilkinson Wagar of Atlanta, Ga., and John Crawford of Philadelphia. Victory hung on the round in which these teams played each other.

Another feature in the local cap came in the open team match when Fred L. Karpin and J. J. Parish were fourth on the honor roll after leading in the finals, teamed with Fisher of Baltimore and Salasky of Richmond. This game ended in a "photo finish" among the first five teams, former Washingtonian Alvin Roth being captain of one of these line-ups.

District women also made an excellent showing. Mrs. Harold Young, Mrs. Breckenridge Long, Mrs. George Kathan and Mrs. Jack Long, finished fourth in the distaff championship. A disputed decision knocked them out of second in the opening session. Mrs. Kathan picked up some more points playing with her husband when they were runners-up in Tamiami pairs, losing by a half-point. Mrs. Frederick Eberson and J. G. Stone annexed awards for a session second in the opens. And the record may still be incomplete. Some Capitalites lingered on in the Florida sunshine.

FEDERAL BRIDGE LEAGUE teams enter the second round of the semiannual play-off tomorrow evening with the "Bafflers" leading Section A with 14½ matches; team members playing on December 13 were Sherman, Graham, Edminster and Stewart. There was a tie for top in Section B between the Owls and the Allies, the former playing Scruggs, Grewe, Walker and Richter; the Allies, Higgins, Hodgkins, Graham and Mathews.

Third and final round of the play-offs will not be held until January 3, as the monthly master point pair game takes place on December 27. The annual meeting and election of officers has been called for 7:15 p. m. on January 3; W. E. Mobley is chairman of the nominating committee, Miss Laurie Hunter serves in a similar capacity on the audit committee.

There will be no postponements in the Washington Bridge during the holidays, game being scheduled on December 22 and 29, first-half of the season ending on the latter date.

MISS Laurie Hunter and Rush Buckley, leaders in the first round of the mixed pair championship at Arlington Farms, romped home with the title after collecting awards for the final round also. Their total score was 307½ match points, giving them a 15½-point over Mrs. John Fletcher and W. A. Poissant, who climbed up to second place during the finals. Another pair who edged upward were Mrs. Edward St. John and Paul Blasangame, in third spot for the over-all, while first-session runners-up, Capt. and Mrs. J. L. Herlihy, dropped down to fourth.

The December quota of national awards at La Salle Studios will be in competition tomorrow evening, play beginning at 8 o'clock.

The duplicate section of the Capital City Chess Club expects to meet as usual on December 23, but the club will be closed on Christmas. Annual open pair championship of this organization goes into play on January 4, with finals on the 11th.

At the bimonthly benefit game under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Washington Bridge League, President Mrs. H. G. Campbell scored another victory—it's becoming a habit! She was paired with Mrs. Marian H. Barre in the north-south position. East-west winners were Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson, both leaders having more than a board margin over the runners-up, who were Mrs. H. A. Walker, Mrs. St. John and the Herlihys.

The auxiliary's special Christmas charity fund is being used to outfit two young wards of Central Union Mission. While contributions of money or clothing were to be in by December 15, it may not be too late for last-minute donors to contribute. Phone Mrs. R. S. DuBois, chairman of the welfare committee, at WO. 4496.

Euclid Studios, where games are held each Friday evening, will be closed on Chrismtas Eve, but open New Year's Eve for the annual festive get-together.

The Agriculture Bridge Club's final game for 1948 was played last Tuesday, January 4 being the date scheduled for next meeting.

Are We Heading for New 'Too Many Stamps' Era?

By William M. Stuart

THE announcement that a commemorative stamp will be issued early in January in honor of Puerto Rico, despite opposition of Postoffice Department officials, seems to point to a repetition of the 1948 program of "too many stamps." It remains a mystery why a new stamp should be authorized just because a new governor is to be inaugurated in Puerto Rico. Three or four new stamps are already on the 1949 program and because of numerous suggestions many others may be issued, tentatively with the aid of Congress.

Although during this year there was much opposition to so many stamps, collectors, of course, bought all new issues. A program filled with commemoratives will do the hobby no good. Although the veto message of President Truman last June gave the real reason why it was bad policy to issue so many stamps, nothing was gained, for the stamp in question was finally issued, as well as many others.

It is not good policy to urge the public to pay for apparently unneeded stamps; perhaps it would be a good thing if the society organized to suppress useless issues were revived. Many years ago such a society did operate in England with great success, and an organization of like purpose might be very helpful to philately in this country.

THE 6-cent air mail stamp of 1941 still on sale at the Philatelic Agency and supplied throughout the country will be used until exhausted and the new 6-cent stamp will be ready for first-day sale in Washington on January 18. First-day cancellations will be serviced at the Washington postoffice. The new air mail rate becomes effective on January 1.

There were 511,990 first-day cancellations of the 3-cent Gettysburg Address commemorative stamp on November 19 at Gettysburg, Pa., and 1,140,000 stamps sold. At Cincinnati, Ohio, on November 20, first day of the 3-cent American Turners commemorative, 434,090 first-day cancellations were recorded and 1,380,000 stamps sold.

The sales at the Philatelic Agency for November, 1948, totaled $300,264.66.

The Bureau of Posts of the Canal Zone will issue a new 4-cent air mail stamp of the current series and a new 6-cent air mail stamped envelope on January 3, 1949. The 4-cent stamp will be pink and the design and size will be the same as other Canal Zone air-mail issues. The 6-cent envelope will be of the embossed type, No. 13 size, with the customary markings. The stamp will be blue and about the size of the regular air mail stamp.

DURING 1949-1950 there will be an exhibition celebrating the bicentennial of the founding of Port-au-Prince. Under the supervision of the Philatelic Division of the Pan American Union there will be a large stamp exhibition as well as special issues of stamps.

At the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., in Pythian Temple on Tuesday evening Ernest Woodhouse exhibited his large and beautiful collections of United States proofs. His collection is complete as to postal varieties. Ellery Denison presided. Nonresident member No. 1, John Steele, jr., of Wynne Wood, Pa., was a guest of the evening. At the meeting on Tuesday evening an auction will be the feature. The meeting will be held in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

Berlin Fails to Impress Israelis

By Fred M. Hechinger

TEL AVIV (Delayed).—An important Berlin incident the other day—sure to get banner headlines in Europe and America—was reported in five insignificant lines on an inside page of the Jerusalem Palestine Post. This is merely an outward indication of a noticeable isolationism of interest which is growing here.

With the war for survival still a reality, this could hardly be otherwise. At present at least, the battles of the Negev make the Rhine and the Elbe seem faraway rivers. With a two-power Jerusalem, in which daily shellings and daily victims of snipers' bullets are routine, an arrested Yank in four-power Berlin seems like a minor grievance.

More important is the influence of inevitable war-born isolation and nationalism on the long-term cultural picture. Statehood defended under fire and citizenship forged by long years of brutal persecution cannot fail to have their effect. If defensive necessity has created a bipartisan foreign and military policy in America, the same necessity, a hundred times magnified, has created an all-party agreement here which culminates in the question of immigration and the integration of immigrants into the national pattern.

Language First Question

ONE OF THE primary questions is that of language. Hebrew has been adopted as the one and only national tongue, and its effective use is being pushed actively and with determination.

As a result there does not exist any but Hebrew theater in this center of Israeli culture today. Foreign-language performances are "discouraged." Although—or because?—a considerable percentage of all immigrants speak Yiddish, that language is entirely out of favor and is being almost systematically eliminated.

It is safe to say that within 10 years Hebrew will be as completely the Israeli language as English in America, though perhaps not quite as completely as French in France.

While this is an essential part of national consolidation, it cannot be interpreted as narrow cultural isolationism. Children will be taught English and Arabic on a compulsory basis even in elementary school. They will be able to read foreign literature in spite of the present drive to create a Hebrew national literature.

Practical developments have influenced reading habits. The window of one of the best bookshops here shows "English Pistols and Revolvers," "Modern American Pistols and Revolvers" and "The Gunsmith's Manuel" flanked by "The Birth of Israel" and "The Wisdom of Israel." But the same display includes "The Oxford Companion to Music," Thomas Mann's "Joseph and His Brothers," Ilka Chase's "Free Admission," the works of Steinbeck and Hemingway, and "The Gathering Storm," by Winston Churchill.

National Culture

A CABINET minister, questioned on the prospect of Israel's cultural direction, told me: "We won't become culturally provincial. We will open the windows wide and let light come in from all sides. But we will develop our own national culture in the process."

Since the rural settlement and the factory form the pioneering core of the country, rural and labor education forms the core of all learning. And since the worker and farmer started out with basic equality—if not a measure of superiority!—there was never any issue of fighting for equal cultural and classical education for him: he gets it as a matter of fact.

A by-product of the practical emphasis on work has been a marked disregard for formal academic study on the part of the young generation.

Inevitably this "anti-intellectual" trend has created a certain cleaveage between the young people and the old immigrants who have grown up on an educational diet ranging from London theater and Milton to the pessimistic intellectualism of Schopenhauer and Nietzsche. Since this is a pioneering country of youth and of the future, few tears are shed over this temporary swing of the pendulum to the other extreme.

Israel Theater

IN THE absence of a current national theatrical repertory, a great number of foreign plays have been translated. Strangely the most successful American adaptation has been "You Can't Take It With You." But more logically the tragedies of Euripides and Sophocles have been successfully translated and performed. Greek tragedy has been found singularly effective in Hebrew.

Films present a separate problem. At present the scene is entirely dominated by American pictures with a sprinkling of French products. Although I can't read Hebrew, the symbols for "Rita Hayworth" are now a firm picture in my mind. But while "O.S.S." may have a very real topical appeal in Tel Aviv just now, it seems doubtful that the American film—certain great and universal pictures like "The Best Years of Our Lives" excepted—will prove satisfactory in the long run.

There is some talk of the building of a native film industry. It is pointed out that the climate and light here would be little short of the ideal for successful technical productions.

The problem of the radio is still in its early discussion stage. People are generally not too well satisfied with the present "Voice of Israel" which continues to flounder indecisively between B. B. C. traditions and typically European state-controlled broadcasting. At present the British Forces Programme, offered to the troops on nearby Cyprus, has quite a following here, particularly for listeners of light music.

Since there is a considerable public aversion to radio commercials, it seems likely that eventually a modified public service corporation, not very different from B. B. C., will be the outcome—possibly faced with some cooperative competition.

Toughest Nut

PROBABLY the toughest nut to be cracked in the near future is that of religious education in public schools. Thinking mistakenly of Israel as a religiously founded state, most people regard that question as a contradiction in terms. Actually Israel is in no way a church-state or theocracy, although the small orthodox minority would like to see a move in that direction.

The majority insist on strict separation of church and state. They favor—and will probably achieve—the outlawing of compulsory religious instruction in all publicly supported schools. Since the orthodox opposition is certainly not going to give up without a spirited fight, Israel will probably see similar legal bouts as the recent one in the United States Supreme Court. Israeli legislators are expected to arrive at decisions which will closely resemble those in the United States.

Culturally and educationally it is important and probably unique that Israel is starting out as a state which knows and tolerates no illiteracy.

But far more important is the realization that the second generation Israeli is a completely new "type." He has lost all the varied national and ethnic characteristics of a the emigrants from many lands. By appearance he is tall, often light-haired, athletic and—particularly the male—strikingly goodlooking. In his behavior he is reticent at first, but laconically outspoken when the foreigner has earned his confidence.

The Israeli acts with visible self-assurance (not dissimilar to the Dane or the Norwegian) which is not arrogant because it need not be defensive. Work, battle and unity of purpose have created a love for rough and Spartan living and a carefree recklessness which finds at least one outlet in the most reckless driving ever survived in my travels.

I have carefully avoided the use of the word "Jewish;" for it is obvious that the Israelis are building a new state which—within 20 or 30 years—will not be Jewish in anything but vague historic background. For better or for worse, its culture, education and people will simply be Israeli.

Gettysburg Gets MS

Gettysburg, Pa., Dec. 18 — Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas, author, has presented the original manuscript of his latest book, "The Big Fisherman," to Gettysburg College. Gettysburg is the third college to receive an original manuscript from Dr. Douglas. The manuscript of "The Robe" is at Yale and the manuscript of "White Banners" is at the University of Illinois, where Dr. Douglas served as director of religious work for several years.

Inquiries concerning the course should be addressed to Philip H. Watts, at the Florida ave. address.

Colgate Gets Grant

Hamilton N. Y., Dec. 18 — Colgate's preceptorial studies program, launched 15 years ago through a grant of the Carnegie Foundation, has been bolstered by a new grant of $60,000 in support of the next four years' operations.

Colgate's revised preceptorial studies, which form an integral part of Colgate's postwar plan of education, teams 36 faculty and graduate preceptors under the direction of Dr. Strang Lawson, professor of English.

The program gives particular attention to developing in the individual student a skill and judgment in the analysis of problems and effectiveness of statement.

Wilson to Give New Course On Marriage Next Semester

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Dec. 18.—A new course on "Marriage and the Family," which Wilson College will offer for the first time next semester, will be based in part by the results of a survey of Wilson students' social life and their opinions on marriage. The survey was conducted earlier this year by the department of sociology. It revealed that the majority of Wilson students had their first dates with boys when they were in the 12-to-14-year group.

The girl from the city or suburban community began dating earlier than her contemporary from the rural areas. For the girl with "brothers only," first dates came earlier than for the only child or the girl with "sisters only."

In general, the survey indicates, the present generation of students comes to college with a longer experience in boy-girl friendship than their predecessors, whose social life with boys usually started at a higher age level.

The best time to become engaged is after college, according to 52 per cent of those queried, while 35 per cent favor engagements by the time of graduation. Seventy-four per cent of the freshmen approve long engagements, compared with 35 per cent of the seniors.

Gainful employment is preferred to parental subsidies as the means of advancing the time of marriage. Financial aid from parents, except in emergencies, may endanger the independence of a marriage, it is felt.

Eighty-five per cent of Wilson students approve of women working after marriage, so long as there is no interference with the responsibilities of motherhood. Those who take jobs after marriage will do so either from necessity or the wish to provide "extras," the students feel. Dislike of housework will be the determining factor for only 5 per cent.

Marital adjustment, management of the family income, problems of parenthood and development of family solidarity will be among the subjects for study in the new course.

Williamsburg Drips History

By Orval Hopkins

LIKE the people in that little book who were all going to be equal—only some more equal than others—everything is historical down Virginia way, some things more historical than others. Probably at the peak of this historicity, or perhaps historicitude, is the triangle in the Tidewater sector pointed by Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown. As a mossy, historical report I have here says, "This small area with its concentration of significant historical sites is one of the outstanding tourist meccas of the Nation . . . These three milestones of American history, lying within unique proximity to each other, are only 150 miles from the Washington area, making possible an easy weekend visit." See?

OUR OWN THOUGHT for This Week, with the customary apologies: "Las Vegas, Nev.—According to Jason Lucas, nationally known fishing authority, all fish come from vegetables. 'All fish life is based on vegetable life,' Lucas says. 'Tiny creatures breed on the vegetation, larger eat these, and so on until one reaches creatures big enough to serve as food for game fishes'." From Steve Hannagan Associates.

WHISTLE STOPS: Sidney Wheeler, naval veteran of two wars, has been named chief steward of the Queen of Bermuda, which returns to the New York-Bermuda service on February 12. Wheeler was resident manager of the St. George Hotel in Bermuda from 1935 to 1938 . . . "Every dollar spent by the Denver Convention and Visitors Bureau in advertising the tourist attractions of the Denver area yields local merchants direct, traceable returns of $283.24," the Bureau says. Well, a man I know went to the races with 100 fish, and afterward was able to speak of direct, traceable losses of $98. He sneaked out 2 bucks for lunch and carfare . . . Henry Ingrand, president of the European Travel Commission, says encouragement of travel between citizens of peace-loving nations is the quickest way toward establishment of European economic stability and world unity. And you can't argue with that . . . A correspondent in Concord, N. H., points out that "a cross section of the throng that spends winter days among the 'White Hills' shows a wide range between the 'sit-by-the-fire' and the expert." One toasts, the other coasts, and I know which is the wiser.

TAKE IT AWAY AND MAKE 'EM LIKE IT DEPT.: Western Air Lines of Los Angeles announces that it is eliminating free meals on its entire system and "passing the savings along to the traveling public." This will result in a saving of 5 per cent on all fares, Western says. Terrell C. Drinkwater, president of Western, says the line is not engaging in a "rate war" in making the fare reduction, nor is it cutting into its revenues in eliminating meals. "Actually," he says, "the net yield will be the same or a little more. We are merely eliminating the cost of meals from the price of our tickets and passing this saving along to the public." In other words, you simply take the five bucks or whatever you save, smear it with ketchup, slam it between two pieces of bread and eat it. Anything wrong with that?

THE ANNUAL college week ski meet will be held New Year's weekend at Lake Placid, N. Y. It's sponsored by the Lake Placid Club's Sno Birds. At the western end of the State the Ellicottville Ski Club is sponsoring an invitation meet for the same weekend . . . A half-million tourists visit Boulder Dam annually. For 30 cents you can go on a conducted tour of the big plant which takes you 700 feet into its bowels . . . Holland-America Line's Veendam has docked in Hoboken, N. J., and on January 13 will shove off for Europe via Bermuda . . . The Alpine ski lift at Speculator, N. Y., cost $85.000, is 3000 feet long and can handle 600 skiers per hour . . . The new Tower Isle Hotel on the north shore of the island of Jamaica has opened for year-round operation . . . The Caronia, new Cunarder, has an asbestos "overcoat," considered the latest curve in shipbuilding fashion. The coating is designed to keep out heat in the summer and cold in the winter . . . Two well-known French musicians have returned to France on the DeGrasse: Francis Poulenc, famed composer and pianist, and Pierre Bernac, concert singer . . . Ned Regen, new managing director of the Riviers Hotel at Daytona Beach, Fla., says the hotel is being renovated and redecorated. When all is done, there will be no increase in prices, Ned says.

PUERTO RICO in February is starting work on its new 12-million-dollar Isla Verde International Airport. Runways will be 8000 feet long and eventual plans will include an airport hotel, lounges and restaurants for passengers, and a big automobile parking area . . . A dinner given recently in Cherokee, N. C., featured an all-Indian menu including such as parched corn, chestnut bread and bean bread, roast bear, roast deer, barbecued rattlesnake, spicewood tea and hickorynut milk . . . Awright, awright—Merry Christmas.

Visit to Nassau Can Give Taste of Foreign Clime

By S. R. Bayley

WHEN your vacation plans take you to Miami or Miami Beach this season, plan an interlude into one of the close-by islands for a taste of foreign atmosphere. Nassau in the Bahamas is a choice to top your list.

What about Nassau? First of all it is the shortest trip in travel time from Miami and the climate is wonderfully mild enough for swimming and all outdoor sports. The lovely beaches, shops along Bay Street stocked with British merchandise—sweaters, gloves, silver, etc.—the native market overflowing with hand-woven, gayly designed bags, hats and slippers, its excellent hotel accommodations, make Nassau a lure for more and more Americans each season.

British South American Airways—a subsidiary of B. O. A. C.—has convenient flights scheduled from Miami to Nassau, with running time of exactly one hour each way. The trip is smooth and comfortable, with British personnel most considerate of your pleasures. Flying at about 8000 feet on a clear day, over famous Cat Cay, Bimini and Andron Islands, may be compared to skimming over an iridescent pool of jewel tone blue and green, topped with a few fleecy clouds and dotted with many little islands that make up the Bahamas. Refreshments are served, depending on the time of the day—of course, coffee on the morning trip.

No passports are required and every effort is made to expedite the British customs checking so no time is wasted. If vacation permits as little as one day to make the trip to foreign shores, British South American Airways can accomplish it for you. Leave Miami for Nassau about 9 a. m., arriving at 10 a. m.

Time ashore can be spent shopping, poking into all the interesting parts of town, including a leisurely luncheon at possibly the Royal Victoria Hotel—then a tour of the island under the capable direction of Playtours, returning in time to enjoy the grand old British custom of four o'clock tea. If preference runs to other refreshments, relaxing with one of Nassau's famous punches might be your choice.

Returning to Miami via British South Sea Airways brings you directly over Miami Beach and Miami when the resorts are lighted for the night. It is a breathtaking spectacle, somewhat like a huge Christmas tree—extending its brilliant branches from the ocean to the everglades—a fitting climax to a day or days to be long remembered.

Many Yachts Cruising South

Morehead City, N. C.—From Elizabeth City to Southport observers of Inland Waterway traffic are saying the greatest southward movement of pleasure craft in the history of the big ditch is under way.

Every type of pleasure craft, from small vessels powered by outboard motors to half million dollar yachts up to 150 feet in length are in the southward movement. Once it was considered unusual for a dozen yachts to stop in Morehead City for supplies, but today, especially at this season, it is not unusual for several dozen to stop during the day or for overnight anchorage.

Elizabeth City reported last week that 93 yachts had stopped there on a single day.

Welcome to Fox Hunts

Tyron, N. C.—This is one of the fox-huntingest resorts in the mid-South, and visitors who want to participate are heartily welcomed by members of the Tryon Hounds. Semiformal hunts are the rule—some live, some drag—and spectators are also welcomed. Each Thursday's hunt is planned so that part of it may be seen from the roads.

Riders pay a capping fee of $5. For information, write Carey Page, secretary, Tryon Hounds, Tryon, N. C.

What You Don't Put Up With at Palm Springs

By Aline Mosby

PALM Springs, Calif., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—It's open season on wallets at Palm Springs now, and celebrities are swarming in to put up with things they never stand for at home.

This colossus on the desert has the slogan, "where the sun shines on the stars." Many stars have another slogan and don't see much sun: "Early to bed, early to rise and you meet few important people."

Palm Springs is built hard by a big mountain, so the sun goes down at 4 o'clock, anyway.

In Hollywood a guy has phones near his bathtub, bar, swimming pool and gin rummy table. He's lucky if he can find one here. The phone company says they're scarce. The manager at the Biltmore Hotel complains it takes him two hours to call the linen room. If you live in the outskirts, a call to town gets routed through a couple of other towns first.

For citizens used to the gay life, the Stables Club features Jimmie Davis. His cowboy band lets loose on floor 2 with the former Governor vocalizing "You Are My Sunshine," etc. The former secretary of State of Louisiana plays the electric gee-tar. Davis says night club managing is not as confusing as Louisiana politics, however.

Movie stars in bare midriffs and diamond-studded sunglasses hang around the Racquet Club, run by former movie star Charlie Farrell, who hauls out a print of "Seventh Heaven" for anybody who'll watch. This homey place has a huge swimming pool that hardly anyone uses. The bar faces both the pool and the tennis courts, thus giving spectators an impression of exercise.

Diners are ordered by sign, "Dont bawl out our waiters. In their bracket they don't have to take it." When the bartender hollers, "Everybody buy a drink," everybody does.

This is Major, our pet white cockatoo. Every Deauville guest knows him, and probably feels the same amused affection for him that we do. He appears in this advertisement because we think he's handsome, and because we feel you'd like a change from all the palm trees—but we won't strain your credulity by implying that he has a message for you.

Something you can believe, however, is the very moderate tariff for truly luxurious accommodations at the MACFADDEN-DEAUVILLE, with its magnificent private beach, attractive guest rooms (air conditioned, if desired), world-famous swimming pool, complete health department, smart shops, Beach Terrace, cool dining rooms and cocktail lounges.

Merry Christmas to You, Santa Claus.

TO YOU WITH THE WHITE WHISKERS, the jolly laugh and the generous hand. We know you by the above likeness, but even more than that we recognize you by your spirit. Should you appear this year in the form of the friendly neighbor, the doctor, shoemaker, boss, baker, candlestick-maker, policeman on the beat or the air pilot flying the lift onto Berlin—we will recognize you readily.

Whatever your devious ways and your myriad guises, Santa Claus, we know you for what you are. You are a matter of giving. For our part though, we wish we could give you some things. "Give them to each other," you'd likely say. Well, we can at least wish you things: a heavier pack, a larger mailing list, more reindeers, a greater toy and candy factory—and a television set. To see at a glance the happiness you bring to the homes and hearts of all mankind.

So here's to you, Santa. For spreading good will among men, for bringing something of heaven onto earth, we wish you a very Merry Christmas, too.

The Turning Point

George J. Schulmerich

He saw that Christmas bells would never fail again

YULETIDE CHURCH BELLS will ring in many places this year where they've never rung before because a young electrical engineer once spent a grim Christmas on a visit to his old home town.

George J. Schulmerich grew up in a small Pennsylvania town, and every Christmas morning he would sit beside his pastor while the bells pealed a special rendition of "Silent Night." It might be played dozens of times during Christmas Week, but this one selection was for him.

The custom continued through the years. Even after George went to Philadelphia to become a struggling manufacturer of sound equipment, he never failed to return for a chat with the pastor as they listened to the bells' "Silent Night."

Came Christmas Day, 1933, and Schulmerich, coat collar pressed against numbing ears, carefully picked his way along icy streets to the church. As he approached, strange sounds, muffled and flat, came from the belfry. Soon, the pastor, trembling and pale, appeared. "That tuneless noise you heard was our bells," was his plaintive greeting. "The cold has cracked them. There'll be no bell music this Christmas. Maybe, never again for I'm afraid we can't afford new ones."

For months, the young engineer pondered how to lower the cost of church bells and at the same time make them more durable. Then, one day he found the answer in his own field — electronics.

To Schulmerich, inventor of "carillonic bells," and at 42 considered the largest manufacturer of church bells in the world, it has brought wealth and fame. But of far greater comfort is the smile that has returned to the ruddy face of an aging pastor in a small Pennsylvania town.

● Newark, N. J. traffic court is held in well-lighted, ventilated building four nights and one afternoon a week for motorists' convenience. Judge Joseph J. Tully presides.

Our Traffic Courts

Too many of them take the motorist for a ride

BY JAMES B. GOLDEN

THOUSANDS OF AMERICAN MOTORISTS are on winter vacations or planning them. A great majority will leave their homes for a few weeks and will complete their journeys to and from northern and southern resorts without mishap. The minority will not be so fortunate. They will meet The Law.

Some of the nation's 33 million car owners will be haled into courts for thoughtless or willful violations of traffic laws and will be justly punished. Others will not fare so well. They will see impartial justice turned into a brute wielding a club.

For years, motorists travelling outside their home states, and sometimes within, have been subjected to soak-the-stranger tactics — unjustified detention, abuse, threats, mock trials on trumped up charges, and fines outrageously high. There is no reason to believe that this year will be any different from last year when indignant reports of such cases flowed into scattered state offices and Washington headquarters of the American Automobile Association.

These complaints, the greater number originating in Georgia and Florida, others from every state in the nation, were not the ordinary gripes of men and women irritated by tickets for overtime parking.

They were from drivers like Francis H. Taylor, a Newark, N. J. businessman, who first met The Law after 35 years of driving without a violation.

Driver was Bound for Florida

Driving outside Elizabeth City, No. Car., last February, bound for Florida, he passed a trailer truck, noticed a car driven by a police officer pass him in the opposite direction.

This car swung around, came abreast of Taylor, and the officer ordered him to follow. At the Elizabeth City police station the officer accused Taylor of reckless driving and of forcing him off the road. Taylor protested, said he was innocent.

He was told to tell it to the judge who would not be available until the following day. The authorities refused to honor his A.A.A. bond for bail but said a local man could arrange it. If the New Jersey businessman wanted to pay $85.50—$75 as a fine and court costs of $10.50—he could go on his way.

Taylor refused. He observed that it was the officer's word against his. The officer, however, said he would have witnesses if the case went to court. Moreover, Taylor was told he could be fined $300 or be sentenced to 30 days in jail or to a road gang.

"I realized I was licked," he said. "I paid."

But that was not the end of it. Because of a reciprocity agreement, New Jersey withdrew Taylor's regular driving privileges and issued a "conditional" license which restricted him to driving only his own car. However, when he told Jersey authorities his story, they restored all his privileges.

Taylor's story is only one of hundreds.

A Florida driver claims he was arrested in Georgia while driving at the legal limit and fined $20. When he characterized the proceeding as "a damned outrage," he was dragged to an upper floor and thrown into a cell. Later, he was released by the sheriff and told to get out and "forget it."

Another motorist bitterly criticized the law enforcement methods in Salisbury, Mass. He denied he had violated any law. When his wife asked for information about the charge, an officer told her to "Shut up, or I'll run you in, too." When the motorist paid a $35 fine and asked for a receipt, he was told, "The only receipt you get here is your freedom."

Newark, N. J., Traffic Court is geared for efficient and fair disposition of all cases

Edward Townsend, Elizabeth, N. J., admitted parking in restricted zone, explained he had to make a delivery. Court lectured on necessity of observing law, suspended sentence.

M. Cullen Wilin, of Montclair, N. J. (left), and Jack Eckhaus, of Newark, differed as to who collided with whom. Court told them to produce witnesses, postponed hearing.

Irritated because he left a sick bed to appear while policeman, also sick, did not, J. Berger demanded immediate disposition of his case. It was adjourned two weeks.

After state motor vehicle inspector testified that Gilbert Cant, Lavallette, N. J. had speeded 60 m.p.h., Cant was fined $10. He said he did not get a "fair break."

Vicious "fee" system is condemned

CASES IN WHICH MOTORISTS have been deliberately victimized, as outrageous as they are, are only instances in a system (or lack of it) that has been indicted by bar associations, traffic engineers, jurists, auto clubs, and the motorists themselves.

Among the chief counts in the indictment is one against the overall legal system which is so archaic that a medieval barrister could return to today's courtrooms and feel right at home. The electric lights would surprise him; procedures would not.

The fee-system of paying judges, as it operates in so many courts, is not only as outmoded as the whipping post, but puts a premium on judicial dishonesty. In one Virginia court, the fee of a Justice of the Peace was one dollar if he found the defendant innocent and two dollars if he found him guilty.

Most of the country's 46,000 J.P.'s operate on the fee system. In courts where impartial justice is meted out fees are not generally worth the time the J.P. puts it to earn them. Where the system is abused, justice is corrupted for a profit.

This horse and buggy legal system with its practice of placing the administration of justice on a dollar and cent basis is only one of the glaring faults found by the National Committee on Traffic Law Enforcement after a three-year study.

As a result of a survey of conditions in which police and court officials, motor-vehicle administrators, traffic-court judges and justices of the peace were interrogated, the committee paints a complete but sad looking picture.

In almost all instances, the committee found, traffic cases involving ordinarily law abiding citizens are tried in courts of general jurisdiction where a parking violation is often sandwiched between cases involving assault and larceny.

As Bad as a Day in Jail

MANY OF THE COURTS are disreputable, crowded, undignified and dirty. Guilty or not, an accused motorist is likely to undergo as much physical discomfort in such a court as if he spent a day in jail.

The most detrimental practice in the field of traffic law enforcement is the vicious business of ticket-fixing. In more than half of the courts examined by the committee this practice was not only hampering law enforcement but was seriously undermining respect for the law itself.

The nationwide investigation disclosed some interesting sidelights on justices of the peace.

They are, in most cases, "completely unsupervised, and wholly incompetent for traffic law administration," the committee reports.

No care is used in their selection. Almost anyone can become a J.P. Almost anyone does. Condition of their "courts" vary from poor to disgraceful. Trials are frequently held on roads, in general stores, on farms, in barns and gas stations.

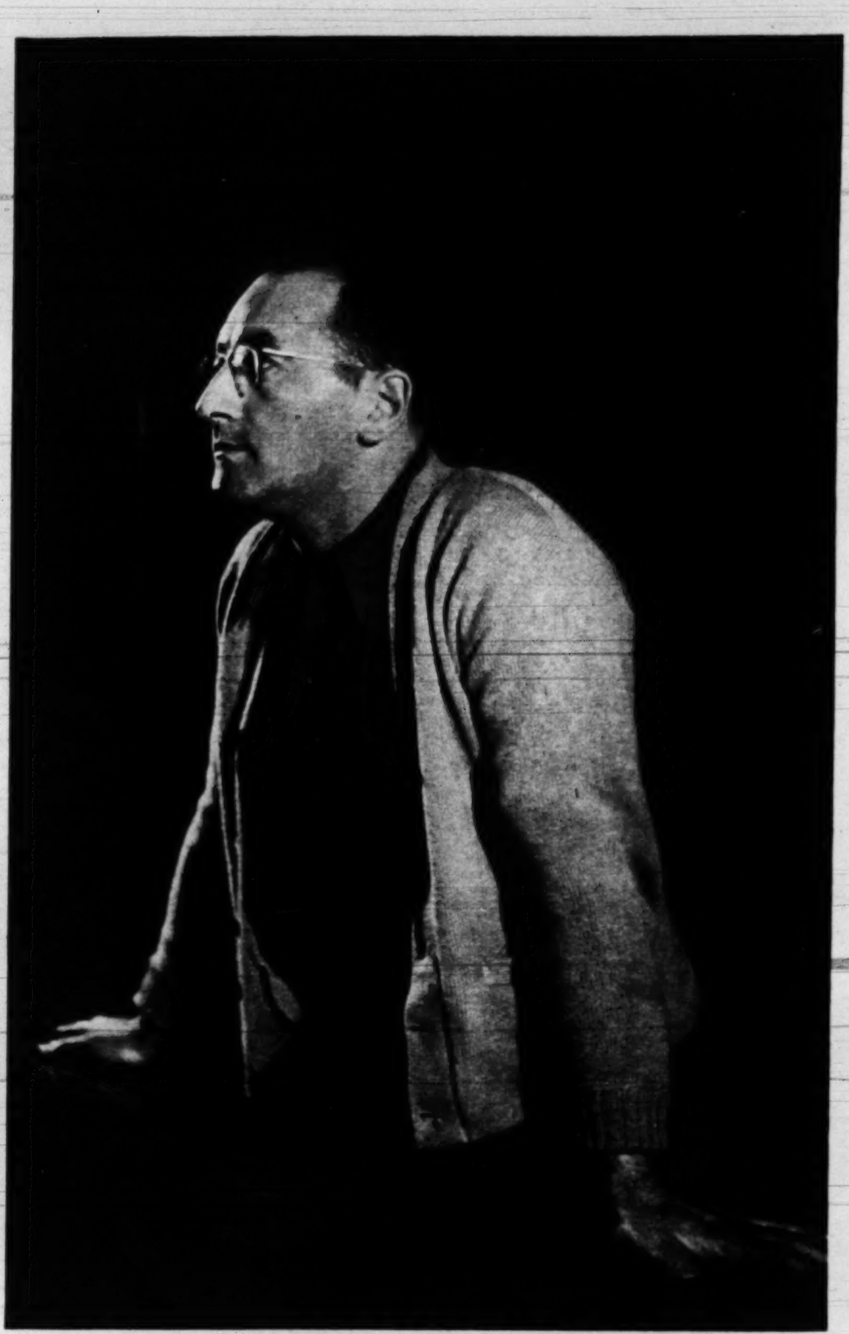
A J.P.'s ignorance of the law he is supposed to enforce can be appalling. Some do not even know what cases come under their jurisdiction. Others haven't even a vague idea about their powers to imprison, or suspend or revoke a driver's license.

The most bristling criticism levelled against them is the fee-system under which most of them work. Reports of big earnings—$4,500 in a single year from one traffic light—are not uncommon. But paradoxically 90 per cent of the J.P.'s dislike the system; they feel it isn't lucrative enough!

Since the motorist is paying in fines and taxes for an adequate court system, and is not getting it, the question arises: what can be done about it?

The National Committee makes a great many

Joseph Stracke, Newark (left), complained that Walter Garth, Orange (right), damaged his car. Garth pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving, paid a five-dollar fine.



Leon Ritz of Newark told the court a neighbor had damaged his car. Witness corroborated his story. Court will send notice to neighbor to appear for a hearing.

Guilty with an explanation—that he had difficulty in making a delivery—cost John Cook, of Bronx, N. Y., a one dollar fine for overtime parking in business area.

After pleading guilty to three charges of illegal parking and paying a total fine of $15, Herbert Zukerberg of Newark admitted, "No doubt about it, I was wrong."

recommendations, ranging from repeal of unnecessary laws to elimination of time-consuming jury trials for minor offenses.

Revise existing law to conform with the "Uniform Vehicle Code," it says. Set up courts to handle traffic cases only. Eliminate court costs, or, if they are to be assessed, at least make them reasonable.

Traffic judges should have thorough knowledge of the traffic laws, policing and engineering. They should not be selected on a local basis where selection on a wider basis can be made. All should be under supervision of a competent higher authority.

For speedy handling of cases, the committee recommends that courts stagger the time of defendants' appearances according to types of charges.

Aim of Court Should Not be to Penalize

SINCE THE PRIMARY AIM of a traffic court should be to encourage law observance rather than to penalize, the committee urges the use of methods other than fines for violators. Some authorities suggest compulsory attendance at "Violators'" Schools. There motorists would learn rules of the road and their responsibility in eliminating accidents which last year took 32,000 lives, accounted for 1,150,000 injuries, of which 100,000 were permanent, and did nearly one billion dollars worth of property damage.

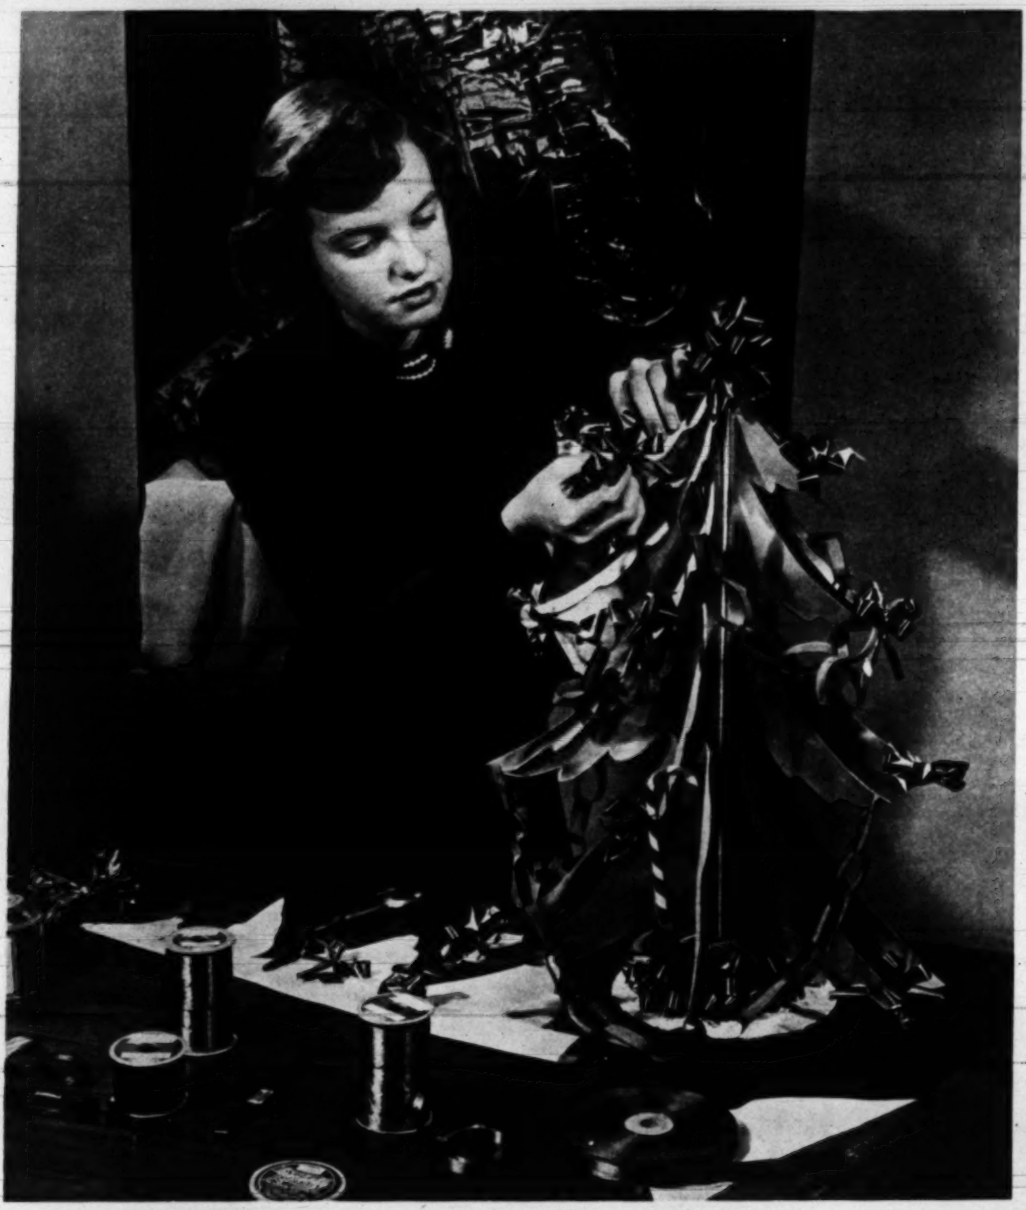
The committee threw the book at the J.P. and fee systems. Abolish both, it says. If retained, minimum qualifications for J.P.'s should be required, and a means of compensating the justices, that would not influence their decisions, should be devised.

Overall, the committee seeks a streamlined traffic-court system geared to modern requirements. That many communities have not got it is the fault of no individual or group. Courts and their procedures are proverbially resistant to change. Motor clubs can do little without the cooperation of leaders of their state bars. Motorists are apathetic.

Except here and there throughout the country, it's a good bet that conditions will remain very much as they are for some time unless all interested parties get together and decide what ought to be done. Civic organizations which are interested in cutting into the annual six billion dollar highway vacation business, the courts and bar associations, the judges, and the motorists themselves, will have to force through whatever changes are to be made.

Among these groups probably the most important single element is the motorist. He outnumbers all the others by far. But so long as he remains disinterested in any case not directly affecting himself, just so long will he be subjected to the conditions he yells about so loudly when he meets them personally.

Newark Traffic Court fines totalled $108,000 last year, are recorded by machine which issues receipts. THE END.



A cardboard Christmas tree covered with gold paper wears ribbon bows on branch tips.

Bows for Christmas

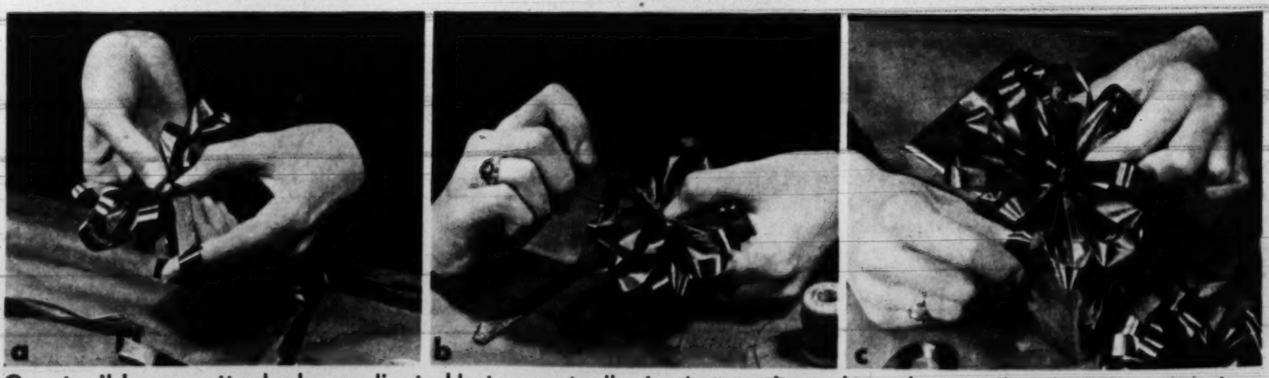
A GOOD SHARE OF THE FUN at Christmas time lies in the wrapping of gifts. With the abundance of gay wrapping papers and ribbons available everywhere, it is easy to turn out packages almost too pretty to open.

According to expert Jean Matthei of Denison's gift-wrapping department, ribbon bows are one of the most effective ways to make a distinctive package. She wraps more than 50 packages a day during the annual holiday season, depends on multi-colored rosettes to enhance each present.

Miss Matthei, who demonstrates below how to make rosettes, suggests that you assemble everything — paper, ribbons, seals, paste, spool wire and scissors—before you start to wrap gifts. Work on a good wide table top. Be neat about the job, paste down corners, trim bows. Avoid wild combinations of patterns and colors. Let good taste rule.

Add an elegant touch to every gift

FOR ROSETTES, loop ribbon in approximately five-inch lengths, holding securely between thumb and forefinger (a); when you have done this about six times or more, cut off ribbon, fasten in center (b) with spool wire or ribbon. Attach to package (c) and fan out loops. Use loops of different colored ribbons for spectacular effect. Be generous, never skimp with trim.



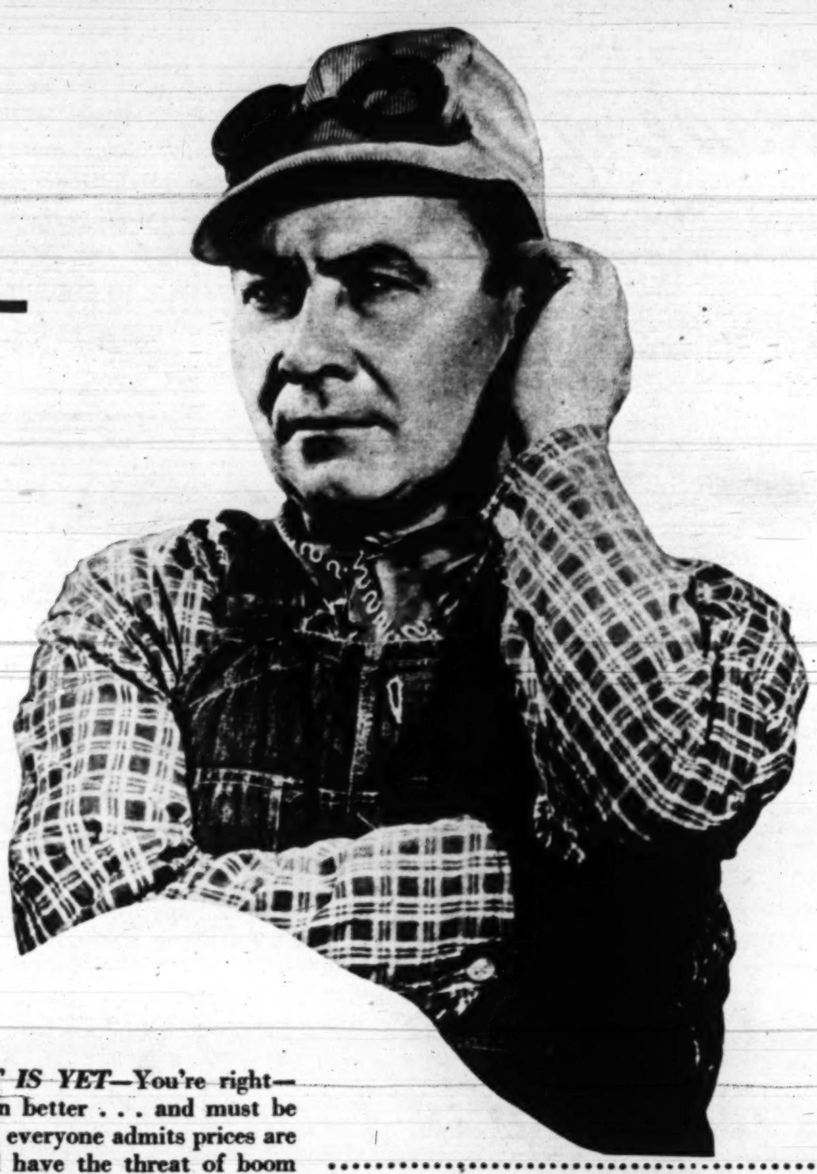
Ornate ribbon rosettes look complicated but are actually simple to make and may be saved and used another time.

"Permanent package," usable again and again, is made by covering empty box with gift-wrap paper, pasting on ribbon trim.

Rosettes and bows in contrasting colors make packages of any size or shape appealing. Beau-Tye ribbon used here is satiny, pliant.

Make your own packages for gifts that come without boxes by wrapping in lengths of corrugated paper, topping with gift paper.

OKAY— but what's in it for me?



"So America's the richest country in the world. So what?

"So Americans produce more than any people on earth. Okay—but what's in it for me?"

At all times, in all ages, nations have had to answer that question—or go out of business.

The average man—the worker, the farmer, the small businessman—is human enough to ask: "What will it do for me—for me and my wife and my kids?"

Let's look at the record—

Here in America we have the best answer in the world to that question.

Machine Power: Since 1910 we have increased our supply of machine power 4½ times.

Production: Since 1910 we have more than doubled the output each of us produces for every hour we work.

Income: Since 1910 we have increased our annual income from less than $2400 per household to about $4000 (in dollars of the same purchasing power), yet

Work Hours: Since 1910 we have cut 18 hours from our average work week—equivalent to two present average workdays.

BUT THE BEST IS YET—You're right—things can be even better . . . and must be better. Right now, everyone admits prices are too high. We still have the threat of boom and bust. Our system has faults, yet it has brought more benefits to more people than any other system ever devised.

We can beat the boom and bust cycle. We can have even better food, better clothing, better wages, better homes, more leisure, more educational and medical facilities.

We can have all this IF we all continue to work together and share together . . . IF we continue to realize that each American's personal standard of living will rise in proportion to how much all Americans produce through better machines, better methods, better teamwork.

And that's about it. What's in it for you depends on what's in it for America.

I want to help

I know that higher wages, lower prices, shorter hours and larger earnings can all result from producing more goods for every hour all of us work.

Therefore, I will ask myself how I can work more effectively every hour I am on the job, whether I am an employee, an employer, a professional man or a farmer.

I will encourage those things which help us produce more and add to everyone's prosperity—things like greater use of mechanical power, better machines, better distribution and better collective bargaining.

I will boost the good things in our set-up, and help to get rid of the bad.

I will try to learn all I can about why it is that Americans have more of the good things of life.

Please send me your free booklet, "The Miracle of America" which explains clearly and simply, how a still better living can be had for all, if we all work together.

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

DRESSED FOR: Skiing

New ski wear is designed to be trim, flattering and functional

EVERYBODY knows that clothes make the man but not everyone is aware that they make the skier, too. What you wear on the skiing slopes can contribute immeasurably to your success and comfort as a wintertime sportsman.

This season's ski clothes are prettier and more practical than ever. Bulkiness has been eliminated and lightweight, weatherproof jackets and trousers come in vivid-hued cottons or gabardines. There is a wealth of handsome greatcoats in which both skiers and spectators may wrap up against chill winds. Many feature big, bold plaids; others are styled in alpaca pile, touched off with gay linings.

For those luxurious after-ski hours, when the lodge fires burn brightly, there are flattering slacks and skirts to spell feminine individuality. Mostly in velveteens, they are worn with clever little weskits of rainbow hues, peasant blouses or smartly tailored shirts.

But knowing the latest fashions in ski wear is not enough, according to Picard of Sun Valley, an outstanding sportswear designer. The successful skier must know how to dress properly. Poorly chosen or carelessly fitted ski clothes will definitely hamper your success when it comes to the slalom or executing a Christie.

Woolen Underwear is a Must

First necessity, says Picard, is long, warm, woolen underwear. It need not be red but that's the favorite color. Then pull on two pairs of socks, one cashmere, the other medium-weight wool. Be sure they're the right size with no wrinkles at toe or heel. Ski pants and snug ski boots are next. A light shirt waist adds another layer over the underwear, and a heavy outer sweater tops that. Last of all, add a weatherproofed windbreaker and two pairs of mittens. If the windbreaker has no hood, a snug knitted helmet or visored cap should be worn. Picard advises against a fussy headpiece. The winds will surely blow it off!

HOW TO DRESS FOR SKIING:

1. Dress in layers of thin clothing which can be peeled or added as the temperature changes.
2. Be sure your clothes are functional, that is, that they are action-free in legs and arms and back.
3. Have your boots fitted carefully. They are the foundation of skiing technique. Poorly fitted boots mean poor ski control.
4. Wear two pairs of gloves—wool underneath and poplin on top, particularly in cold areas.
5. Wear no jewelry unless it is designed for skiing.
6. Have goggles with interchangeable lenses to meet different sun conditions.
7. Protect yourself properly from sun and wind with non-staining creams or oils.
8. Use a belt bag for your accessories—don't stuff the pockets of your ski clothes so that they bulge.
9. Buy your ski clothes for durability as well as style. Skiing is a rugged sport.
10. Concentrate on a slim, streamlined look from head to toe.

Dee Gentner, MBS radio actress and star of "The Thin Man," adjusts her ski pants. They are worn over long underwear and socks, anchored securely under the instep. Pants legs must be taut from thigh to ankle for streamlined look.

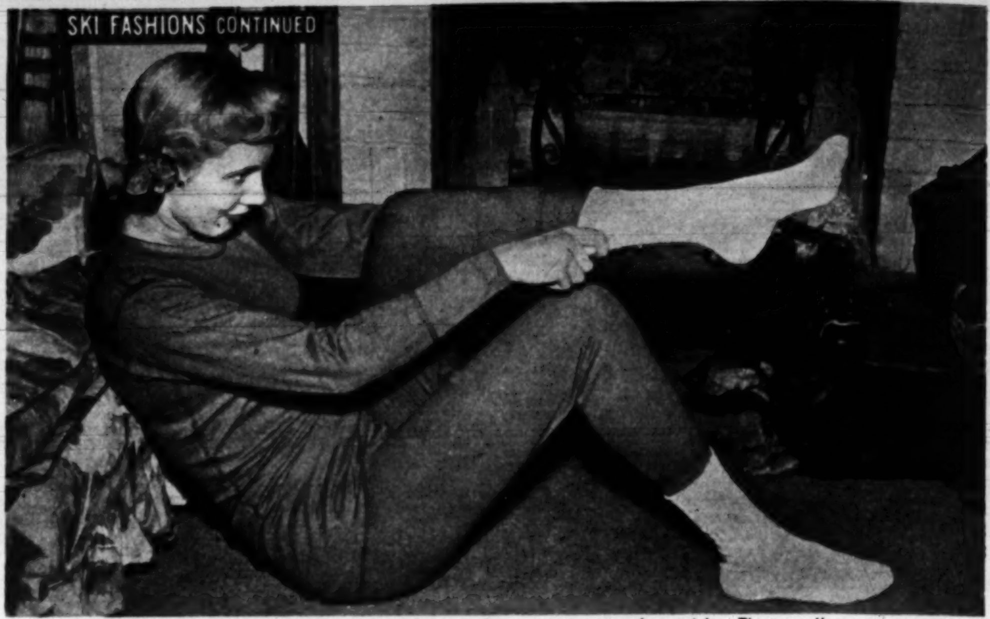
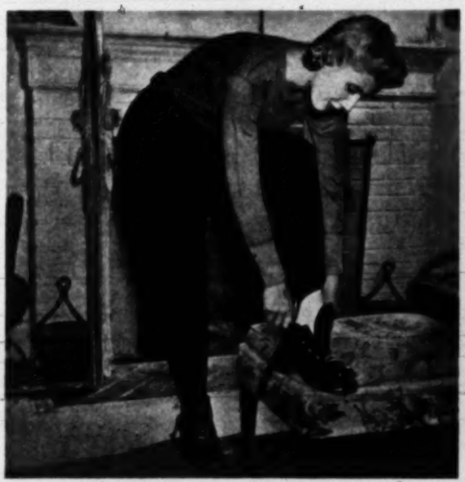
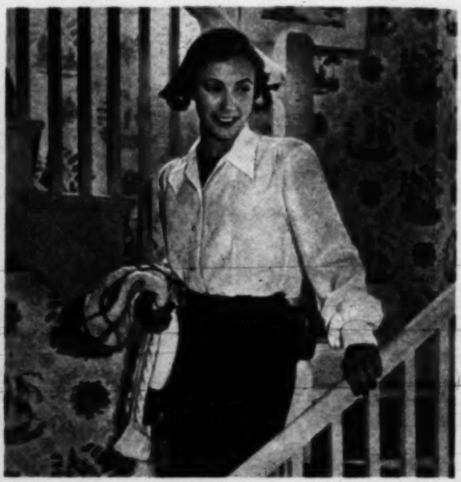
FIRST SPOONFUL STARTS RELIEF



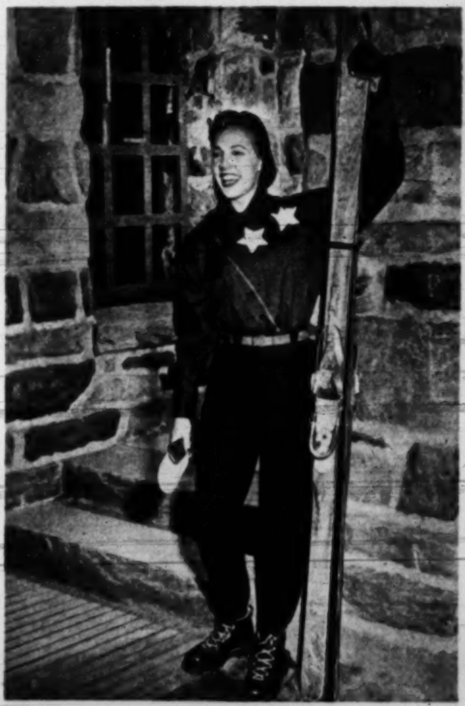
First step in getting dressed for skiing: don long underwear woven of soft cotton on inside, warm wool outside. Then pull on two pairs of socks: under ones of cashmere, top ones, wool.



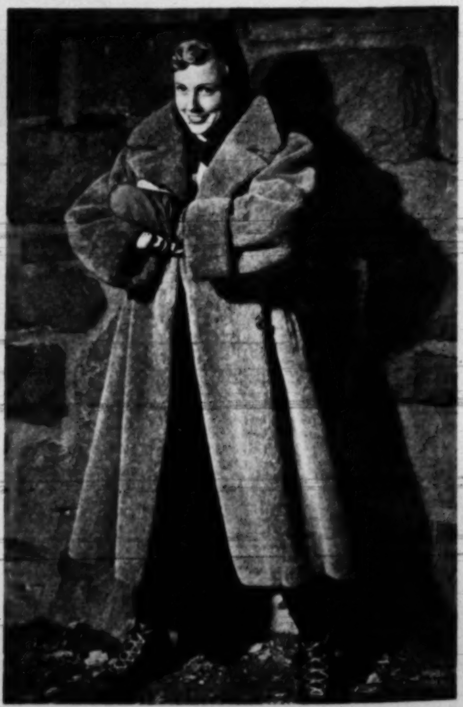
Dee stuffs feet, socks and pants into her ski boots. New boots should feel uncomfortably snug but stretch when wet. Socks should not show.



Over red underwear goes a cotton shirtwaist, with a heavy outer sweater on top of that. Belt bag at her waist holds cosmetics, saves pockets.



Black nylon windbreaker is hooded, has a touch of color in red diagonal zipper, white stars. Final touch: wool gloves and poplin mittens.



After-ski coat to ward off chills is a great coat of gray wool alpaca lined with plaid. United States Olympic stars wore same model. THE END.

HY GARDNER'S . . .

Newsreel

THAT'S THE YULETIDE SPIRIT: The inmate editors of the "London (Ohio) Prison Farmer" have a subtle sense of humor. For the last three months their professional-looking newspaper has carried a running gag: "Just to keep the record straight: It is exactly — days until Christmas. Do your shopping (?) early . . ."

HE KNOWS NOW: President Truman's sense of humor didn't fail him even during the darkest days of the campaign. Tallulah Bankhead, Mr. Truman's foremost soap-box star, was a trifle late meeting her idol before the Madison Square Garden rally a few days before the election. "I'm soh ahwfully sohrry," the actress apologized, "but I was doing some Christmas shopping." "You're a lucky girl," the President sighed, "I wish I knew in October who my friends were going to be in December!" . . .

He wires about the balcony.

FOOTNOTE: Speaking of the President, Jimmy Stewart wires that Harry Truman has become so popular since the election that he'll have to build a second balcony to accomodate the crowds . . . (Incidentally the porch is now official—it's shown on the engraving on the reverse of the new $20 bill.) . . .

OUR FAVORITE AD is one that appeared in a St. Louis matrimonial weekly, simply reading: "HELP WANTED—MALE," signed: "FEMALE" . . .

FIRE PREVENTION DEPT.: The Hotel Utah, in Salt Lake City, slips a little card under every night table that should be copied by all hotels: "The Hotel Utah is Fireproof, but YOU are not. Please don't smoke in bed!" . . .

ADD TO AD HUMOR: The "Washington Post's" columnist, Bill Gold, spied this pip in an Arlington, Va., classified page: "See this 4-bedroom 2-bath English Colonial mansion. Banquet-size dining room, huge living room, ENTRANCE THRU FIREPLACE." Just the thing for Santa Claus, huh???

SMALL FRY HUMOR: Comedian Jackie Miles' wife was surprised when she returned from the movies to discover that her baby sitter wasn't the same person she'd hired. A few minutes later the original sitter breezed in and explained the substitute worked for him at one dollar an hour. "But I only pay you 75 cents an hour," Mrs. Miles said, "how can you afford to lose the 25 cents difference?" "Shhhh," was the whispered reply, "my friend can't tell time!"

NORTHERN HOSPITALITY: A certain hotel owner in the Catskill Mountains has built a substantial following by catering to honeymooners. Whenever they check in at his resort, he celebrates the occasion by having them plant a small tree on the grounds. He then marks the tree with an engraved silver plate bearing their names and the date of their marriage. Naturally, with such a personal interest on the grounds, the couples return year after year to make certain that their trees, like their love, are enduring . . .

A judge or the chair . . .

HE ISN'T FOOLING: "In New York's Hells Kitchen, where I was brought up," comedian Red Buttons asserts, "a kid either grew up to become a judge, or go to the chair!"

SHORT, SHORT STORY: In an East New York tenement house, the six children of one of the tenants got on the nerves of neighbors. The youngsters left skates on the stairs, unscrewed electric bulbs, turned trash baskets upside down and dropped empty beer bottles in baby carriages. Finally, an appeal was made to the landlord, to evict the family. "Perhaps," the former replied "if you all sign a petition and explain why you think we're justified in asking for an eviction, the court will consider our request favorably." The petition was signed and offered to the court. It was turned down when the judge discovered that leading the signers was the woman whose family faced eviction . . .

Christmas Eve
OPEN HOUSE

BY BETH MERRIMAN

Christmas Eve festivities center around open-house hospitality with gala refreshments.

EVERYONE HAS SPECIAL Christmas Eve memories. My own include the fragrance of bayberry candles; friendly lighted windows decorated with wreaths or forming the frame for a beautiful Bethlehem manger scene; carolers standing in the snow; doors swinging wide to admit happy groups of friends and neighbors to traditional open house. That's how it was, and is, in Boston.

Other sections have their own Christmas customs with their special place in memory's book. But East or West, North or South, palm branches or evergreens, cactus or holly, let's have open house on Christmas Eve!

Serve a ruby-red Wassail Bowl, Christmas wreath sandwiches and a beautiful, big fruit cake which we suggest you buy, rather than make. You'll find fruit cakes, handsomely decorated, at your grocers, in useful metal boxes or cake trays with covers. Make the sandwiches ahead of time, cover and store in refrigerator.

Christmas Wassail Bowl

1 #2 can pineapple juice
4 cups cranberry juice cocktail
4 cups sweet cider
2 cups strong tea
Fruited ice block
1 qt. gingerale

Combine pineapple juice, cranberry juice, cider and tea. Just before serving, pour over fruited ice block; add gingerale. Yield: 35 punch cup servings.

Christmas Wreath Sandwiches

Cut bread slices with a doughnut cutter, to resemble wreaths. Save bread scraps for bread pudding and oven-toasted crumbs for future use.

1. Mash canned shrimp; mix with a little mayonnaise; spread; garnish with green pepper bow.
2. Spread bread with cream cheese; top with red and green pepper relish; add a green pepper bow.
3. Add a little Worcestershire sauce to cream cheese; spread; garnish with clusters of capers.
4. Spread bread with cranberry jelly; garnish with citron bow.
5. Combine cream cheese and minced watercress; spread; garnish with a slice of stuffed olive.

For Christmas wreath sandwiches cut sliced bread with a doughnut cutter. Save scraps for other uses.

Gather all materials, then follow an assembly line technique in making open-face wreath sandwiches.

For fruit ice block, arrange fruit in tray, add a little water; freeze; fill tray with water; freeze.

"Children's work is learning, and it is in his play . . . that the child works at his job," observes progressive educator Caroline Pratt.

I Learn from CHILDREN

"AND NOW," said the instructor of a course in kindergarten teaching, "we will all dance like butterflies!"

The class of genteel, dignified young ladies of the '90's got up and obediently fluttered about the room, waving their arms. But this quaint performance touched off a rebellion in the heart of one young woman in the group, a rebellion against the accepted, turn-of-the-century methods of teaching children. Teaching, she found, meant telling children what to do. It was designed to fit the child to the school. No one, apparently, had ever thought of fitting the school to the child.

The young Teachers College student who harbored this revolutionary idea was Caroline Pratt, who was destined to become a pioneer of one of the most dramatic movements in American education—the progressive school. The story of how she put her theories into practice by founding New York's "City and Country School" is told in her book, "I Learn from Children."*

From her own observations, Miss Pratt concluded that "Childhood's work is learning, and it is in his play . . . that the child works at his job." Accordingly, she first called her school the Play School, where the child learned by playing. The term was later dropped, because the children themselves made it clear that they did not consider their schooling merely as play. For a time, the school was moved to camp in summer, and thus was called the City and Country School. That name was retained, although the camp plan later was abandoned.

In 1914, Miss Pratt opened her school with six students, in a small apartment in New York's Greenwich Village.

Her classroom requirements were simple: ample floor space, blocks and toys for play and children using them together. But the real classroom was the outside world itself. Miss Pratt took the children to the pushcart markets, the neighborhood bakery, or to the near-by wharves of the Hudson River. They learned how the food they ate was brought to their tables, how the coal that warmed them was carried from the river barges to the stoves in their homes. Back in the classroom, they rebuilt with playing blocks the world they had seen—houses, bridges, barges, trains, wagons and tugs. This "exercise in thinking" formed the basis of their knowledge. First they learned to do things, then learned the symbols—numbers and letters—representing the things.

The school outgrew its original quarters after the first year. It attracted the attention of educators and parents, and financial aid was forthcoming. In 1921, the school was moved into its present quarters in Greenwich Village. Instead of six students, there are now 190, with a staff of some 20 teachers. The "play" techniques are used to varying degrees in some public schools.

Retired as President Emerita, Miss Pratt, now 81, considers her work a process of learning. She writes: "My education has been given me at the hands of children themselves."

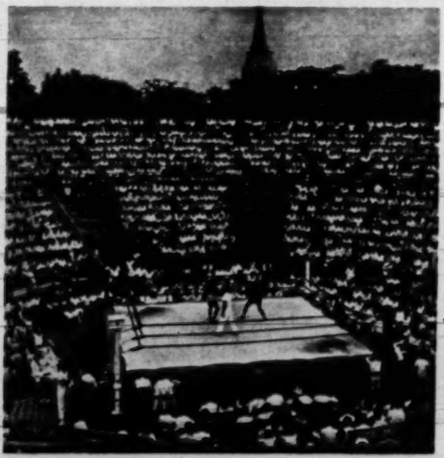
The Marquis of Queensbury rules are unknown in Siam, where boxers may utilize feet, knees and elbows—in addition to fists — whenever they feel like it.



Prize fights in Bangkok are staged in the open air. Note bloodstains in ring corners.

SIAMESE BOXERS

In Bangkok, fight night always begins with a prayer--and ends in near-mayhem

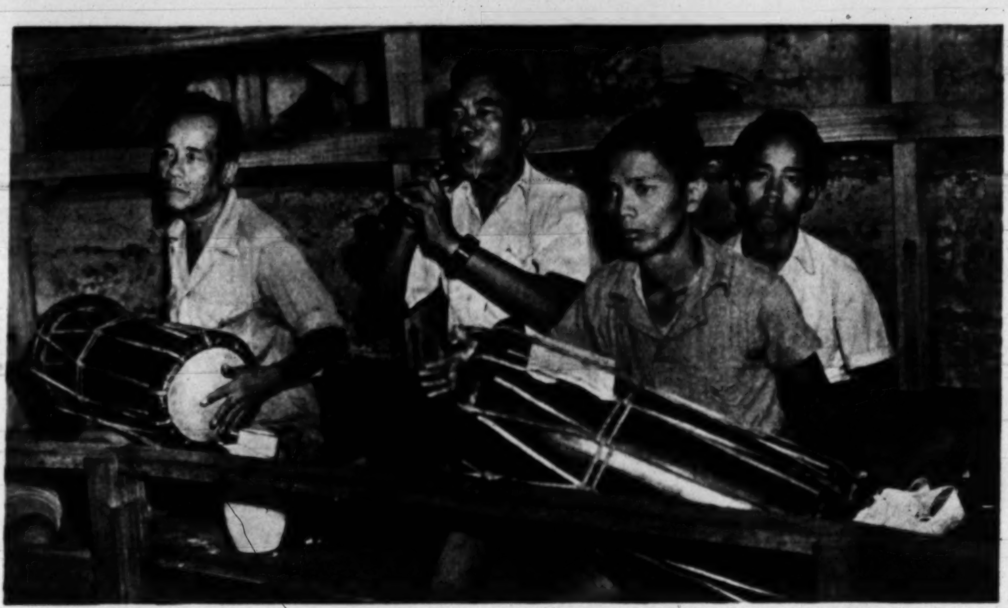
AMERICAN BOXING AND WRESTLING FANS—many of whom consider an evening spent at ringside to be wasted unless large quantities of blood are let upon the canvas—would feel right at home in Siam.

Unlike American fighters, Siamese boxers are permitted to use feet, knees and elbows as legitimate weapons in the ring. This concession has resulted in a sport that somehow combines the rougher elements of a fight, a wrestling match, a street brawl and a pig-sticking.

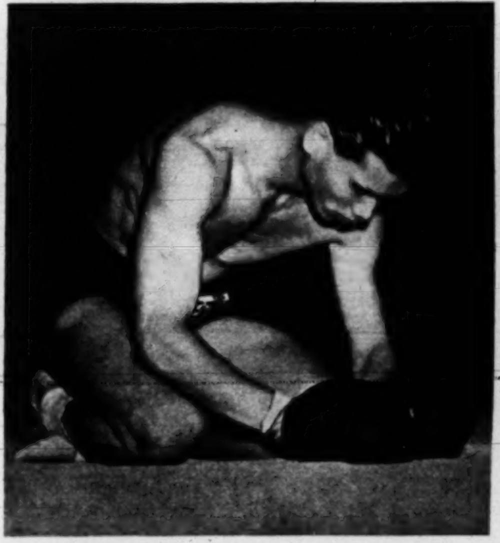
Although the fist is still a recognized tool of ring warfare in Siam, the most punishing blows are customarily applied by foot. Fighters often lead with their feet, then follow through with a right cross, an elbow in the solar plexus or a knee brought smartly to the point of the chin. In close quarters a clever fighter will miss a left hook intentionally, bring his opponent's guard down and conclude his attack with a slicing elbow blow.

Knockouts, in Bangkok, are seldom scored at long range, for Siam boasts no Joe Louis, who can pulverize an opponent with one punch, no Ray Robinson, who can jab and dance his man to death. In Siam, the damage is done in the clinches with a knee, an elbow, or a rabbit-punch.

Between rounds, Siam's fighters are revived by persistent dousings of ice water, vigorous latherings of iodine and liberal use of smelling salts. Fights are stopped only when a boxer has lost too much blood to continue.



Fights are preceded by concerts featuring Siamese drum-beaters, reed-players. Music has religious overtones designed to prepare fighters and fans for elaborate Buddhist prayer session before bouts.



As prayers end, fighters courteously kneel to fans, then each embraces opponent, bows to referee.

Between bouts, fans quench thirst, quell appetites with watery drinks, dried fish bought from booths.

Fighter in white trunks leaped into air, gave opponent a rabbit-punch, legal knee treatment on chin.

Winner is traditionally decorated with flowers, gets purse of about $12. Loser usually gets nothing.

Hollywood correspondents Bob Thomas, Edith Gwynn, and Erskine Johnson speak frankly at PARADE Round Table discussion held in Beverly Hills Hotel.

What's Wrong With the Movies?

Hollywood's correspondents are worried about its new crisis

By ERNEST LA FRANCE and SID ROSS

Photographs by Ben Ross

CONTINUING ITS SERIES of articles on Hollywood and the problems of the motion picture industry, Parade will describe next week how movies and stars are glamorized via magazines, posters, photographs and publicity stunts. Future issues will discuss the special problems of the local theater manager, what industry executives think of Hollywood's future, and new techniques in moviemaking.—Kay Sullivan, Movie Editor, PARADE.

THERE IS A STORY, probably exaggerated, that if you stand at the deserted corner of Hollywood and Vine almost any moonless midnight you will hear a low rumble as of distant thunder while the shades of David Wark Griffith, Rudolph Valentino, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., and other titans who taught the American public to sit in theaters gallop by casting reproachful glances at the city they helped build.

Exaggeration or not, there is undeniably something wrong in the City of Stars. The faces of Big Executives wear worried, built-in frowns. The writers of everything that used to be colossal and stupendous are taking to the rails and showing up at their old haunts in Chicago and New York. Starlets, with suitcases full of glamor pictures and cancelled options, are wending their way back to the old drugstore job in Kansas City. Stars, letting their swimming pools slowly gather mold, are cautiously wearing good luck charms, giving the cook and chauffeur notice, and taking longer looks at scripts of B pictures they once would have dismissed with disdain.

Beset with atrophied foreign markets, the time-bomb of television, and the threat of Federal action that may break up the golden combinations of studios and company-owned theater chains, the movie moguls are lately running into something even more serious—a spreading public rebellion against the movie fare it has been getting.

Few people are in a better position to guess the cause than the 400-odd Hollywood correspondents of newspapers, syndicates and magazines who make a living observing the Hollywood scene for their movie-going readers. Some of them, Hedda Hopper, Sheila Graham, Edith Gwynn, Louella Parsons, Erskine Johnson, Bob Thomas, Sidney Skolsky, and Jimmie Fidler are synonymous with Hollywood.

All keep up a lively correspondence with their readers. All, without movies, would be in the position of war correspondents without wars. As such, they are as concerned as the producers.

To get their opinions, PARADE invited some of them to sit in on its Round Table discussion. Bob Thomas of the Associated Press, Erskine Johnson of NEA, and Edith Gwynn, recently on "the movieman's bible," "The Hollywood Reporter" and now on the Los Angeles "Mirror" and syndicated by National News Service showed up in person. Hedda Hopper and Sheila Graham attended in spirit by answering PARADE's written questions. Whether the experts are right or wrong, only time and moviegoers—including you—can tell.

To start with the $64 question, what makes a movie good, or at least popular? (There is a diamond-encrusted desk waiting in Hollywood for any infallible prophet.) "Fine performances, good stories, lucidly told, and down to earth," says Edith Gwynn, citing such past boomers as "The Best Years of Our Lives" and "Here Comes Mr. Jordan." "Clean, wholesome pictures," replies Hedda Hopper. "A good plot, aided and abetted by good dialogue and a director who knows how to mix his story and his players to their mutual benefit," claims Sheila Graham. "Any drama, comedy, musical, Western or anything else that can hold the audience's attention for eight or ten reels," says Erskine Johnson. For some reason Hollywood is not succeeding in making enough of them these days.

The Movie Public isn't Happy

IN THEIR OFF-DUTY MOMENTS, the Boswells to the stars are apt to be frank. "Most of the letters I get say that too big a percentage of recent Hollywood pictures should never have been made," confesses Sheila Graham. "The reaction of my public has not been good on the present output of pictures," echoes Hedda Hopper. "Except for Walt Disney."

How did Hollywood get off the beam? Erskine Johnson has a good guess. "During the war," he says, "Hollywood could make any kind of picture. It could film the telephone book and people would go to see it. As a result, every studio in town has made pictures it is ashamed of." "I think the general movie public is a lot more hep than Hollywood thinks," says Bob Thomas. "I think perhaps people have realized, and

These are the questions PARADE asked Hollywood's leading correspondents . . .

HOLLYWOOD IS GOING through one of the worst crises in its history. For some reason, people are not going to movies, creating a scare in moviedom just short of panic. Eagle-Lion closed up during the fall except for a skeleton crew. Warners, one of the giants, is reported to have had to fire 1,000 workers. The Screen Actors Guild, with a membership of 8,000, reported less than 400 under contract. These are the questions all Hollywood is asking. You, like the correspondents, have the answers.

1. What, in your own opinion, constitutes a good movie. What type should be given more emphasis. What type thrown out?

2. What has been the reaction of your reading public regarding the quality of recent Hollywood films? What have they liked? What have they criticized?

3. Do you think that foreign pictures present a threat to the American film industry? If so, in what specific way?

4. Do you believe that foreign films will tend to raise the level of the type of pictures that Hollywood produces? How?

5. Do you think that the present American movie "star system" (billing and emphasis on stars) is a healthy or a dangerous practice? Give reasons.

6. Will television keep people away from the movies and have an adverse effect on earnings?

7. There is a great emphasis now on low budget pictures. What effect will low budgets have on the quality of pictures?

8. Do you think, as has often been charged, that Hollywood underestimates the intelligence of the average American movie goer? Does it keep people away?

These questions may offer clues to Hollywood's full-scale audience revolt.

some of us have reminded them, that the quality of pictures has fallen down a great deal since the lush war years, and I think they resent paying out what are to some inflated prices to see pictures which have no entertainment value, and have no novelty."

Hollywood's weak-kneed policy of playing follow-the-leader has led it to go around in circles, or what it calls "cycles." "If," accuses Miss Gwynn, "a costume picture made a tremendous success tomorrow, every studio in town would probably drop all modern movies for no reason on earth, until the public became satiated." "The public likes the first of a cycle of pictures," says Erskine Johnson, "but after being fed five or six of the same type, they criticize. A cycle of about 30 pictures of the same type is too much." The crime and gangster cycle has been overdone to the point of becoming dangerous. To a certain degree, so has the "psychological" cycle. If Hollywood is going to keep up its cycles, thinks the Round Table, it had better have one devoted to good, well-written, well-staffed comedies or down-to-earth Americana without too much message. "Messages," opines Miss Hopper, "are for Western Union."

Television and imported pictures do not seem, in the opinion of the critics, responsible for Hollywood's plight. (Hollywood gets goose pimples at the thought that they might eventually join forces.) Thus far, there is not much of either. Movies like "Hamlet" are a challenge, according to Miss Hopper; a stimulus to better work, according to Bob Thomas. As long as America likes to laugh more than it likes to cry, thinks Edith Gwynn, Hollywood is safe. "Gloomy" and highbrow pictures usually flop.

In parts of the East, television is muscling in on the silver screen but the threat is still largely imaginary. Erskine Johnson tells a story currently haunting the studios: A man went into a New York bank to borrow $300 to buy a television set. "How are you going to save to pay back the $300," asked the banker. "We talked it over at home," explained the man, "and the whole family agreed to give up movies." "It's a sad story," says Miss Gwynn.

"Television," says Miss Hopper with a good deal of awe, "at present is new and far from perfect, but I believe when it is perfected it will do to movies what sound did to silent pictures."

Hollywood may be suffering from prematurely cold feet. "The same production brains," says Miss Gwynn, "the same amount of money and more, the same fine performances, the same fine thought in writing goes into movies as before. The quality is there. It is the type of thing they put the combined quality into that is keeping so many people away from theaters."

Sheila Graham and Hedda Hopper, unable to attend Round Table, sent in written answers. Both think Hollywood can do more to improve movies. Former wants sounder stories, latter "wholesome" pictures.

Bob Thomas of AP is on friendly terms with stars Nancy Guild and Peter Lawford. In private, he thinks the star system has been overworked and is a danger but admits "It's difficult to sell a picture that has no star at all. People go to theaters for entertainment. We call it escapism. They want to see perhaps an ideal. If people wanted to see the mirror of life as it actually is, they would stay home and look at the mirror." It may be a clue.

Edith Gwynn, called one of best columnists in Hollywood by Winchell, urges sounder plots, better told and acted. Examples are "Sitting Pretty," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "The Farmer's Daughter," "The Best Years of Our Lives."

Erskine Johnson of NEA, who has millions of readers, goes over "rushes" of new films, decries endless cycles of gangster pictures unfit for family trade, suggests adoption of classification system to suit films to tastes.

Revised star system, simpler pictures and higher quality may be movies' answer

IF HOLLYWOOD is to survive its doldrums, it will have to revise some of its oldest institutions, say its top correspondents. Oldest of all, and probably responsible for some of its troubles is the much-lambasted star system which has often led Hollywood into believing that a familiar face is full substitute for an interesting plot.

The critics PARADE interviewed think it is due for changes—if possible. "The American star system will always be with us," says Miss Hopper. "If a writer, producer, or director could sell pictures, their names would be on the marquees instead of the stars. I don't say it's a healthy practice, but it's a fact." Bob Thomas, admitting it is a fact, thinks that Hollywood can make it a healthier thing and lessen its danger. "I think that some of the studio contract lists have become ingrown," he says. "The public is tired of seeing the same stars together over and over again. Teams I would like to see broken up include Tyrone Power and Gene Tierney, Van Johnson and June Allyson, Pidgeon and Garson . . . I think the star system has been dangerous, or at least insidious in one respect: that it sometimes discourages the discovery of new talent." "American producers have to pay so much for a 'name' actor," says Sheila Graham, "that they can't afford to pay anything for anyone else. The result—a picture top heavy with one personality not necessarily a good actor or actress."

Movies may have to be made with lower budgets. The critics think it can be done. Among serious pictures, Erskine Johnson points to "The Search." "I understand it cost about $350,000. If we are going to have an economy wave in Hollywood, that is the type of motion picture we will have to produce. Producers will have to use natural backgrounds; they will have to use unknown players. It is possible to make movies without spending a fortune; such as 20th Century-Fox did on 'Forever Amber,' which cost probably four or five million dollars."

Good Story and Good Performances

"ALL PRODUCERS NEED is a good story and good performances well put together, and they will have a great picture no matter how much they spend on it," says Edith Gwynn. "It isn't necessary to have a lineup of 180 chorus girls in a musical when 80 will do. The shining example of that is 'Cover Girl,' which I consider the finest musical ever made. It was produced like a fine stage show. You don't have to spread a stage effect out for a mile and a half."

"I think good pictures can be made on small budgets," says Hedda Hopper. "Proof of this is 'The Dude Goes West,' a screamingly funny satire on westerns, which cost $375,000. Contrast the success of this picture with that of 'Arch of Triumph' which cost millions." "Low budget pictures," thinks Sheila Graham, "should not be synonymous with low quality." Bob Thomas, citing "The Fuller Brush Man," produced for $800,000 as a low-cost picture that has managed to hit current public tastes, claims that Hollywood can adjust itself if it tries to.

Hollywood's chief dilemma—gauging the mental level of its audience, remains a dilemma. "I think the public should be taught insidiously to like higher type pictures," thinks Sheila Graham, "but let's face it—they go for the Grables, the Turners and Abbott & Costello. It's like asking which comes first, the chicken or the egg. Should producers elevate the public taste, or should the public taste elevate the pictures?" Erskine Johnson thinks the producers have themselves to blame. "All over Hollywood you hear stories of producers telling writers, 'Now, remember, we have to keep this down to the level of the 12-year-old mind. That is the mind we are selling motion pictures to.' According to surveys taken by both the Johnston office and fan magazines, the average age of the motion picture audience is between the ages of about 12 and 35. According to a survey that the Johnston office made about five years ago, there are approximately 53,000,000 people in the United States past the age of 35 who do not go to motion pictures. Producers scream that because of the loss of the foreign market they are not making money. I claim that if they made motion pictures with adult themes, these 53,000,000 people who don't go to motion pictures because they are too juvenile would start going." If he is right, it is up to Hollywood to do something. "Nothing," says Sheila Graham, "ever kept people away from good ones." THE END.

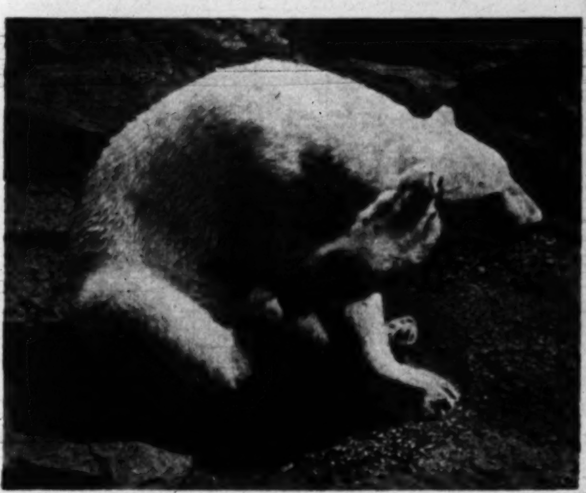
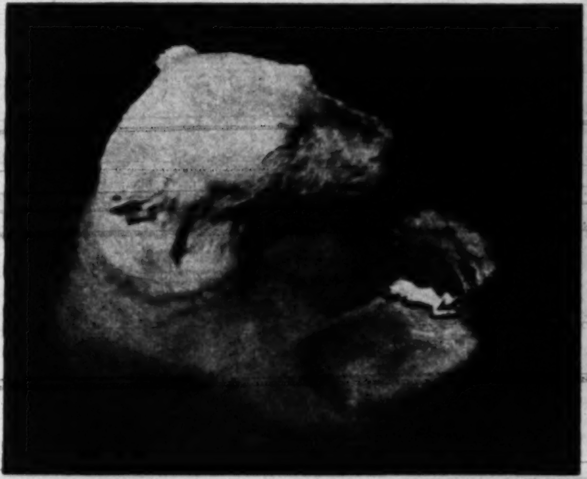
Other bears hibernate, but Mr. Polar welcomes the winter



While most other bears at New York's Bronx Zoo hibernate in winter months, the arctic polar bear comes into his own.

With youngsters peering at them through iron gratings, these bears may be thinking of the icy floes "up north."



At a time when most humans have put their bathing suits away for the winter, the polar bear enjoys his icy pool.

One of the few who enjoyed the endless snowfalls of last winter, Mr. Polar Bear considers it the good old wintertime only if the thermometer drops below freezing point.

A Polar Bear's Plight

Because of his fur, he enjoys the cold

REMEMBER HOW SORRY you felt for Mr. and Mrs. Polar Bear when you saw them at the zoo last summer? Poor creatures, you thought, forced to wear their fur coats through all that stifling heat. Well, with winter just two days off, the polar bears rejoice at the prospects of approaching blizzards and temperatures nearing zero. For them it means good old wintertime—romping in the snow and frolicking in pools filled with ice. Oh well, everything is relative, indeed. Brrr! Quick Mom, the furs!

HERE COMES A TRUCK!
IT'S SWELL OF YOU TO GIVE US A LIFT TO NASHVILLE. I'D LIKE TO GO DIRECTLY TO A STORE. I NEED A PAIR OF TROUSERS.
THAT SURE MUSTA BEEN SOME FRACAS, MR. PALOOKA. THOSE TWO FAM'LIES UP THEAH BEEN FEUDIN' FO' YEAHS.
MOVING VAN
I TALKED TO A.J. IN HOLLYWOOD. HE'S BEEN GOIN' NUTS. TH' PAPERS AN' RADIO BEEN HEADLININ' OUR DISAPPEARANCE. THEY BEEN SEARCHIN' FER TH' REMAINS...
THESE SLACKS IN A 32
CAN I HAVE AN AUTOGRAPH FOR MY SISTER'S COUSIN'S BOY, MR. PALOOKA?
HE HOLLERED THAT TH' PLANE COST 250,000 BUCKS, TH' EQUIPMENT COST $50,000 MORE AN' TH' LOSS ON STUDIO OVERHEAD... SALARIES...
WHERE ARE THE REST OF THE CROWD?
A.J. SCREAMED HE WANTED T'SEE TH' FILM RIGHT AWAY... TH' GANG WENT TO TH' AIRPORT. I TOLD 'EM WE'D MEET 'EM IN A HALF HOUR.
WE'D BETTER HURRY, THANK YOU.
THANK YOU, CHAMP.
THE PLANE ARRIVES SEVERAL HOURS LATER AT LOS ANGELES.
HERE THEY COME, A.J.
$200,000 — $50,000
$7000
$10,000
COME ON, COME ON! GET THAT FILM TO THE LAB. YA BEEN DRIVIN' ME NUTS!!! C'MON!
WAIT TILL YOU SEE IT, A.J. THIS WILL BE THE GREATEST PICTURE OF THE CENTURY.
HURRY UP. HURRY... DEVELOP IT RIGHT AWAY...
RIGHT, A.J.
LABORATO

$25000
200,000
$17,000
NOTHING ON THE FILM... IT'S ALL LIGHT-STRUCK!
WHAT!
GOOD HEAVENS, THE CAMERA MUST HAVE BEEN PIERCED BY BULLETS!
$9,472.20
$200,000
$7000.50
$50,000
HE SHOULD HAVE STAYED UNCONSCIOUS! HE'LL HAVE A STROKE.
LISSEN! YOU GO BACK THERE AN' SHOOT THAT HILLBILLY SEQUENCE AGAIN! GET THE CREW T'GETHER... NOW!!
THE CAMERA-MAN SAID HE'D RATHER BE BACK SHOOTING THE FIGHTING ON GUADALCANAL AGAIN. HE SAYS THAT WAS A PICNIC COMPARED TO THOSE HILL-BILLIES
AS FOR THE REST OF 'EM... THEY SAID THEY'D QUIT BEFORE THEY'D GO BACK.
THE ONLY ONE WHO'S WILLING OUTSIDE OF PALOOKA IS THAT AUBREY BABE.
OHHH... WHY DID I EVER MARRY INTO PITCHER BIZNESS? OHHH...
POOR A.J. I'M REALLY SORRY FOR HIM.
HE'LL RECOVER! WE'LL START THE NEXT SEQUENCE TOMORROW. BE ON THE SET AT 7:30
NOTHIN' DOIN'. I'LL BE OUT DANCIN' TILL FOUR A.M. I JIST MADE A DATE WITH YVONNE YVONNE!

WELL, REX, WHAT DID YOU FIND OUT IN YOUR EXAMINATION OF MISS FORREST?
I DIDN'T FIND ANYTHING THAT IS EVEN SUGGESTIVE OF ORGANIC PATHOLOGY, PAUL!
BUT THOSE HEADACHES... AND THAT FAINTING SPELL...!
LISTEN, PAUL, I DON'T BELIEVE SHE HAS HEADACHES AND AS FOR THAT FAINTING SPELL... I THINK IT WAS FEIGNED!
HOW CAN YOU SAY THAT WHEN YOU DIDN'T EVEN SEE HER WHEN IT HAPPENED?
THE WHOLE PICTURE... EVEN THE SLEEPING TABLET EPISODE THAT BROUGHT HER TO THE HOSPITAL... LOOKS LIKE A FAKE TO ME!
YOU... SALLY... EVERYBODY IS PREJUDICED AGAINST MAPLE!
PAUL, I'VE NOTHING AGAINST MISS FORREST! I THINK SHE'S A NICE KID, BASICALLY... BUT I DO KNOW SHE'S IN GOOD PHYSICAL HEALTH AND IS FAKING HER SYMPTOMS! FOR WHAT REASON, I DON'T KNOW!
OKAY, REX! SORRY IF I SEEMED ABRUPT! BUT I'M CONVINCED THAT SHE IS PERFECTLY HONEST... AND MISUNDERSTOOD!
WELL, DON'T SPEND TOO MUCH TIME ON HER CASE! YOU'VE BEEN NEGLECTING SALLY EVER SINCE MAPLE CAME TO THE HOSPITAL!
AS A NURSE, SALLY SHOULD UNDERSTAND I HAVE RESPONSIBILITIES TO MY PATIENTS! IF SHE CAN'T ACCEPT THAT... WE MIGHT JUST AS WELL FORGET... EVERYTHING!
TED, COME IN! WHAT'S THE NEWS?
ALL THE NEWS IS GOOD, MAPLE! EVERYTHING IS WORKING OUT AS WE PLANNED IT! HAVEN'T YOU SEEN THE PAPERS?
THE AGENCY HAS BEEN GETTING GOBS OF WIRES WISHING YOU A SPEEDY RECOVERY! EVEN MR. WOOD, THE SPONSOR OF "MODEL WIFE," IS IN A SWEAT ABOUT YOUR ILLNESS! AFRAID IT MIGHT INTERFERE WITH THE START OF HIS SHOW!
HOPE YOU TOLD HIM I'D BE READY FOR IT!
SAY, I PRACTICALLY HAD HIM IN TEARS WHEN I EXPLAINED HOW YOU WERE STRUGGLING TO GET WELL ... JUST SO YOU COULD DIE FOR DEAR OLD "WOODIE'S GOODIE BABY FOODIE"!
EXCUSE US, MISS FORREST! WE HAVE SEVERAL BOUQUETS FOR YOU!
THEY'RE LOVELY! LET ME SEE THE CARDS!
BRADLEY & EDGINGTON
THERE'S ONLY ONE CARD WITH ALL OF THEM!

MERRY CHRISTMAS
Y'KNOW, TERRY, MAYOR CHUM BEDS DOWN US NON-PAYING GUESTS IN STYLE ...OF COURSE, VALENTINE AND PINKNEY MIGHT NOT LIKE THE DIGGINGS HE POPPED THEM INTO AT THE TOWN BASTILLE...
THEY'LL LIKE EVEN LESS FACING IN COURT THE EVIDENCE IN THOSE DOCUMENTS VALENTINE HAD.
HO, HUM! GUESS I'LL CLOCK SACK TIME...'S FUNNY! NO SNORES FROM CHOPS. THOUGHT HE WENT TO BED EARLY.
PROBABLY TUCKERED OUT FROM TICKTACKTOEING WITH CHUM FUN.
THOSE TWO GOT CHUMMY FAST. ACT SORT OF STRANGE, TOO — ALMOST THINK THEY WERE HATCHING SOME SORT OF PLOT...
MEANWHILE, SOME DISTANCE OUTSIDE THE CITY WALLS.
HA! GAGS! IF I HADN'T SEEN YOU LIFT THAT LETTER I'D BE KNEE-HIGH IN FEATHER BEDS INSTEAD OF CRAWLING AROUND IN THESE FLEA-BITTEN RAGS.
PIPE DOWN, FATTY! YOU WANTED IN ON THIS DEAL, DIDN'T YOU?
A FEW SECONDS LATER, AT THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE REBEL COLUMN BESIEGING THE CITY.
COMRADE COMMANDER! HERE ARE TWO WHO CLAIM THEY COME FROM INSIDE TOWN.
BRING THEM BEFORE ME.
UGH! A FINE PAIR OF UNWASHED BEGGARS! WHY HAVE YOU CREPT FROM YOUR CELLARS ON SUCH A NIGHT?
COMRADE! WE ARE THE WELCOME COMMITTEE FROM YOUR UNDERGROUND ALLIES INSIDE THE WALLS.
SO? YOU CARRY CREDENTIALS, OF COURSE?
OF COURSE, COMRADE! A LETTER FROM COMRADE VALENTINE, HIMSELF, NO LESS!
IT'S FROM VALENTINE, ALL RIGHT. HAS HIS PRIVATE CODE IDENTIFICATION... HMMM! THAT SENTIMENTAL FOOL OF A MAYOR GIVES IN... DEFENSES AT THE NARROW ROAD INTO THE CITY ON THE LEFT FLANK ARE WITHDRAWN, AS PER OUR ORDERS — EXCELLENT!
NOW, TELL ME, COMR....
THEY'RE GONE!

FATHER, YOU ANGEL, THAT'S MY CHRISTMAS PRESENT! I JUST KNOW IT IS. I MEAN, ISN'T IT?
AHEM, COULD BE.
WHAT IS IT, FATHER? HOW HEAVY IS IT? DOES IT RATTLE IF YOU SHAKE IT?
I WOULDN'T KNOW.
WHAT IS IT? IS IT A LAPIN EVENING JACKET? IS IT A SEQUINS PARTY DRESS? FATHER, TELL ME!
NO, DON'T TELL ME. I WOULDN'T LISTEN IF YOU TRIED. IT WOULD SPOIL SIMPLY EVERYTHING.
OKAY.
IS IT A RADIO FOR MY BEDROOM? IF I GUESS, WILL YOU TELL ME? ANIMAL, VEGETABLE OR MINERAL? LET'S SWAP, I'LL TELL YOU WHAT I GOT FOR YOU.
BUT YOU DON'T WANT TO KNOW.
YOU DON'T HAVE TO TELL ME, I KNOW WHAT IT IS. IT'S A WRISTWATCH. I REMEMBER THE TIME YOU GAVE MOTHER A WRISTWATCH-----
DEC-19-'48
AND YOU HAD IT WRAPPED IN DOZENS OF BOXES, ONE INSIDE THE OTHER. SO I HAVEN'T THE LEAST BIT OF INTEREST IN HAVING YOU TELL ME.

SCRAM, JUNIOR! WHAT DO YOU MEAN HORNING IN AT A TIME LIKE THIS?
LOOK, CHUM! I'M WARNING YOU. SIS IS COMING TO A SLOW BOIL—AND YOU'D BETTER DO SOMETHING BEFORE THE LID BLOWS OFF!
OKAY, MYSTERY BOY. WHAT DO YOU KNOW THAT I DON'T?
I KNOW HOW SIS FEELS ABOUT BAD BREATH! BELIEVE ME, JOE, YOU OUGHT TO SEE YOUR DENTIST BEFORE YOU TRY THAT KISS ROUTINE ON JANE!
JOE SEES HIS DENTIST!
COLGATE DENTAL CREAM DOES A SUPER JOB OF POLISHING TEETH, TOO! AND HOW I GO FOR COLGATE'S GRAND WAKE-UP FLAVOR!
LATER—THANKS TO COLGATE DENTAL CREAM
NOW SIS SNUGGLES UP TO JOE—EVEN WITHOUT MISTLETOE!
IT CLEANS YOUR BREATH WHILE IT CLEANS YOUR TEETH!
COLGATE RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

WHERE ARE YOU GOING WITH FIDO AND THAT AXE, PHILIP?
I'M GOING TO GET OUR CHRISTMAS TREE! I SPOTTED A BEAUTY UP NEAR PURDY'S FARM —THE LAST TIME I WAS UP THERE!
NOW JUST A MINUTE, PHILIP! THE LAST TIME YOU TRIED THAT, A FARMER SHOT YOU FULL OF ROCK SALT! WE CAN GET A NICE TREE AT MR. COVINO'S STORE!
WE'RE NOT PAYIN' COVINO FIVE DOLLARS FOR A TREE WHEN I CAN GET ONE FOR NOTHING!
PHILIP— PLEASE BE REASONABLE! EVERY TIME YOU DO ANYTHING LIKE THIS, YOU ALWAYS HAVE CAUSE TO REGRET IT!
OH, I DO, DO I? WELL, I'M GONNA GET THAT TREE — AND NOTHIN' IS GONNA STOP ME!
WELL, THERE IT IS, FIDO! JUST WAITIN' TO BE TAKEN!
GO AHEAD, FIDO! SEE IF YOU CAN SCARE UP SOMETHING!
ARF! ARF!
KI-YI YI-YI!
HE SHOULD'VE BEEN HOME LONG BEFORE THIS, MICHAEL! I'M AFRAID HE'S HAD AN ACCIDENT —THOSE COUNTRY ROADS UP THERE ARE SO NARROW—
NOW, NOW, MA, STOP WORRYIN'! HE'S PROBABLY JUST TAKING NO CHANCES—AND COMING DOWN VERY SLOW!

BRICK! WHAT A SWELL SURPRISE!
WHAT BROUGHT YOU TO CORAL ISLAND, MISS BRICKER?
IF THAT'S A CUE FOR A COMEDY LINE, THE ANSWER IS, "THE STUDIO LAUNCH!" IF WE'RE PLAYING THE SCENE STRAIGHT, I CAME BECAUSE I WAS SENT!
SENT TO COOK UP SOME NEW SCENES.. OR TO COOK, PERIOD?
ANGEL HAS BEEN COACHING ME ON THE..UH..ROMANTIC SCENES, BRICK! DARN NICE OF HER, I THINK!
TYPICAL OF A GREAT ARTIST, LINK!..CAN'T SEE A NEW PIANO WITHOUT WANTING TO PLAY!
DON'T THINK HE DIDN'T NEED HELP! ONLY A GOOD ACTOR CAN KEEP THE DIALOGUE IN THIS CLINKER FROM SOUNDING LIKE THE MINUTES OF A MORON'S CONVENTION!
MORONS?..YOU'RE SO RIGHT, MISS V! YOU'VE BEEN A FLICK-CHICK A LONG TIME.. SINCE VALENTINO WAS A BIT PLAYER, IN FACT..LONG ENOUGH TO KNOW THAT A FILM WRITER HAS TO TAILOR HIS DIALOGUE TO FIT TYPE CASTING!
MR. STANWOOD! I JUST HAD A CALL FROM THE STUDIO! MISS BRICKER WASN'T ASSIGNED TO THIS UNIT! NOBODY SEEMS TO KNOW HOW SHE GOT ON THE ROSTER FOR TODAY!
WE NEED A WRITER LIKE WE NEED A HACKING COUGH! THE LAUNCH IS JUST LEAVING! SHALL I TELL HER?
LET HER STAY! I THINK WE CAN FIND SOMETHING HELPFUL FOR HER TO DO!

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
Synopsis: AS THEY REMOVE THEIR ARMOR, PRINCE VALIANT TELLS OF HIS SON AND OF HIS HOPE THAT PRINCE ARN WILL ATTEND THE CHRISTENING AND BE GODFATHER.
"WHAT! YOU MARRIED! HAVE YOU FORGOTTEN THE VOW WE MADE SO LONG AGO, WHEN OUR HEARTS WERE BROKEN AND WE KNEW WE COULD NEVER LOVE AGAIN?"
IT HAS BEEN LONG SINCE VAL REMEMBERED THAT VOW. BUT ARN'S WORDS BRING IT ALL RUSHING BACK.
1. . . . THE MAID ILENE, SO YOUNG, SO SWEET AND FAIR.
2. . . AND HER FATHER SHOWING THE MARRIAGE CONTRACT BETROTHING HER TO PRINCE ARN.
3. THE NIGHT OF WILD DESPAIR.
4. AND HOW, IN THE MORN, HE HAD RIDDEN TO CHALLENGE HIS RIVAL....
5. TO BATTLE LUSTILY UNTIL THEY LEARNED THAT RAIDING VIKINGS HAD TAKEN THEIR ILENE!
6. SIDE BY SIDE THEY HAD PLUNGED HEADLONG INTO THE RAIDERS UNTIL VAL'S MOUNT WENT DOWN!
7. "FOR ILENE'S SAKE RIDE FOR HELP," HE HAD CRIED.
8. "THEN TAKE THE CHARMED 'SINGING SWORD,' FOR ONLY BY MIRACLES CAN YOU OUTLIVE THE NEXT HOUR!" ARN HAD SAID.
9. AND WITH IT HE HAD HELD THE BRIDGE OVER DUNDORN GLEN.
10. THEIR QUEST NEVER FALTERED AND THE CHASE LED OVER FAR, WILD SEAS...
11. . . . AND ON FOOT ACROSS STRANGE NORTHERN LANDS.
12. ONLY TO COME AT LAST TO ILENE... TOO LATE, AND UPON HER BIER THEY VOWED NEVER TO LOVE AGAIN!
"BUT ARN, WE WERE SO YOUNG, MERE LADS..... AND I HAD NOT YET SEEN ALETA!" "NO MATTER," SAYS ARN, STERNLY.
HAL FOSTER
THEN SOMETHING IN THE DOORWAY CATCHES VAL'S EYE, SOMETHING THAT MIGHT WELL MAKE A HYPOCRITE OF ARN!
NEXT WEEK: Confusion.

LOOK, SUSIE! PUT YOUR RIGHT HAND BACK HERE! YOU CAN'T GET ANY STEAM IN'EM THAT WAY!
NOW DON'T EVERYBODY TRY TO TELL ME ALL AT ONCE. YOU GET ME ALL MIXED UP!
TURN YOUR LEFT HAND OVER LIKE THIS, SUSIE! SEE? THIS WAY!
DON'T TRY TOO HARD, SUSIE! JUST STIR 'EM UP A LITTLE AND THEN I'LL SHOW YOU HOW TO RUN THE TABLE!
WAIT A MINUTE, SUSIE! LET'S GET A LITTLE CHALK ON THAT CUE!
I WISH I HAD THAT LOVELY GREEN CLOTH FOR A SUIT!
IT'S PARTIES LIKE THIS THAT PUT THE WRECK IN WRECK-REATION ROOMS!
AND BE SURE YOU KEEP ONE FOOT ON THE FLOOR, ARNOLD. I READ THE RULES!
GEE WHITH, MYRTLE! I THTILL THINK I'D RATHER HAVE A PING-PONG TABLE!
AREN'T YOU GOING TO TELL ME WHAT TO DO, SLUG?
NOT FOR NOTHING! I LEARNED THIS GAME THE HARD WAY!
THAT'S BECAUSE YOU NEVER GOT SPANKED WITH A PING-PONG PADDLE!
EITHER YOU LEARN AWFULLY FAST OR ELSE I'M AN AWFULLY GOOD TEACHER!
SUSIE'S JUST NATURALLY SMART! THAT'S WHY SHE MARRIED ME!
YOU'VE GOT TO START REDUCING, ALICE! WE'RE ALWAY'S LATE FOR EVERYTHING!
SHE DIDN'T WAIT FOR THE CHALK!
LIKE THIS?
GOODIE FOR OUR SIDE!
I'LL BET YOUR MOM WILL TRY TO THWITCH HER AFTERNOON BRIDGE CLUB OVER TO THE ELITE POOL PARLOR!
